THE PROGRESS OF CHRISTIANITY.

Jews Accepting the Christ They Once Despised—A Remarkable Letter from Free-Thinking Hebrews.

The interesting article which follows is contributed by the Rev. K. P. Ketcham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. He had intended reading it in full from his pulpit at last Sunday evening's service, but was obliged, for lack of time, merely to present its statement of facts in a very abridged form. Desiring, however, that not only his congregation but also the other Christian people of Plainfield might be able to give it thoughtful attention, and appreciating the value of Plainfield's only daily news paper as a medium unsurpassed for circulation among the public, he announced that he would secure the publication of the article in THE PRESS. The letter to which he referred, and which is given herewith in fulfillment of his promise, is an altogether remarkable one—remarkable for its ability, and for the unusual point of view from which it is projected. Its original publication was in The Brooklyn Eagle, from which Dr. Ketcham clipped it. Here is the article:

FREE-THINKING HEBREWS.

REPLY TO RABBI SPARGER'S FAMOUS LETTER.

To the Editor of The Brooklyn Eagle:

Some few weeks since there appeared in The Eagle a letter from our much esteemed friend and coreligionist, Rabbi Sparger. It was brought to the notice of our Association by one of our members, and it received a great deal of consideration, as did also the answers to it, which appeared in The Eagle subsequently. All the letters, except Rabbi Sparger's, were, apparently, from Christians. Now, if The Eagle will give us a little of its valuable space, we will give the views of a considerable number of liberal-minded Jews—(not orthodox), not Jews who look backward—but men who look at things as they appear at the present time. The first question we considered was, could a fraud or delusion have stood the trials and tests which Christianity has stood, and have held its ground, in every instance, and gone forward with giant strides, till it is now the most liberal and progressive religion that the world has ever seen, a religion adapted to every country and every people on this globe? Other religions are and have been always sectional, each having its own special district or country (Judaism alone excepted); and, although we Jews do not believe the Christians are right, we must, nevertheless, wonder at the rapid progress and the gigantic proportions to which the Christian religion has grown. What would this world have been if the Christian religion had not come into it? Judaism would certainly not have developed into such a grand and sweeping system. We Jews were but a handful of the world's population, and we were always a secluded people, keeping to ourselves and looking at all other nations as inferior, not trying to raise others above paganism, but shunning them and despising them. Christianity, on the other hand, is seeking out every nation and people, converting them and making them better, and we Jews to-day enjoy the greatest benefits in countries where the people live the nearest up to the teachings of their leader, Jesus Christ. Be He a myth or a reality, His teachings, without doubt, improve all who follow them. Then the Christian religion to-day shows no sign of weakness, but is stronger than ever and is gaining in strength, while all the other religions are on the decline, receding before the rapid advance of Christianity. Judaism alone remains immovable, we might say a fossilized monument of God's truth, a religion with a glorious past record, but with little hope for the future. We Jews plod along the well beaten tracks of our forefathers and make no advance. What did all the elaborate ceremonial law given to our forefathers mean? Was it simply a meaningless ceremony to be performed year after year? We think not. It must have certainly pointed to something to come. Then all through the prophets' time what do the prophets mean? We modern Jews are apt to explain the prophets' meaning to suit ourselves and place great reliance on what our rabbis say. But our forefathers did not think so. They either disbelieved the prophets or looked for the fulfillment of the prophets' predictions at some future time, but we Jews of the present day do not look for the fulfillment of anything. Since the time of Christ there has not arisen among us one prophet to oppose Christ as an impostor, which is now over eighteen hundred years. This we cannot but believe to be circumstantial evidence that the law was fulfilled in Christ. Then some of our best authorities, the Targum, applies part of Isaiah LII and all of the fifty-third chapter to the Messiah. So do our Pesekta and our ancient books, the Tanchuma, and Siphre, all of which was fulfilled in Jesus Christ. Then again Josephus speaks of Christ. Although some contend that the passage where he refers directly to Jesus, called the Christ, is spurious, yet we cannot prove that it is not genuine. Tacitus, a little over a century after Christ's birth, and who lived about the time of Josephus, quotes it as true. In another place Josephus speaks of James, the brother of Jesus, who was called Christ. The passage has not been pronounced spurious, so it is safe to accept it as positive evidence that Christ did live on this earth, and was a well-known person in His time. In the year A. D. 64 the Emperor Nero accused the Christians of firing Rome. This was less than forty years after the ascension, or, rather, the so-called ascension, of Christ, and quite a number of Christians were killed at the time. Very likely some of those Christians were Jews who had been converted to Christianity in Judea and had gone to Rome to escape persecution which was raging against the Christians in Judea. Perhaps some of them had seen Christ and spoken with Him. Perhaps some of them had seen some of the miracles reputed to have been done by Him, and if there had been no Christ it is not likely that there would be people ready to die for their belief in a myth at so early a date. The burning of Rome is an undisputed fact, and there must have been quite a number of Christians or they would not have been noticed by the Roman pagans. It is a common thing for us to say that such a person as Jesus Christ did never exist, that He was a myth, only a fable made up by some Greek writer, but what proof can we bring to prove that He did not live on this earth?—while there is very good evidence to prove that He did live and that He came just at the time when the Jewish nation were looking for the promised Messiah. Concerning the death and reputed resurrection of Christ we say nothing. If Christ was God then His death amounted to nothing and His resurrection amounted to nothing, as God could leave His earthly body and again assume it at pleasure. With the light of nearly two thousand years shining on us, simple assertion will not do; we must have proof. Now, we, as honest, free-thinking men, admit that we are in doubt, and if anyone can prove that the Messiah is yet to come, we should very much like to hear from him.

BOROUGH ELECTRIC LIGHTS NEXT MONTH.

On St. Valentine's Day the New Illumination Will Flash Forth.

The Borough Council of North Plainfield held a special meeting last night in a highly commendable, parliamentary way. There was a noticeable absence of the old objectionable lobby, and it was apparent that the satirical criticisms of THE PRESS had induced the Mayor and Councilmen to institute a sweeping reform. Only two matters could under the call receive attention. These were the street lighting problem and the affairs of Borough Magistrate James Hardy.

The question of public lights was settled by the Council adopting a resolution accepting a proposition which was submitted by the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield. This proposition was that the Company should be given till Feb. 14 to complete the construction of its works and to get the apparatus and system ready for actual service. Meanwhile the Borough streets continue to be lighted by the old system of the New York and New Jersey Globe Gas-Light Company, under a special contract for the month at the expense of the Edison people.

It was stated that the electric lights would probably be ready a few days before Feb. 14, and that if so the Borough inhabitants would for two or three nights be treated to the unusual joint illumination of both systems.

Concerning the Borough Magistrate the committee who had been appointed to examine into his method of conducting the Police Department reported that he had turned over to the Borough all the profits due, and that all official omissions, all breaches of duty, for which he had been criticized, had been satisfactorily explained as due to oversight. He presented a report corrected to date, and all the reports were filed.

In the absence of Mayor Place and Clerk Brokaw Councilman Buckle called the meeting to order, Councilman Needham presided, and Borough Counselor Reed acted as clerk. All the Councilmen were present.

Hard Times at Scotch Plains.

[From a PRESS Correspondent.]

SCOTCH PLAINS, N. J., Jan. 20.—Last night we listened to the splendid music produced by the Hotchkin sisters. Upon the dusty, dingy and degraded stage of the noted Excelsior Hall of this village appeared a graceful figure neatly dressed in old-gold plush, who found no little trouble in tuning the necessary instruments to be used in the concert, for the rattle and clatter produced by both old and young as unmuffled boots and shoes met a dirty uncarpeted floor produced a sound resembling the trample of an ordinary cavalry over any old wooden bridge. Time after time did the graceful musician indicate to the rude and rough youths her desire for quietness, but who could secure attention from such ill-breds? To add to the shame of the occasion there were no ushers present to indicate the reserved or unreserved seats, and in fact all seats seemed to be near the north pole region of the wondrous structure. Cold? yes, freezing; but despite all of these discouragements, the concert went on. We congratulate the Hotchkin sisters for their pluck and fine rendering, as well as for beauty, and hope they may be more fortunate than ever again to find lodging in such quarters as these.

The side-walks are in a very bad state at present.

Everybody is complaining of hard times.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S ESCAPADE.

Her Quarrel with Her Mother Over a Love Affair.

Almost the only quarrel which took place between the young Queen Victoria and her mother, the Duchess of Kent, occurred early in the year 1838, and was occasioned by the marked favor shown by the monarch to a younger son of the house of Norfolk. There was even a clandestine correspondence between the two young people, which was disclosed by one of the young cadet's letters finding its way into the hands of the Duchess. There was a scene. Never before had Queen Victoria defied the maternal rule, but on this occasion she roundly declared that, being "the Queen," she would do as she liked, and would not submit to dictation from any of "her subjects," not even her own mother. In despair the Duchess consulted the Duke of Norfolk, who had always had a remarkable influence over the Queen. The venerable Earl Marshal at once threw himself into the breach, and in an interview with the sovereign curtly pointed out that it was precisely because she was Queen that she could not do as she liked as far as matrimonial projects were concerned. Fortunately news of another love affair in which the cadet had been concerned reached the Queen's ears, and she at once broke off all friendship with him. It was said that the indiscreet letters written by the royal maiden were bought back from the youth to whom they were addressed at a good round sum.—Philadelphia Times.

A GREAT FIGHTER.

The Military Career of Prince Rupert of Prague.

Prince Rupert was one of the most extraordinary men of his time, and his name is still a synonym for personal bravery. Born at Prague, December 18, 1619, he was only fourteen years old when he entered the military service, taking part in the siege of Rhynberg with the Prince of Orange. From that time on until a very few years before his death, in 1682, he was almost constantly engaged in warfare, both on land and sea, and the battles in which he took a conspicuous part were innumerable. His bravery was of a kind that made him famous even in those days when courage was a common virtue. In the hottest engagements he was always to be found in the thickest of the fight, recklessly exposing himself to the fiercest assaults of the enemy, but generally escaping without serious injury to himself. He became known as "the boldest attaquer in the world for personal courage," and his services were sought by all the leading sovereigns of Europe. He fought in England, France, Austria, Spain and Holland, and on the sea he met the English, French and Dutch fleets. Rupert was not always victorious, but his successes far outnumbered his reverses. Considering his warlike occupation it seems strange to find that he was a skillful engraver, chemist and inventor. He is generally credited with having been the first to employ the mezzotinto process of engraving.—Chicago Daily News.

THE LAST STRAW.

A Fiddler Who Drew the Line at "Annie Rooney."

There was a little private and select musicale down in the Recorder's Court the other morning after court was over which netted the performer, who was blind, the sum of ten dollars. For several days past the guests in the different hotels have been treated every evening to music by a blind fiddler, who made a living by passing around his hat after he had finished one or two popular selections, such as "Down Went McGinty," "Where Did You Get That Hat?" etc. He lacks a great deal of being a great artist, but from the amount of money that falls into his hat he seems to get there just the same. One night Drury, which is his name, got full to such an extent that he could not navigate. He was arrested and in the morning was up before the recorder. The recorder fined him $10, but on account of his affliction the fine was remitted on condition that he would give the court a few selections. Drury secured his fiddle and in a few minutes the melodious strains of "Fifteen Dollars in My Inside Pocket" and "Way Down in Dixie" were vibrating through the sanctum sanctorum of the recorder. Upon being requested to play "Little Annie Rooney," the blind performer collapsed and the entertainment was concluded.—Augusta Chronicle.

A ROUND-ABOUT WAY.

He Simply Wanted to Borrow a Five-Dollar Bill.

Travers—I want to ask you a question. Suppose that five years from now I should be walking the street clothed literally in rags, wearing a battered old hat, and shoes full of holes. Would you think enough of me then to take me by the hand, buy me a new outfit, give me a bath, put five dollars in my hand and send me away with your blessing?

Dashaway—Why, of course I would. How absurd.

Travers—Then bring the scene a little nearer. Suppose that in four years from now you should meet me as I have described myself, with this exception: that I had on a good hat. Would you still do the square thing?

Dashaway—Why certainly. What—

Travers—Make it still nearer. Call it three years, and say it didn't need a bath. Throw off the blessing and make it two years.

Dashaway (facetiously)—Make it a year with a good pair of shoes, eh? Substitute a new suit and (a great light dawning on him) o-h!

Travers—And if you are a man of your word you let me have that five dollars.—Clothier and Furnisher.

Love's Young Dream.

Little Boy—She said I was bad, and must come over and sit with the girls.

"I like you. Can you stay long?"

"Guess not. I wasn't very bad."

CONVINCED AT LAST.

A Court Episode Which Proves That All Things Are Possible.

"I want a warrant!"

These were the words an excited young man shouted as he rushed into the office of a justice of the peace and paused before the desk whereon the venerable bulwark of the law was reposing his weary feet. If the young man thought to infuse the legal luminary with a portion of his excitement he was disappointed. Justices do not get excited unless they see a chance of losing their fees. This one simply removed the pedal rampart from between his red nose and the excited youth, dropped upon the desk the hands that had been clasped behind his repository of legal lore and eyed the applicant for a warrant with mingled curiosity and doubt.

"What d'ye want a warrent fer?" he finally asked.

"I want to arrest a woman for stealing my sister's dress."

"How old's yer sister?"

"Six years old."

"How d'ye know she stole it?"

"I saw her wear it last night. She'd made it over to fit her, but I knew it in a minute."

"See here, young feller," said the august judge, as he eyed the young man in a threatening way, "don't ye go fer to be a foolin' with the dignity of this yere court. Don't ye suppose I know that a woman can't make over a dress of a six-year-old child to fit her? They ain't goods enough. I hain't been married thirty years without learnin' somethin' about wimmin's fixin's. Now, you go right away from yere before I fine yer five dollars fer contempt of court."

"But it was an opera dress; she was wearing it at the opera last night."

"Oh! Well, that's different. Why didn't ye say so in the first place? Ye kin have the warrent."—Quill, in West Shore.

His Idea of It.

Aunt Furby Lowe—How thin that ty chap looks that 's staying over to the Smiths. They say he just got back from Europe.

Uncle Si Lowe—I should think he would look thin if he's been over there. I stayed at one of them there European hotels in the city t' other day and they charged me two dollars a day, and I didn't get a bite to eat the hull time.—Puck.

AMENITIES OF GUTTER LIFE.

Attractive Garmente.

Visiting Aunty—Why in the world do you buy such mannish-looking clothes? You surely can't think the things pretty.

Aunty—Then why do you get them?

Not to Be Downed.

Carrie (aged six, very indignant)—I'll let you know I've blue blood in my veins, too. My grandfather was one of the pilgrims that came to this country in the ship Sunflower, and landed on Plimpton rock.—Judge.

Convincing His Wife.

"Do you want to buy a dog?"

"No, sir, I do not."

"Thank you—thank you. My wife wants me to sell a favorite dog and buy her a sealskin sacque with the money; but I reckon four hundred and three positive refusals to buy will convince her of her folly."—Munsey's Weekly.

Hostess—No, he's at home. He hasn't been away for months. Why?

"He won't like that," replied Hojack, interrupting, "he always objected to toil of all kinds."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Ontario Center, N. Y.
May 7, 1890.
F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N.Y.:

For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

CHANGED THE WORDING.

A Dramatic Critic Who Was Equal to an Emergency.

"Last night the theater-going portion of our community was treated to a miserable farrago of maudlin melodramic nonsense, written for the purpose of exploiting the notorious bruiser and tough, John Sluggeran, the 'hero' of the 'play.' It is a matter of sincere regret and deep humiliation"—

Here the office boy came in. Said he: "Y'ort to tell de boss to send a feller out to get some news of the wreck on the J. A. & G. Dey say dere won't be no trains run out 'fore nine termorror night. All dem actors has to stay over till den."

The dramatic editor's copy fluttered idly to the floor. He did not pick it up, but began anew, something like this:

"When one considers the brief dramatic training which Mr. John Sluggeran, who delighted our lovers of the histrionic last evening, has received, the marvelous manner in which he acquitted himself of his difficult task," etc. etc.—Indianapolis Journal

She Weakened.

A very pretty young schoolmarm in a public school not a thousand miles from Long Branch saw a mouse run across the class-room floor one day last week. "Scholars," said she, "a mouse is in the room. Do not be frightened." The little girls all tightened their skirts around their legs and the eyes of the little boys glistened with suppressed excitement. "Don't anybody be afrai—," said the young schoolmarm, but—heavens—just then the mouse dashed across the floor toward her, and she made a frantic leap to the top of a bench. The mouse shot out of the door, and in time the trembling teacher descended and taught school again.—N. Y. Sun.

Keeping Before the Public.

Wife—Must you go out to-night?

Husband—Indeed, I must. Important, very important. It won't do to stay around home these days. A man must keep himself before the public, or be forgotten.

Wife—How are you going to keep yourself before the public to-night?

Husband—Easily enough. I'll just look around until I run across some sort of a meeting somewhere or other, and then I'll go in and nominate Chauncey M. Depew for something or other, and my name will be in all the papers to-morrow.—N. Y. Weekly.

Infantile Logic.

"Mamma, if we can't go to Heaven now, can we move to Philadelphia?"

"Why, child! what put that notion into your head?"

"My book here says 'Philadelphia is noted for its cleanliness,' and in another place it says 'Cleanliness is next to godliness.'"—Judge.

Cutting Off Discussion.

Barber—You are getting quite bald, sir. Can't I recommend something for your head?

Mr. Hurry—Why, yes; I'd like my hat as soon as possible.—Puck.

HE "LOOKED OUT."

Molke (in the window)—Oi am.

O'Doyle—Well, then—

—look out!—Puck.

Hadn't Got That Far.

"It's too bad you should have to sell that fine ring," said the jeweler to the discouraged-looking young man. "Couldn't you alter it?"

"No," said the young fellow, dejectedly, "it hasn't reached the altar yet."—Boston Herald.

They Came to Terms.

"Did you and Dennis Dugan come to terms in your dispute?" asked a business man of his janitor.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

RAPID RUNNING.

The High Rate of Speed Attained by Fast Trains.

When railroads were first introduced the engineers, as we call them—or the engine-drivers, as they are called in England—ran their trains almost as they liked, making up time when they had fallen behind, picking up such information as they could as to the state of the track ahead of them, and for the most part plunging ahead with their machines without much more than a surmise whether they should bring up at their destination or at the bottom of some high embankment.

Some of the results of this want of system, says Youth's Companion, would have been amusing if they had not been disastrous. Mr. Laurence Oliphant, an English traveler and author, tells in one of his books a rather grim story of a trip which he made by rail in 1855 from Chicago to New York. Over a part of the distance the train made the extraordinary speed, for that time, of fifty miles an hour, and presently it ran off the track.

Fortunately the cars were imbedded in a soft clay ditch and no one was seriously hurt, and in the midst of the commotion Mr. Oliphant says he heard the engineer thus admonish the switchman whose carelessness had caused the accident:

"Now, Tom, this is the third time you've forgot to set that switch, and the last time there was twenty people went under, and the rest was bruised. So mind what you're about and don't forget that switch again, for if you do I'll tell the boss!"

In the course of time it was found necessary to limit the running of trains to a very strict system, which almost makes the engineer a part of his machine; but even as late as within the past two years races between express trains running between London and Edinburgh have been run, and great interest has been shown in the results of the contests.

In France steam races are not permitted. Instead, an official test of the power, speed and steadiness of locomotives on different lines of the Republic has been made lately and a prize awarded to the winner, locomotive No. 604 of the "Chemin de Fer de l'Est," or Eastern railroad.

In this test several locomotives without any load to pull attained a speed of from seventy-five to eighty-five miles an hour. The locomotive No. 604 just spoken of accomplishes regularly the feat of hauling at full speed the heavy trains of the Swiss express between Rheims and Delle at a single pull, a distance of about two hundred and forty miles.

The engine always arrives after this long haul with steam still on and in perfect running condition.

The maximum speed which French passenger trains are permitted to make is about seventy miles an hour, and this is uncommon.

In England the fastest schedule time is sixty miles an hour, though in some of the "races" seventy-five miles an hour have been made. There are regular freight trains in England which make a speed of from thirty to forty miles an hour.

In Germany the ordinary speed of passenger trains is only about thirty-five to forty miles an hour, and this is probably about the average rate of speed in other European countries.

In the United States the speed of trains varies so much on different railways and in different parts of the country that it is practically impossible to strike an average. Thirty to forty miles an hour is regarded as a very good rate, but a speed of from sixty to seventy-five miles an hour is often attained by fast trains under special circumstances.

A MEXICAN CENTAUR.

The Strange Creature Killed in the Woods of Arkansas.

According to an Arkansas journal Dr. Collins of Little River County, that State, killed a most remarkable quadruped near his place in the spring of 1877. From the time of the war up until the year named, several persons claimed to have frequently seen an animal in the form of a large red deer, with the head and neck of a man. On the day that the animal was killed, Dr. Collins' wife and a negro girl were going along an unused path when they saw the queer creature peering at them through the underbrush. They made haste and informed the doctor what had occurred. He took his gun and started in search of the beast, which he soon overtook and shot. Closer inspection showed that the head, instead of being that of a man, more nearly resembled that of a baboon. Its eyes were large and very prominently set to the sides of its head. A long fringe of brown beard covered the chin and neck. Dr. Collins says that when he came up with the creature and leveled his gun at it it seemed to be aware of its great danger, the large eyes melting into tears as it saw the utter hopelessness of the case. When shot it uttered a heart-rending scream and leaped high in the air, expiring with awful groans which closely resembled those of a man in distress. It is generally believed that the creature was a species of Mexican centaur, a semi-legendary creature of the post-conquest era.

No Medium Like the Newspapes.

The advertising man of a well known New York clothing house says: "We were the first to use the sails of vessels as an advertising medium. Then we got up the 'alphabet puzzle,' and gave away 500,000 puzzles while the craze lasted. Afterward we invented the Waterbury watch idea. We had to do something, because three of our principal competitors had failed, and their stocks were being sold for next to nothing by assignees; so we decided to give a Waterbury watch with every twelve dollars' worth of goods purchased. We advertised the watches 'wound and set.' To wind them fast enough we had to rig up a little machine worked like a sewing machine that would do the winding, and we kept several boys at work winding and setting them. Before we quit we had given away 40,000 of the watches.

"But nothing ever pays us like the ordinary newspaper advertising. The fact is there has come to be in this city a class of advertisement readers just as there is of news readers. They read the advertisements every day, and of course the man who wants to attract them has to get up an advertisement that will do it. The day of standing advertisements in the paper, 'Go to So-and-So's for clothing,' or 'Go to This-and-That's for shoes,' has passed, just as the day for painting signs on rocks and fences or on the sails of boats has passed. You must have something interesting and fresh in every advertisement, and it will be read.

A Place for Talent.

In nearly all regulated lines of industry at present the advertising man is one of the most important adjuncts of a business. And on the the other hand the advertising department of a first class newspaper is not what it used to be, but is instead fast becoming an interesting feature of all enterprising journals. Formerly the prevailing idea among the uninitiated was that the talented, the best, most versatile and most ingenious writers and artists were all employed in the news department. How nearly correct this idea may have been need not be stated, but that such is not the case now may be seen by a perusal of the "ads" of any flourishing paper. The competitions between the merchants and between the papers' agents have become so great that the great wholesale and retail houses of the large cities employ talented men at big salaries to attend to their advertising alone, and the men who want the best positions in the counting rooms of newspapers must combine fine business qualifications with the talent that wins success in the editorial chair.—Yenowine's News.

Advertising Necessary to Success.

The merchant or manufacturer who does not advertise his goods cannot succeed. Of late newspaper advertising has become a distinct trade in itself, and all over the country leading concerns pay fabulous prices for men who are skilful in writing catchy advertisements. In many large cities there are men earning from $3,000 to $10,000 a year to write advertisements. This fact in itself shows advertising pays.

If people interested in this subject will investigate it for themselves they will find that the leading advertisers in The Plain Dealer are the merchants who have the best stores, the best assortments of goods and who sell at the most reasonable prices. Such merchants do a much larger business than merchants who do not advertise; consequently they turn their goods over more quickly and can afford to give better prices. Close buyers appreciate this. What is the moral? He who advertises the most judiciously succeeds the best, and the buyers who seek the best bargains patronize such merchants.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Never Be Commonplace.

"Bring your feet with you and have them fitted to a pair of our common sense shoes," is the way a Pittsburg dealer advertises. It is a good phrase and one which attracts attention. The man who succeeds in advertising in such a way that people read his advertisement is the one who draws trade to his store as sure as a magnet draws a needle to itself. Study up quaint, pithy or witty phrases to head your advertisements, and be not too modest in the space they occupy.—Brockton Shoe.

Regular Publications Best.

No one takes up a regular publication without the expectation of finding something of interest. The simple act of turning the pages is as positive an example of expectation as is the opening of a closet if one is in search of a coat. Hence an announcement in a regular publication has an advantage over any other form of business solicitation—that of meeting the sought for eye at a time that it is in a mood for such greeting.—A. C. Ladd.

Must Have Genius.

The simplest advertisements sometimes require the most care and thought in their construction. To write a column is a matter of time, but to edit it down into a sentence is something more.—Printer's Ink.

MAGIC MIRRORS.

The Strange Survival of a Mediæval Custom.

"We see as in a glass, darkly," says the apostle, but the general persuasion of mankind has long been that we may see, in a glass, quite clearly, persons and objects far removed by time and space, says the London News. In some notes of Mr. Clouston's to Chaucer's "Squire's Tale," published by the Chaucer Society, there is an interesting essay on the magic mirrors which reveal the absent. A belief so common in mediæval times is not likely to have wanted precedents in the ancient world. The speculum is the natural home of the spectre. Mr. Clouston is only able to give one classical instance from Pausanius, who wrote a guide book to ancient Greece. It is the twenty-first chapter of his seventh book, where he says that the Achæans, after making certain fumigations, let down a mirror into the holy well of Demeter; they then looked into the mirror and discerned whether a sick person would live or die. Mr. Clouston says they saw faces, healthy or distempered, in the mirror, a circumstance not mentioned by Thomas Taylor in his old translation. The famous mirror in which Surrey saw fair Geraldine is discredited by Mr. Clouston, who does not rely on the directions given in Reginald Scott's "Discovery of Witchcraft," written in 1584, a classical text with which he does not seem to be acquainted. Any member of the Psychical Society may try the experiment for himself. In the first place he must conciliate his good genius. Then he retires into his closet with a little table and silk carpet and two waxen candles lighted, as also with a crystal triangular stone "about the quantity of an apple." Then, after a prayer, he must sprinkle every thing with his own blood, and utter a magic charm or two, and finally sit down with a Bible in one hand and a crystal in the other. The spirit comes in about a quarter of an hour, but the curious thing is that various pictures first appear in the glass, beginning with a beaten track or road, travelers, a shepherd with sheep, "strange appearances, noises, glances and affrightments, which shows will all at last vanish on the appearance of the Genius." Such things Dr. Dee may have beheld in his crystal, at least if we believe Godwin in his "Lives of the Necromancers," not exactly a contemporary authority. According to Joachim Camerarius, quoted by Mr. Clouston, the spectator must be a young boy, or a person of the purest life. Granvil quotes a case of one Compton, who showed a certain Mr. Hill his wife in a looking-glass. Scott uses the idea in "My Aunt Margaret's Mirror," but the great masters of this art are the modern Egyptians.

Curiously enough, and too late for Mr. Clouston's use, Sir Walter Scott tells a long tale of the Egyptian ink mirror in his diary for October, 1831. He was then in London, where people were talking of the mystery on the evidence of Lord Prudhoe, "whom I know as an honorable man." At Cairo Lord Prudhoe heard of a magician "from the interior of Africa," who gave an instance of his powers. Lord Prudhoe chose a Nubian boy, in whose hand the magician drew a kind of pentacle in ink. Through this, "as if the substance of the hand had been removed," the boy saw what was asked for.

As in Achmas of old, there were first fumigations of incense, then flags and a sultan appeared. These, as in Reginald Scott's account, were mere preliminary apparitions. Then Shakespeare was asked for, and described in accordance with his portraits. Then the brother of one of the English spectators was correctly described; he had lost an arm, and this was mentioned. In Malta Sir Walter made inquiries, and found that Shakespeare (sheikh spar!) originally showed in the complexion of an Arab! On the whole, Sir Walter thought the whole affair an imposture. Six years later, in his Egyptian book, Mr. Lane seemed more credulous. He gives a long account of the affair. The boy first sees a man sweeping, then a procession of flags, then the Sultan; finally he saw and correctly described Lord Nelson: "He has not lost his left arm, it is placed to his breast," where Nelson pinned his empty sleeve. Mr. Lane was puzzled; not so Mrs. Kinglake, who tells in "Eothen" how he asked for Keate, the famed Eton headmaster, who was described as a beautiful girl with golden hair—a very bad shot at some non-existent Kate. Mr. Clouston has found similar rites in Southern India. The Maories of New Zealand characteristically use a drop of blood instead of ink. In Southern India not a man, but monkeys sweep the floor as a preliminary vision. The interesting point in all this farrago is the coincidence of human beliefs. Plainly enough, if any thing is seen at all, it is because the spectator has hypnotized by staring at the little pool of ink, the crystal, or what not, which acts in the same way as the metal disk in hypnotism. He then answers to "suggestions." Anybody can try for himself by staring into his own ink pot, for the fumigations, pentacles and prayers are all mere accidents and ornaments. However, most of us might stare a long time and be none the wiser.

Old Things in New Houses.

Some of the most prized appointments in the newest houses are bits of old houses that have been worn out and torn down. Men about to build fine dwellings may go shopping for colonial fireplace fixtures, old mantels, fan-lights of 1830 to 1840, door-frames, door-knockers and even the doors themselves. Sometimes whole houses are sold by the dealers in these wares. Possibly San Francisco led this fashion, for one of its first and most substantial stone business structures was an English bank in Hong Kong and was shipped to California early in the '50's.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Miss E. Pingston writes: My mother and sister used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic for neuralgia. They are both perfectly well now and never tired praising the Tonic.

Recovered Health and Happiness.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Dec. '89.

I was suffering for 12 years from a nervous disease more or less; tried everything I heard of, spared neither money nor time to get medicines, but none had the desired effect, until Rev. Sept recommended the Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, of which I used but three bottles and completely recovered my health and happiness. I hope others will be benefited by the remedy as much as I was. Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

This remedy has been prepared by the Reverend Pastor Koenig, of Fort Wayne, Ind., for the past ten years, and is now prepared under his direction by the

THE HOUSE IN A ROW

Mr. Mills Gets Very Angry at Speaker Reed.

HE MAKES A CHARGE OF FRAUD.

An Exciting Scene in Which Both Sides Exchange Compliments.

The Closure Rule Before the Senate Again To-Day—Mr. Aldrich Stops a Long Speech on the Elections Bill—Mr. McKinley is Opposed to a Tariff Commission—The Silver Pool Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—One of those legislative cyclones which spring up quickly and rage with intense fury during their continuance, occurred in the House during the the day.

The reading of the journal had not been completed when Mr. McKinley moved the previous question on the approval of the journal. This brought Mr. Mills to his feet, and he demanded time to debate the question. The Speaker refused to recognize him, and ordered the clerk to proceed with the roll call.

Mills became terribly excited and rushed down the aisle yelling at the top of his voice that the Speaker was perpetrating a fraud upon the House.

In a moment nearly everybody on both sides of the House was on his feet, yelling and clapping his hands.

It was impossible to hear all that was said. Mills was white with rage, and denounced the Speaker and the other side in very strong terms.

Through the noise and confusion the shrill metallic voice of Kerr, of Iowa, was heard shouting that Mills' action was treasonable. Turning for a moment in Kerr's direction Mills exclaimed:

"You are a traitor yourself to the constitution and laws. You are trying to surround the ballot box with bayonets and to deprive the people of their right of representation."

At this point the Speaker ordered the Sergeant-at-Arms to take the official mace and restore order. The excitement was soon over.

SHARP WORK IN THE SENATE.

Both Sides Watching for Points in the Contest Over the Elections Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The action of the Senate in taking up the cloture rule last night was the result of an understanding between Senator Aldrich and Senator Gorman.

Senator George, who yielded the floor for Mr. Aldrich to move that the cloture rule be taken up, endeavored to ascertain whether he would be allowed to proceed with his speech if the rule was adopted; but the Senate adjourned before Mr. George had succeeded in obtaining a definite answer to his question.

Under the present rules Mr. George need not have yielded to Senator Aldrich, and a number of the Democratic Senators think that the Republicans will be obliged to allow him to finish his speech to-day. Republican Senators, however, claim that the discussion of the cloture rule is a question of the highest privilege and that it has precedence over all other measures and may be brought up at any time without regard to a pending measure.

To-day it is expected that the fight on the cloture rule will begin in earnest, while it cannot be learned definitely what the Republican programme will be it is certain that the policy of the Republicans will be vigorously aggressive, and that much dependence has been placed in the ability of Vice-President Morton to make rulings favorable to a speedy disposition of the rules.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION.

Representative McKinley Says He is Opposed to the Measure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Senator Paddock says that his bill creating a permanent tariff commission will be considered by the Senate Committee on Finance this week. He believes the measure will receive favorable action by the Senate at an early day. The bill creates a commission of five men, not more than three of whom shall be appointed from the same political party, each to be paid a salary of $7,000.

The commission will have headquarters in Washington, but shall look into the operations of the tariff law in the various sections of the country, and report annually to Congress, with recommendations as to changes needed in the tariff law. The intention is to give fresh, not partisan, information relative to the operations of the tariff law, and what is needed to make it more satisfactory.

The measure does not meet the approval of Representative McKinley, the author of the present Tariff law. He said of the bill: "I don't believe it would be wisdom to pass such a measure at this time. Although I favor a tariff commission for the purposes named in the bill I am afraid it would be a confession of weakness for the Republicans to pass such a bill on the heels of a revision of the tariff.

"It would look as though we were not sure that we had acted wisely. It might be regarded as an invitation for more information for another tariff bill. No, I don't think we ought to create a tariff commission till we have given the new law a good trial and seen its operations."

The Silver Pool Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Special Silver Pool Investigating Committee of the House will hear Representative Dockery this afternoon, and it is expected he will give the names of a number of New York bankers who will be subpœnaed to appear before the committee. No New Yorker will be summoned until after Mr. Dockery finishes his testimony.

THEY FIGHT FOR A GIRL.

Two Brothers Slug Each Other in Win a Young Woman They Both Love.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 21.—The town of Plymouth was the scene of an unusual prize fight, in which two brothers were the principals. A sweetheart coveted by both was at the bottom of the trouble.

The two young men are John and Michael Wright, both employed at the mines, and living in a suburb of Plymouth, known as Whitewash. They have both been paying attention to a young woman living near by.

It seems that she favored Michael, and this made John very bitter. On Monday night they had a fierce quarrel about her, and John offered to fight Michael, with the understanding that if he was beaten he should retire.

Michael agreed and they went right out in a vacant lot, selected a couple of companions as seconds and went at it.

Though neither had much science they fought regular rounds of three minutes each. The fight lasted ten rounds of hard hammering. Both exerted themselves to the utmost and, fought most desperately.

Both were badly punished, but at the end of the tenth round John was knocked out of time with a terrific blow over the heart and could not come to time again.

POWDERLY'S LATEST.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—Under the headings, "The New York Arbitrators—Their Unfair, Untrue and Malicious Report," General Master Workman Powderly comes out in to-day's issue of the Journal of the Knights of Labor in a three-column arraignment of the New York Board of Arbitration and its recent report on the New York Central Railroad strike.

The article says the report is "unfair, untruthful and misleading. It is more than that; it is malicious, and plainly exhibits the ear-marks of men who could not withstand honest criticism and who made a State document the vehicle through which to convey a spiteful thrust, which they should have done in their individual capacity, if at all."

TO BE SENT TO CHILI.

United States Vessels to Look After American Interests There.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The selection of vessels to be sent to Chili to look after American interests there is bothering the Navy Department officials a good deal. It is considered urgent that a vessel or two should be sent at once, and the San Francisco and the Charleston are both talked of for that duty.

Reports come from the Mare Island Navy Yard, however, that the two vessels cannot be made ready for sea for several days. The fact is, none of the vessels on the Pacific coast are in condition to leave the yard, both the vessels named will, doubtless, be sent to Chili if they can possibly be made ready before the trouble is over.

The Lymph Curing Him.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 21.—Dr. E. T. Painter, who went to Berlin on a stretcher to undergo the Koch lymph treatment for spinal tuberculosis, writes that while the treatment was heroic it has been successful in his case. The third injection nearly killed him, but after the sixth he arose from his bed for the first time in months, and is now shuffling around a Berlin hospital, improving daily.

Jones, for the past 14 years one of the editorial staff of the New York Times, and latterly the editor of the Sunday edition of that paper, died suddenly last night of heart disease. He was 39 years of age, born in Boston, and was a son of the late Justin Jones (Harry Hazel), publisher of the Yankee Blade.

TROOPS ON PARADE

THE CAMPAIGN'S LAST FEATURE

Gen. Miles' Plan to Show How Many Soldiers Can be Available to Suppress an Uprising—The Late Hostilies Pleased With More Beef—Ten Chiefs to Visit Washington.

PINE RIDGE, S. D., Jan. 21.—A great military review was last night ordered by Gen. Miles to take place to-day. Practically all the troops at the agency will participate.

There is a belief that this display will be the last feature of the campaign against the ghost dancers. It is expected that the pageant will be witnessed by the Indians en masse and that they will be duly impressed with the numbers of soldiers available to suppress any uprising.

The troops gathered on the banks of Wolf Creek, moving in that direction at an early hour. The only command not included in the order was the First Infantry, Col. Shafter, which will remain in position near the agency buildings. Seventeen companies of infantry and 20 troops of cavalry, besides the Cheyennes and Ogalalla scouts and a battery of artillery will form in line of battle and manœuvre under the eye of Gen. Miles.

The first large beef issue under the new agent, Captain Pierce, takes place to-day. Fifty-five hundred people will be fed. One beef will be issued to every 22 people, instead of 30 as formerly. In this manner every 22 people will hereafter receive 346 pounds more at each beef issue than they did before. This increase greatly pleases the Indians.

General Miles is selecting 10 chiefs from the Ogalallas and Brules to send to Washington to settle their case before the Interior Department. They will be accompanied by F. D. Lewis, Special Indian Agent.

FIGHT WITH A BURGLAR.

DANBURY, Conn., Jan. 21.—An audacious robbery was perpetrated in broad daylight at Mr. W. H. Oakley's Grand View avenue residence. Mr. Oakley is a widower, and employs as housekeeper Miss Jessie Gilbert.

Miss Gilbert on her return from shopping noticed that a pane of glass in the rear door had been broken, but as the door was locked she felt no alarm. She had been in her room only a few moments, when she heard a man approach. She sprang to her feet, and the intruder seized her.

With one hand he clasped her mouth tightly, and reaching to a sewing machine he took a large spool, which he forced into the frightened girl's mouth, and deftly secured it there by tying her apron tightly across her face. He then tied her hands behind her with a handkerchief, and with a piece of cloth that lay on a trunk he bound her feet securely together and then placed her in a chair.

Miss Gilbert managed to roll down stairs to the door. She succeeded in attracting the attention of Mrs. Henry Hagaman, who lives next door, and was released from her bonds.

It was some time before she could tell her story. The police were at once notified, but the robber had disappeared completely.

New York Finances.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 21.—The annual report of the State Comptroller shows that the receipts during the fiscal year were $18,212,399.49, and the expenditures $17,446,854.70. The total value of trust funds, valuing investments at par, is $88,799,471.90. The canal debt sinking fund, upon September 1, 1890, contained securities and cash to the amount of $3,163,722.49, while the total amount in trust for said funds was $11,063,194.39.

Window Glass Factories Shut Down.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 21.—Word has been received in this city that nearly a dozen window glass factories have shut down on account of an overstocked market and low prices. The United Glass Company has shut down all the factories under its control, and other outside factories are expected to follow. This depression is attributed partly to the failure of the proposed consolidation to be called the American Glass Company.

The Strikers Defeated.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—The strike of the operators and station agents employed on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road appears to be at an end. The strike committee complains bitterly of the large number of operators who signed the agreement promising to strike when ordered to do so and refused to fulfill their agreement when the crisis came.

KING KALAKAUA DEAD.

The Hawaiian Monarch Succumbs to Bright's Disease at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 21.—King Kalakaua of the Hawaiian Islands died from Bright's disease in his apartments at the Palace Hotel at 2:30 p. m. The result of his illness was unexpected. All the morning the situation was one of anxious watching.

The King lay in a stupor for several hours before his death, and it was only his great vitality that kept him alive so long. The end was painless.

The King's remains will be embalmed at once. No definite arrangements for the funeral services here, or the removal of the remains to the Hawaiian Islands, have as yet been made, but it is probable that services will be held in Trinity Episcopal Church to-morrow and that the remains will leave for Honolulu on the Charleston before the end of the week.

The arrival of the body of the King on the Charleston at Honolulu will probably be the first intimation that the Hawaiian people will have of the King's death.

The flags on all the public buildings in this city were placed at half mast, and the Hawaiian ensign is also at half mast above the Palace Hotel.

Kalakaua became King of Hawaii in 1874. His sister, Princess Kolinokalani, who has been acting as Queen Regent during Kalakaua's absence from the island, will be his successor.

HIRING HUNGARIANS.

They Are Brought to the River Pits to Displace the Striking Miners.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 21.—The river coal operators have been bringing Hungarians to the river pits to displace the 5,000 striking miners. It is stated that several hundred Hungarians, who were thrown out of work in the coke regions by the recent shut-down, have secured work in the Monongahela pits.

Whether the river operators are giving employment to the Huns temporarily, in order to break the miners' strike, or whether they intend to make Hungarian labor a factor in the river mining of the future, is not known.

It is likely, however, that steps will be taken shortly to call a convention, and therefore an early and amicable settlement of the trouble on the river is looked for.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

A Woman Shot and Instantly Killed—The Murderer Commits Suicide.

BRADFORD, Pa., Jan. 21.—A dispatch from Findlay, O., says that Mrs. D. M. Austin, wife of the proprietor of the Wickham House, was shot and instantly killed by Wharton Sharkey. The latter immediately shot himself through the head and died at once. No cause can be assigned for the tragedy.

There was no intimacy between the two. Sharkey owed Austin money, and may have been angered by a demand for it. Both the murderer and his victim formerly resided at Bradford.

Gompers Deplores Child Labor.

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 21.—At a mass meeting of workingmen here, Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, made a strong appeal for the adoption of the eight-hour movement, especially deploring child labor, and pointed out the increased happiness and prosperity to the community from the lessening of the hours of toil. Mr. Gompers and Mr. James Duncan, of Baltimore, Md., have come here as a committee to ask the Bricklayers' International Union, now in session, to unite with the Labor Federation.

A Strong Organization.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 21.—As one result of the shut-down of the iron furnaces in the Mahoning, Ohio, valley because the railroads refused to reduce rates and the price of coke was not lowered, all the furnaces in the Shenango, Pa., and Mahoning valleys have joined one immense organization that will seek to aid the combined interests. It is the largest and most influential association of the kind ever organized.

The Hermit Had Money.

HADDAM, Conn., Jan. 21.—The body of William Munson, a hermit was found in his hut near Arnold's Station last week. His body was removed by relatives, but the latter did not take the trouble to examine the hut, supposing it to contain nothing of value. A party of young men visited the shanty, and, after a short investigation, turned up bank books and bonds valued at $7,000.

Slashed His Throat With a Razor.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Jan. 21.—A big sensation was caused here last evening by the discovery of the dead body of Colonel Theodore W. Bean, who was found lying in the cellar of his law office, with his throat slashed with a razor. Investigation showed that the suicide was caused by financial troubles. Col. Bean was 58 years of age, and a prominent man in Republican politics.

Twenty Thousand Dollar Forgery.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Jan. 21.—It is reported that John Relyea, aged 29 years, junior member of the firm of Homer Relyea & Son, millers, has suddenly left town, having forged checks, notes and other negotiable paper to the extent of $20,000, or more. He was highly connected and a prominent member of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Diplomats Dined by the President.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The heads of the Diplomatic Legations assembled last night at the White House to partake of the state dinner given them by the President and Mrs. Harrison. Every one of the foreign Ministers was present, except the Minister of China. The procession, as it passed down the long hallway to the dining-room, was imposing.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 21.—Senator Vance was re-elected United States Senator by a full party vote.

STARVING IN EUROPE

LONDON NEEDS A RELIEF FUND.

The Destitute in Paris Compelled to Wander the Streets All Night.

Terrible Condition of the Inhabitants of Silesia—Typhus Fever, Brought on by Hunger, Claiming Many Victims—The German Emperor Appealed to for Relief—France Comes to the Rescue.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—From all parts of Europe comes the cry of the suffering poor. London is much in need of a Balfour relief fund, as Ireland. The poor-boxes kept in the magistrates' courts are exhausted in answering the calls of respectable and well-recommended hungry people, and thousands are known to be starving at home rather than accept the alternative of going to the workhouse.

The Salvation Army shelters are crowded, and for several nights many have had to be turned away for lack of accommodation. The charge at these shelters for supper, bed and breakfast is fourpence, but those without money are received, and allowed to pay in labor.

The Poor of Paris.

In Paris the authorities are hiring additional buildings for the reception of the destitute, numbers of whom wander all night in the streets. The warming rooms in Vienna are very successful in alleviating misery, and a movement is on foot to add a dole of soup to each person.

Many Victims in Prussia.

A petition has been presented to the German Emperor representing the terrible condition of the inhabitants of Schweidnitz and other districts in Silesia, where typhus fever, brought on by hunger, is claiming many victims. The Duke of Ratibor, leader of the Centrist party in Prussia, owns much territory there, but appears indifferent to the sufferings of his people.

Relief for the Poor of France.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The Chamber of Deputies has voted 50,000,000 for the relief of the poor suffering from the rigor of the winter.

THE IRISH SITUATION.

Scully Will Not Try to Unseat Sir John Pope Hennessy.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—It is understood that the petition of Mr. Vincent Scully, the defeated Parnellite candidate for Kilkenny, has abandoned his petition for the unseating of Sir John Pope Hennessy.

Mr. Timothy Healy delivered a lecture at Mullingar and was threatened with violence by a large number of Parnellites who were present. Owing to the influence of several priests who were in the audience, however, the demonstration was confined to a storm of shouts and hisses.

A dispatch from Waterford says the delegates of the Trades and Labor Federation, now in session there, by a vote of 291 to 28, decided to attend en masse a public demonstration in the interest of Mr. Parnell.

Fears for the Young Kaiser's Health.

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—An ominous coincidence is mentioned in connection with the recent court festivities here. The Emperor William was to have made a speech, but his physicians insisted that he should not, owing to a sore throat. This was exactly the first public announcement made regarding the trouble which brought on the death of the late Emperor Frederick, and the recollection of the fact cast no little gloom over the brilliant assembly. The question suggested to many minds is whether the young Kaiser has the beginning of the terrible complaint which gave him the crown at thirty. The German press dare not hint such a thing, but Berlin is full of whispers.

Carnot and Victoria Will Talk First.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—Arrangements are completed for the opening in March of a telephone service between this city and Paris. The service will be formally inaugurated by the interchange of greetings between President Carnot and Queen Victoria, which are to be collected in phonographs and preserved. The tariff decided upon by the Paris management is ten francs for three minutes use of the telephone circuit. This, according to views expressed on both sides of the water, is too much.

No Room for Irish Debates.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Commons has notified the Irish members that he cannot provide room any longer for the continuance of debates upon the question of Irish leadership, as all the rooms are required for the various committees. This is looked upon as a hint that the House does not wish the wrangle continued in the Halls of Westminster, as the officer no doubt acted under instructions.

Driven Mad by the Disgrace.

DUBLIN, Jan. 21.—Charles Dubedat, the brother of Frank Dubedat, the absconding broker, has been taken to an insane asylum, owing to symptoms of lunacy produced by the late trouble. He resided for two years in New York not long ago.

French Warships to Go to Chili.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The statement is made in diplomatic circles in this city that the French government has determined to dispatch a number of warships with instructions to rendezvous in Chilian waters.

Many Deaths from Freezing.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The intensely cold weather in the south of France continues. A snow storm is raging at Foix. Many deaths from freezing are reported.

RHODE ISLAND'S NEEDS.

Gov. Davis Makes Many Recommendations to the General Assembly.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 21.—The General Assembly has convened for the winter session in this city. Governor Davis read his message, which was short and comprehensive. It says the State's finances are unsatisfactory, the appropriations and expenditures having exceeded the receipts.

Governor Davis recommends that outside capitalists be encouraged to come here; that the name of a citizen once registered on the voting list shall be removed only for cause; that the new State House be located in Providence; that there should be more manual training in the schools; that children should not be employed to the detriment of their education; that the State Prison be enlarged; that a home for the deaf and dumb be erected, and a Board of Pardons be established; that $35,000 be appropriated for the relief of disabled veterans, and for the Soldiers' Home; that liquor licenses be restricted and the fees increased, and that the appointment be made of a woman physician at the Cranston State Institution.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The grip has again appeared at May's Landing, N. J., and is spreading to an alarming extent.

Spain's Cabinet will dispense with all commercial treaties with foreign countries other than Morocco.

The Chinese Imperial authorities have instructed the Viceroys to show every respect to the Czarewitch.

Esra J. Cady, of Centreville, R. I., has died of injuries inflicted by his insane brother of whom he had the care.

A bill has been introduced in the Pennsylvania Senate that not more than $3 a month shall be charged for the use of the telephone.

Senator Evarts received the vote of the New York Senate and Governor Hill that of the Assembly. In the combined vote the Governor led by only one.

Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, the English Freethinker and Member of Parliament, is in a very exhausted condition and little hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Edwin G. Mattis left his home in Chester, Pa., on the 14th inst. to visit his wife in Philadelphia. He has not been heard from since. His friends fear he has met with foul play.

The entire force of bottomers and finishers at Miller & Foster's shoe factory at Haverhill, Mass., have gone on strike against a price list posted by the firm. Each man was paid off and discharged.

The employes at Albany of the New York Central Railroad are greatly disturbed over a rumor that all employes are to be compelled to live either at New York or West Albany so as to be ready for call.

W. F. Barker, who went to the Bassett street school at Syracuse, N. Y., and fired five bullets into his wife's body, gives no reason for the deed. It is thought that he will resort to the insanity dodge. Mrs. Barker is still alive.

Fifteen masked robbers derailed a train on the Rio Grand Railroad, between Brownsville and Point Isabel, Tex., got 20,000 Mexican dollars, en route for shipment to New Orleans by the steamship Morgan and the ship Mail, and robbed the passengers of money and valuables.

The body of Captain Maloney, the commander of the famous City Grays of Harrisburg, Pa., and superintendent of the Arsenal in that city, was found in the river near one of the piers of the Cumberland Valley railroad bridge. As his cap was found on one of the girders it is thought he became bewildered, wandered out onto the bridge and fell through to his death.

The State Baseball League of Pennsylvania has finally been permanently organized. Harry Diddlebock of Philadelphia was elected president, secretary and treasurer. Altoona, Harrisburg, Lancaster, Reading, Lebanon and Williamsport were represented. It is understood that Wilkesbarre and Scranton will probably be admitted to complete the circuit.

—The first performance of the Pyramus and Thisbe dramatic club of this city, will be given at The Casino, to-morrow evening.

—F. A. Dunham, C. E., advertises in another column for sealed proposals for grading about 3,300 lineal feet of streets about to be opened at Netherwood.

—A special meeting of Gazelle Engine Co No. 1, will be held in their parlors to-morrow evening, at 7:30 o'clock. All the members are requested to be present.

—A mothers' meeting will be held in the Women's Christian Temperance Union rooms to-morrow afternoon at half-past three o'clock. Mrs. Fernald has arranged a programme of interesting and helpful readings.

—A Plainfield clergyman remarks that those who visit New York and have an hour to spare will find it profitable to attend the interdenominational meetings which are being held every afternoon this month, from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock, in the "Old John Street" church.

—A year ago everybody was disconsolate, everybody was complaining, that there was no ice. Now there is an abundance of ice of the choicest kind, and everybody who needs ice is gathering it. But what is heard? Any thanks? No: poor man doesn't regard Heaven's favors that way. Somehow, he thinks he is entitled to the earth and the fullness thereof; when he gets it he takes it as a matter of course, and when he doesn't get it he complains. Such is man—poor man.

—The storm of Saturday caused considerable trouble by the breaking of the ice-coated electric light wires, and the crossing of these wires with telegraph and telephone lines. The storm caused a great deal of trouble in all the telegraph offices, and for hours telegraph communication between Plainfield and other cities was very uncertain. The telephone service was also very seriously interrupted by the storm, which gave abundant argument in favor of burying all wires under ground.

—It is a matter worthy of notice that the farmers' clubs and county boards of agriculture throughout the State are flourishing, as a rule, and taking a very active interest in progressive agriculture. The State exchanges show, by the full and interesting reports they contain, that the farmers are becoming more interested in such political matters as affect the prices of their products or the cost of transportation. With deeper and broader knowledge of the fundamental principles of agriculture they unite a more intelligent perception of public policy which affects their interests. The farmers themselves are to be congratulated, and so is the State of New Jersey.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hewson, mother of Mrs. James Brand, of this city, died this morning at the residence of C. J. Noel, Netherwood. She was in the 94th year of her age. Mrs. Brand was summoned on Monday to the death bed of her brother, Gen. M. B. Hewson, at Washington, D.C.

The Standard, a weekly insurance paper published at Boston, in its report of a recent meeting of the New England Insurance Exchange, speaks of a former Plainfielder, C. M. Goddard, as follows: "The Executive Committee then reported the appointment of C. M. Goddard to be Secretary, succeeding Oliver P. Clarke, resigned. The appointment was ratified. Mr. Goddard has been electrical inspector of the Exchange for the past year. As such he has proved himself a man of exceptionable ability, and has shown qualifications which seem to fit him for the important duties devolving on the office of Secretary."

Almost Turned to a Pillar of Ice.

A singular accident occurred on Madison avenue, yesterday morning, the result of which was extremely disagreeable, though not fatal. A prominent resident, whose place of business is in New York, was about to water his chickens before leaving for the city, when suddenly his foot slipped on the walk and he was thrown violently to the ground, bruising himself severely, and receiving the contents of the water pail from head to foot. His eyeglasses disappeared and have not yet been found, though a reward was immediately offered for their recovery. Unfortunately, the gentleman is absolutely blind without his glasses, so stood helplessly in his garden calling for assistance, nearly frozen, and hoarse from shouting, until rescued by some charitable person and led into the house.

Y. M. C. A. Reception.

The quarterly Y. M. C. A. members' reception will be held at the Association rooms, to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. George Jenkins, of Somerville, the well-known banjo player, is on the programme. Music, recitations, refreshments and social intercourse will be the order of the evening. Members are privileged to invite their friends.

WANTS MONEY FOR HIS LEG.

Blacksmith Uhrhahn's Suit Against Surgeon Long, for Personal Damages, Now on Trial.

A suit of especial interest to Plainfielders is being tried in the Union County Courts at Elizabeth, this week, before Judge VanSyckel and a jury. The action is that brought by William Uhrhahn against Dr. Monroe B. Long, both of this city. On February 28 of last year, while Uhrhahn, who is a blacksmith, was shoeing a horse, the animal became restless, and before Uhrhahn could get out of its way he received a severe kick on his left leg, which knocked him down, the horse at the same time falling heavily upon his prostrate body.

Uhrhahn was so severely injured that it was found necessary to summon a physician at once. Dr Long, who is spoken of by the Elizabeth papers, in their reports of the trial, as a physician of high standing in Plainfield, having practised in this city for many years, was sent for.

Making a hasty examination of the injured man, he gave it as his opinion that the injury sustained was slight, and when Uhrhahn complained of a severe pain about his left hip which prevented him from standing on his foot, or even being able to move that member, Dr. Long told him that it was the result of a bruise and would soon pass away.

According to the testimony of Uhrhahn, Dr. Long continued to attend him for the supposed bruise for about six weeks, and then practically discontinued his visits.

Finding that he did not improve, the plaintiff expressed a wish to call in the aid of another physician, and his desire was acceded to.

The new doctor, after making a thorough examination of the injured member, declared that instead of the leg being bruised it was dislocated at the hip, and he says he forthwith set it.

Uhrhahn immediately began to mend, and to-day is able to go about with the use of a stick, although it is thought to be doubtful if he will ever be able to have the free use of his limb.

The plaintiff says that he has been compelled to dispose of his blacksmith shop, and from the day he was injured until the present time has been unable to do work of any kind, wherefore he asks that Dr. Long be compelled to compensate him, claiming that if the physician had made a proper examination of his injury at first he would have discovered the real cause, the dislocated leg would have been set, and to-day, instead of being incapacitated from working, he would be well and strong.

Craig A. Marsh of Plainfield appears for the plaintiff, and R. V. Lindabury of Elizabeth for Dr. Long.

During the progress of the trial yesterday testimony was given to the effect that when Dr. Long decided that Uhrhahn was suffering merely from bruises he gave the patient some liniment to rub on his hip. This treatment was kept up two months, at the end of which time the patient was no better and was tortured with agonizing pains in his injured hip.

Dr. Long said that he could not do anything more. The leg was drawn up by this time 2½ inches shorter than the other. Dr. Chauncey Field, of Plainfield, and Dr. Cooper, of Westfield, were then called in, and they subjected the patient to a thorough examination, which disclosed the fact that the hip bone was out of joint.

The physicians succeeded with much labor in putting back the bone in its socket.

When Uhrhahn revived he was able to stand on the leg, but it is still half an inch short, owing, so the doctors say, to the bone shrinking during the length of time it was out of place. They could not understand, they testified, how Dr. Long had failed to detect the nature of the injury, as there was quite a protuberance in the patient's back when they examined him, plainly showing that a dislocation had occurred, and when the bone was pulled back into place it was found that the protuberance had disappeared. The patient at once consulted Corporation Counsel Marsh, of Plainfield, who brought the suit. It is alleged that Dr. Long has several times asked by the patient and his friends if it was not likely that the hip was out of place and that the doctor always answered them that such was not the case and that the swelling in the back where the bone protruded was caused solely by inflammation.

Among the evidence introduced in court was the skeleton of a man to illustrate how the hip-bone could be dislocated and replaced in its natural position. A large amount of expert testimony is being given. Dr. Long is one of the executors of the Plainfield hermit, Frazee Lee, and figured prominently as a witness in the famous and successful suit to break the dead miser's will.

The case is still on trial, and until the defence is heard no opinion can be justly passed.

What will most surprise you, when taking Hires' Cough Cure, is how effective and pleasant it is to take. That hacking cough that disturbs your friends, and kept you awake all night, will yield immediately to the magical properties.

HYMENEAL.

Joy—McGee.

The marriage of James Richard Joy and Miss Emma Prentice McGee took place in the Methodist Episcopal church last evening at seven o'clock. The church was thronged with invited guests, and the wedding was a brilliant society event. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Charles Bayard Mitchell, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Herbert Welch, of Bedford Station, N. Y. The bride was attired in a costume of white satin, with feathered trimmings, wore a long bridal veil, and carried a bouquet of bride's white roses. She was escorted to the altar on the arm of her father, James McGee, and was attended by her bride-maid, Miss Alice H. Joy, of Groton, Mass. Following her came the groom and the "best man," Dr. Ellis W. Hedges, of this city. Preceding the bridal party were the ushers—Messrs. Frederic Joy, of Detroit; Clifford W. McGee, of Plainfield; George A. Sanderson, of Boston; Emil Schultze, of New York; Johnathan Barnes, of Springfield, Mass.; and James H. Hallock, of Plainfield.

The groom is well-known in journalistic circles, and holds a prominent editorship in New York. The bride's father is a former President of the New York Produce Exchange.

The bride was given away at the altar by her father. After the marriage ceremony the guests re-assembled at the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held from half-past seven to ten.

The music at the marriage was rendered by Miss Jessie Utter, who, at the the organ, played the wedding marches. The altar decorations were of calla lilies, and were very beautiful.

A Good Winter for Skating.

All the hardware and sporting goods dealers who handle skates were glad to see the cold weather come. All the skates that could be raked up were placed on exhibition in windows and showcases. The demand has been lively. For three Winters past the skate market has been very dull, and accumulated until it became dead and almost out of style. There are no new style skates this season, but those of year before last and others have been reduced to such a low figure that they are within the reach of all. The American club skate seems to be in popular demand. The Acme and other machine skates come in for their share of public favor. The American club, which sold for $8 when it first came out, several years ago, can be bought for a dollar. Skates which used to be manufactured on the other side of the water can be made here very much cheaper now. The patents on several of the makes having expired, other manufacturers are going in for making them. The double-ender skate, which was introduced last year, seems to be very popular. More can be cut with this kind than with any other, because there is less danger of either end catching in the ice. There is no demand for the old style skate nowadays. The old-time "acorn," on which many of the elderly men of today learned to skate, has passed almost entirely out of sight. Few are now seen in Plainfield at all, but a few may be found around the country horse ponds. The "screw-heel" and other strap skates are but seldom used now. The ladies' skate, which is half-club and has a strap to support weak ankles, is being improved. A great many ladi a use the club skate without the strap, but it is always best, for the men, too, to use a strap around the ankle to prevent a severe strain in case the skater has a fall. The club and other machine skates are placed so low now that any person can buy a pair. They range in price from fifty cents to five dollars; and —as far as sport is concerned—just as much fun can be had with a dollar pair as with a five-dollar pair.

New Church and New Casino.

A new Presbyterian church will be erected at Roselle within a few months. It will cost about $22,000, of which $20,000 has already been subscribed. The present building, which has become entirely too small, will be converted into a lecture room.

A new Casino also will be built in the Spring at a cost of over $8,000, of which $4,000 has already been subscribed. New York business men are largely interested in the venture, which gives promise of being entirely successful.

—Jersey City has a Melopoia, and spells it the same as Plainfield's is spelled.

—John Tier warns the public that skating on the present ice-surface of his lake is very unsafe.

Local Members Abroad.

Members of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, of this city, attended the recent twenty-fifth anniversary of Lincoln Division of Elizabeth, and four Plainfield singers rendered excellent music, as the following paragraph from the Elizabeth Herald testifies:

"The programme of the evening was opened with prayer by the Rev. A. G. VanAken, after which the Eclipse Quartette of Plainfield sang 'Those Sweet Bells,' their singing being so appreciated by the audience that they were compelled to respond to several encores. During the evening the same quartette rendered other selections, which were equally as well appreciated."

The rose of the June time
Are O! so fair to see,
But fairer than these flowers are
I: the rose that blooms for me
On S'e cheeks once pale and hollow,
And God be thanked, I say,
That the rose of health and happiness
Blooms out again to-day.

That is what many a man feels like saying when he sees some member of his family restored to health after a long and wasting illness. In many households there are persons who seem to be fading out of life slowly. There is a general debility that indicates a lack of vital force. The blood seems to be blood only in color. There is often a dry, hard cough. Night brings no refreshing sleep. The cheek grows thin and pale. What shall be done to ward off disease which is making slow but sure efforts to secure another victim? Let me tell you: Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and fight the enemy with it. There is nothing like it to build up a weakened system, and restore lost vitality. It is a most wonderful tonic, nutritive and alterative, or blood-purifier.

Corporation Counsel Marsh's New Home.

ARCHITECT SMITH'S LATEST CREATION.

Its Exterior and Interior a Credit to His Taste and Management.

The completion of the new home of Corporation Counsel Marsh, on Eighth street next to Mayor Gilbert's, adds to the long list of Plainfield's handsome houses, the showiest of all. The architect, Charles H. Smith, has without question accomplished more in the way of striking display and beauty in architectural grouping and tasteful combination of material, than has been done before for the same cost.

The style, as will be seen, is principally Queen Anne. The stone in the porch pillars and also used in profusion upon the lower story, is Philadelphia green-stone rock faced. This is charmingly combined with pressed brick and terra cotta. Above the porch the construction is of brick, terra cotta and stained shingles.

The interior, though not so elaborate throughout the house as some other homes of Mr. Smith's creation, is yet strikingly rich. The entrance hall is grand. Ceiling and side walls are of quartered oak with heavy mouldings, cornices, etc. This hall ascends through to the second story where there is a picturesque balcony. Art glass of most artistic patterns, fill the big bay window that lights this hall. In the centre of the picture above, this window is shown over the porch. A profusely carved oak staircase winds up within it. Directly opposite the vestibule entrance in this hall, is a spacious fireplace built of Dutch brick, mosaic and terra cotta.

The library at the left is finished in mahogany and furnished with mahogany book cases built along the walls and filling the corners. The parlor is treated in ivory and gold, and the dining room is oak. The centre pieces in the rooms on the lower floor, from which hang the electroliers, are of papier mache. The upper floors contain innumerable bedrooms, dressing rooms and large closets. From the bath room shutes carry soiled clothing direct to the laundry. There is absolutely nothing wanting in the house from billiard room to butler's pantry. The plastered walls are all finished with soap-stone surface in pale tints.

Architect Smith has kept the cost of all this, within $15,000. It hardly seems possible to those who have seen the house outside and in, and many of those who have had to pay for houses built for them by other architects, do not believe it. But it is so. Mr. Smith has just begun a house for Banker Clauson on Ninth street; has finished plans for a home for ex-Judge Stillman; is completing the Hon. Alvah Clark's fine new residence at Somerville, and is also, just at present, building the Bergen Point club house, a large church at Watertown, N. Y., and a costly home for H. M. Flagler's private secretary, at Flatbush.

A DISTRICT COURT FOR PLAINFIELD

And a Bill to Abolish Justices of the Peace.

Senator Marsh, of Union county, is, it is said, about to introduce a bill in the Legislature doing away with the present system of District Courts for each county, and substituting instead District Courts for every city in the State of over 8,000 inhabitants. This would establish District Courts in the cities of Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway in Union county. It is also proposed to abolish all the justices of the peace, and transfer their powers to the District Courts. The expenses of the present District Court in Union county is borne by the taxpayers of Elizabeth, although the rest of the county furnishes a majority of the business transacted in it.

A Woman's Reasons For Furs.

"They're almost Esquimau clad these days, aren't they?"—queries a Plainfield student of human nature—"these pretty, fashionable women that walk or drive in the streets with fur at the hem of their clinging gowns and long coats or capes of fur, and with their fair faces peeping out from their high furry collars, for all the world like some wonderful sort of Jack-in-the-Pulpit. There never before was such a season as this for furs of all kinds, from the long, silky, white fleece of the Angora lamb that lines the snowy opera cloak, to the thick, rich pelt of the seal that goes into the serviceable street coat. One would think a very Arctic season were upon the city, women are so clad about and wrapped to the curls of their foreheads in the fleece of furs. And you think, do you, most short-sighted creatures, that women are suddenly finding themselves in danger of sudden death from cold, and therefore they have taken to super-wrapping themselves in skins? Nay, not so. Women have just discovered that there is nothing in all the world that makes them look so well as that soft shag of fur about their necks and framing in their faces. It softens sharp outlines, it brings out delicate colorings, it fills out hollows, it subtracts whole geologic periods from a woman's age. There's the secret of it all. It isn't a fear of pneumonia, it isn't a suddenly increased susceptibility to cold—it's because it makes her look better. And surely that's reason enough. It is to you, good sir, if you're any philosopher of affairs feminine. For anything that makes a woman look better makes her feel better, and anything that makes her feel better makes her behave better. And so, you see, you're directly the gainer, aren't you?"

A THOROUGH SUCCESS.

Music Hall Crowded With Well Pleased People Upon the Occasion of the Royal Arcanum Entertainment.

There was never a more delighted audience than that which filled Music Hall, last evening. The occasion was an entertainment arranged by Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, in general, and William H. Lyon, Jr., in particular, for the pleasure of their friends and visiting councils. The grand officers of the State were present with their ladies, and also large delegations of members from Westfield, Scotch Plains and Flemington.

The Gilbert Dramatic Society have every reason to feel flattered by the reception accorded their first appearance here. They rendered "Mixed Pickles" most creditably. James Jordan Darling is to be greatly admired as an actor. He has not his peer on the amateur stage, and but few equals among the professionals. Miss Dot Parkhurst was also excellent, and the other members of the cast filled their parts satisfactorily.

The play was well staged and costumed. The orchestral music exceeded any that has been heard in Music Hall in years. The audience was unanimous in their praise of the whole affair, and it is safe to say that for many years the Royal Arcanum by name, at least, will be dear to the hearts of last night's gathering.

The Royal Arcanum was instituted in Boston in 1877 with nine members and by careful, judicious management has grown until it now stands at the head of the Fraternal Beneficial Organizations in this country and is gaining in popularity every year. At present there are over thirteen hundred and forty Councils in the Order with a total membership of one hundred and twelve thousand, and over fifteen million dollars has been paid to the widows and orphans of deceased members.

The fundamental principle of the Royal Arcanum is charity, and the constitution provides that, should any member in good standing become disabled in any way so that he could not keep up his payments, the Council shall take care of his interests and protect those dependent upon him by assuming his liabilities thereto, so that in case of his death at any time, no matter how long deferred, his family will receive the $3,000 benefit.

Plainfield Council was organized in October, 1882, with twenty-five members, and its prosperity is due to the energy displayed by its officers and members. The spirit of true fraternity pervades throughout the Council, and a sick or needy brother is not without that friendly aid which is so acceptable in the hour of distress.

The list of members of Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, includes the following: Charter members—Wm. H. Lyon, Jr., Geo. W. Endicott, M. D., A. C. Vail, Seymour Marsh, Townsend S. Hunn, Albertus Swalm, A. W. Day, Jos. G. Miller, Chas. C. Moore, W. S. Lowry, W. L. Titsworth, H. A. Thorne, E. W. Conklin, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, S. C. Baker, I. C. Yawger, J. E. Christiani, W. A. A FEAST OF VICTORY.

Kempshall, Lindabury and VanNyckel at a Dinner.

(From The New York World.)

The Rev. Dr. Kempshall, the noted leader of the crusade in Union County against the race-track associations and bookmakers; Richard V. Lindabury, who so ably conducted the prosecution of the indictments found against the law-breakers, and Judge Bennet VanSyckel, who thundered from the bench against race-track gambling, yesterday afternoon celebrated their victory over the race-track men by an elaborate dinner at the house of the clergyman, on South Broad street, Elizabeth. Precisely at 1 o'clock Dr. Kempshall drove in a coach to the Court House, where he was joined by his two coadjutors, and the coach containing the triumvirate was rapidly driven to the residence of the divine. It is the general belief that the dinner was only a preliminary to a new plan of campaign which was mapped out afterwards against the proposed legislation at Trenton in favor of the race-tracks. A prominent lawyer of Union County, who is noted as a wag, remarked at the Court House as the coach drove off "that the feast in the natural fitness of things could not be a success without Peter DeLacy, who should have been invited to complete appropriately the famous anti-race-track quartette."

Excellent Transit the Year Round.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

It is no longer a mere impression in Union county that the new county roads afford excellent rapid transit. It is a fact, fixed on a firm foundation. Rapid transit it may be to some, but the county roads are far more valuable as means of safe transit, easy transit and constant transit, all the year round. It is of no consequence now whether it "rains for a week," or the frost stays in the ground or comes out. The county roads contain no quagmires; wagons and trucks are no longer stuck in the mud and frozen fast. The man who starts for this city from any point on the county road gets here. The county roads were never more appreciated than just now, because they are more used and more appreciated the longer they are laid.

The People Should Not be Taxed for the Benefit of Projectors and Contractors.

The Government endorsement of $100,000,000 Nicaraguan Canal Bonds will cost each congressional district about $15,000 annually. The forced contribution levied upon Union county for the benefit of Nicaraguan speculators will be nearly six thousand dollars a year, or sixty thousand dollars in ten years! Plainfield and Elizabeth should remonstrate at once.

THE FUNNY MAN.

Some Are Born, Some Are Made and Some Ought to Die.

Those who have seen much of the inside life of some comic journals and other journals with comic departments know that this kind of work, like pretty much every other kind, may be made almost completely mechanical. There is a regulation way to make a joke—that is to say, a regulation joke. Of course, genuine humor and positive wit transcend all rules, and the great jester is born, not made. But for all that there have been professional funny men who hadn't a grain of wit in their composition. For instance, it is well known that the proprietor of a certain great New York daily newspaper has a habit of mixing his editors all up periodically, to prevent them from sliding into ruts, and to give each department the benefit of fresh ideas (and fresh ignorance) from time to time he changes his men all about, transferring the sporting editor to the financial department, setting the live-stock reporter at work writing political editorials, and so on.

Now it chanced that in one of the mix-ups the funny column fell to the lot of a reporter who did not know a joke from a logarithm—who had no more sense of humor than a haystack. He was accustomed to obey, however, and he went to work making jokes. His first attempts were something wonderful to read. People with pale faces stopped one another on the street, pointed out with trembling fingers these jokes and asked if they really read as they had read them; and when they were answered that they did, they drew deep breaths of relief and passed on. Friends of the proprietor of the paper begged him to make a change, and declared to him that there were some things that the paper could not stand. But he adhered to his programme and kept the man at work, and in the course of time the new funny man made jokes that were copied in other papers for jokes and became an admired member of the National Paragraphers' Association.—Philadelphia Times.

Had "Escaped."

The owner of a cottage on National avenue received a call from the female tenant the other day, and was greatly surprised when she led off with:

"I think I may have to give up the cottage unless you put on a fire escape."

"A fire escape! Why, ma'am, of what use would such a thing be up there?"

"To save our lives, of course. Suppose a fire should start in the night when we are asleep?"

"Well?"

"There is no fire escape."

"But couldn't you open the front or side doors and walk out?"

"The doors?"

"Yes; or if cut off from them there are windows within four feet of the ground."

"I—I see," she stammered. "Yes, I think we could. I never thought of it before, but it looks reasonable and I'll think it. Good-day."—Detroit Free Press.

Descending to Personality.

Miss Enswell—You say you haven't a blot on your family escutcheon?

Lord Bertwater—Not one.

Miss Enswell—How awfully nice! and how lucky it is that escutcheons can't be blotted like—well, like features, for instance.—Judge.

Heard His Death Read Unmoved.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Jan. 21.—The death warrant of West, the colored murderer of the Crouch family, was read last night. West smoked a cigar during the reading, and was less nervous than the officials. The warrant commands that he be hanged between 10 and 3 o'clock, Feb. 20.

Cameron Chosen.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 21.—The vote for United States Senator in the Senate was: Cameron (Rep.), 31; Black (Dem.), 15. Senator Logan (Dem.), voted for J. C. Abby. In the House the vote was: Cameron, 113; Black, 77; Taggart (Ind. Rep.), 7. Cameron is therefore elected to succeed himself.

Two Boys Drowned.

NEW RUMFORD, Mass., Jan. 21.—Two boys, named Zeuboa Wood and Amos Wilson, aged 9 and 11 years, were drowned in the pond of the Westport Manufacturing Company during the forenoon. The ice, on which they were skating, gave way.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 21.—The Democratic Senators make no objection to the presence of Lieutenant-Governor Merwin, and Senator O. H. Platt has good prospects of re-election.

THE SCHEME WORKED.

How Two Clever Schemers Defrauded an Honest Country Merchant.

NE of the early traders of Waterford, Me., writes a correspondent, was a kinsman of the renowned Artemus Ward, who was known in his town, which was then new and more sparsely settled than now, as Squire Brown. Mr. Brown kept store and acted as a mediator of the peace. Trade used to come to his store from quite a distance, and far up in the woods among the lumber camps.

One cold, windy day late in autumn, two seedy-looking individuals stood on a rocky bluff which overlooked the beautiful and quiet village below, in close consultation as to how they could initiate themselves into the good graces of Squire Brown sufficiently to obtain a supply of provisions to last them through the job in contemplation, clothe themselves for the colder weather and incase their feet in new, warm boots in place of the well-worn and thin-soled ones which at that damp moment covered their feet. They stamped their feet upon a dry rock as they conjured.

"I have it," said the elder of the two, clapping his hands in high glee. "I will go in first, and get comfortably

"I HAVE IT," SAID THE ELDER OF THE TWO.

seated, then you come in and we will give each other titles and play whale. That is, we will talk property and business. How's that?"

"Good," replied the other, "I think that must work."

Accordingly, the first speaker entered the store, and, taking a seat by the fire, proceeded to fill and light his pipe, after which he pulled a newspaper from his pocket, and to all appearances seemed deeply interested in its contents.

Soon the door opened and number two entered. "Good morning, Captain Lord," exclaimed the new-comer, as he grasped his companion's hand.

"Good morning, Squire Andrews," returned the latter. "Glad to see you. But what has brought you up here this cold day?"

"Oh, urgent business," returned the latter. "I am about getting ready for my winter's job on the lot I purchased last year over in Blackguard's district."

"Indeed," replied his companion. "I am on the same errand. As I failed to get my price on my pine lot, I concluded to put in a crew and clear the lot of pine and then sell for what I can get."

In this way they went on talking of mortgages, big oxen and farms, until the astonished merchant, notwithstanding their seedy and cheap appearance, actually thought them two old miserly nabobs, who cared more for the mighty dollar than personal appearances.

Before leaving they informed Squire Brown that as they were to do a big business during the winter, and were short of money just then, their help being poor men who must have their pay every Saturday night, they would like to run an account for a few weeks.

Shortly after a pair of heavy, long-legged boots ineased the feet of each of the men. Clothing and stores of food necessaries were shipped to camp. The indebtedness had reached up into the hundreds when the squire learned that he had been duped by two worthless, shiftless fellows.—Shoe and Leather Review.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

TIPS ON TABLE TOPICS.

FORKS are used with the right hand, and are pointed toward the mouth no more directly than is necessary to put food between the lips.

SPOONS with tea, coffee, chocolate and bouillon remain in the saucer when not conveying liquid to the mouth. They are correctly placed at the right of the cup whenever not in use.

LAY your knife and fork parallel with each other and obliquely across a plate that is to be removed for the coming of another course. To forget this increases noise when an attendant is gathering them together.

IT is in bad taste to lay a napkin over the breast. At elegant tables the napkin is only partly shaken from its folds, and is then dropped in the lap to use for wiping the lips and fingers. It is supposed that those who have refined table manners do not scatter crumbs or drop food.

IF olives are served with tongs, or a spoon, or fork, use the same to lift the fruit to your plate, but eat it with your fingers. If there are no spoons, tongs, or forks, with which to serve yourself, take the olives with your fingers and not with your own fork or spoon. Do the same with cut sugar.

MOST food is eaten with a fork, the knife being only its preparer, except when cheese that is neither grated nor creamy is partaken of as an ever-respected part of a dessert. Here it is that knives retain their grip on ancient custom and bring it down to modern tables. Cheese is eaten with a knife.

AN attempt has been made to introduce the wearing of gloves at table. This plan is too absurd an innovation, and will never become a custom. Gloves are worn to the table by women always, and a few men prefer to wear them; but they are removed by both men and women as soon as they are seated.

DO NOT pass to another a plate that has been sent to you by a host or hostess, because it disturbs the plan of your entertainer. It is silently taking an exception to his sense of fitness or courtesy and substituting your own in its stead. Of course this applies only when competent service is at hand. In its absence, with the approval of a host, to aid at table is obligatory.

NEVER bite off a piece from your dinner bread. Do not cut the bread served you at any time. If it is to be buttered take a small bit, not more than two mouthfuls, and spread it. A slice of buttered bread is much too suggestive of the nursery to please fastidious fellow guests. All warm bread should be torn apart, or broken, and never cut. If it is served in large pieces break it for your neighbor also.

FORKS are laid for such dessert as are not wholly liquid, these instruments being used to sop broken bits of pudding in its sauce, thus banishing the spoon whenever possible. Ice-creams are eaten with forks, but water ices with spoons, and good form does not tell us why. Its commands are not often thus arbitrary. Strawberries are eaten with forks, unless their leafy tips have a stem, in which case it is proper and graceful to take each with the fingers, touch it to the sugar lying upon one's plate, then half dip it in cream and place it to the mouth. The same service of sugar and cream is performed by a fork when strawberries are not served with their stems.

TRANSPIRING OF LATE.

A RATHER remarkable feature of a literary society's picnic at Ringing Rocks near Pottstown, was the rendition of "Home, Sweet Home," which music was extracted from rocks as they lay imbedded in the ground.

A MIGRATING flock of birds which was passing over Cedar Rapids, Ia., one night recently encountered a terrible rain and thunder-storm, and, attracted by the electric lights, gathered about them on the streets and attempted to fly into the stores. Over one thousand birds fell dead in the streets from coming in contact with the wires.

A FIRE company at Winsted, Conn., being unable recently to get any but a small stream from the hose, made an examination, and found about eight inches of an eel's tail sticking out of the nozzle of the hose pipe. The pipe was unscrewed from the hose and the astonished firemen fished a live eel out of the pipe that weighed nearly three pounds.

A CITIZEN of Little York, Cortland County, N. Y., has been annoyed for some time by strange and unaccountable noises about the house. It was the source of much annoyance and mystery until he tore off some clapboards near the eaves and found a family of one hundred and seven bats. He buried them in the garden and now sleeps undisturbed.

A RAISER of fancy poultry at Hartford, Conn., was surprised the other day in looking over his young chicks to see six little strangers running about, crying piteously, as though they had lost their mother. An inspection showed that they were quail, having strolled in from an adjoining hay field for a friendly call on the chickens. The parent birds did not show themselves, neither were they heard. After a stay of about two hours the little fellows disappeared in the long grass of the field.

No Medium Like the Newspaper.

The advertising man of a well known New York clothing house says: "We were the first to use the sails of vessels as an advertising medium. Then we got up the 'alphabet puzzle,' and gave away 500,000 puzzles while the craze lasted. Afterward we invented the Waterbury watch idea. We had to do something, because three of our principal competitors had failed, and their stocks were being sold for next to nothing by assignees; so we decided to give a Waterbury watch with every twelve dollars' worth of goods purchased. We advertised the watches 'wound and set.' To wind them fast enough we had to rig up a little machine worked like a sewing machine that would do the winding, and we kept several boys at work winding and setting them. Before we quit we had given away 40,000 of the watches.

"But nothing ever pays us like the ordinary newspaper advertising. The fact is there has come to be in this city a class of advertisement readers just as there is of news readers. They read the advertisements every day, and of course the man who wants to attract them has to get up an advertisement that will do it. The day of standing advertisements in the paper, 'Go to So-and-So's for clothing,' or 'Go to This-and-That's for shoes,' has passed, just as the day for painting signs on rocks and fences or on the sails of boats has passed. You must have something interesting and fresh in every advertisement, and it will be read.

A Place for Talent.

In nearly all regulated lines of industry at present the advertising man is one of the most important adjuncts of a business. And on the other hand the advertising department of a first class newspaper is not what it used to be, but is instead fast becoming an interesting feature of all enterprising journals. Formerly the prevailing idea among the uninitiated was that the talented, the best, most versatile and most ingenious writers and artists were all employed in the news department. How nearly correct this idea may have been need not be stated, but that such is not the case now may be seen by a perusal of the "ads" of any flourishing paper. The competitions between the merchants and between the papers' agents have become so great that the great wholesale and retail houses of the large cities employ talented men at big salaries to attend to their advertising alone, and the men who want the best positions in the counting rooms of newspapers must combine fine business qualifications with the talent that wins success in the editorial chair.—Yenowine's News.

Advertising Necessary to Success.

The merchant or manufacturer who does not advertise his goods cannot succeed. Of late newspaper advertising has become a distinct trade in itself, and all over the country leading concerns pay fabulous prices for men who are skilful in writing catchy advertisements. In many large cities there are men earning from $3,000 to $10,000 a year to write advertisements. This fact in itself shows advertising pays.

If people interested in this subject will investigate it for themselves they will find that the leading advertisers in The Plain Dealer are the merchants who have the best stores, the best assortments of goods and who sell at the most reasonable prices. Such merchants do a much larger business than merchants who do not advertise; consequently they turn their goods over more quickly and can afford to give better prices. Close buyers appreciate this. What is the moral? He who advertises the most judiciously succeeds the best, and the buyers who seek the best bargains patronize such merchants.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Never Be Commonplace.

"Bring your feet with you and have them fitted to a pair of our common sense shoes," is the way a Pittsburg dealer advertises. It is a good phrase and one which attracts attention. The man who succeeds in advertising in such a way that people read his advertisement is the one who draws trade to his store as sure as a magnet draws a needle to itself. Study up quaint, pithy or witty phrases to head your advertisements, and be not too modest in the space they occupy.—Brockton Shoe.

Regular Publications Best.

No one takes up a regular publication without the expectation of finding something of interest. The simple act of turning the pages is as positive an example of expectation as is the opening of a closet if one is in search of a coat. Hence an announcement in a regular publication has an advantage over any other form of business solicitation—that of meeting the sought for eye at a time that it is in a mood for such greeting.—A. C. Ladd.

Must Have Genius.

The simplest advertisements sometimes require the most care and thought in their construction. To write a column is a matter of time, but to edit it down into a sentence is something more.—Printer's Ink.

FISHING FOR LOONS.

They Dive in Great Depths to Secure the Bait.

A loon's favorite diet is fish, and the great depth to which one of these creatures will dive to capture a fish has been many times proved by set-line fishermen on Lake Keuka. Hundreds of set lines are put out in the lake in the spring and fall. If there are many loons on the lake at such times the fishermen expect to be bothered more or less by them as they are inveterate purloiners of set-line bait—live and dead minnows and shiners—by diving to the bottom and cleaning off the bait by the hook. It frequently happens that in doing this a loon will swallow hook and all, and unless he can break the anchorage or fastening of the set line on the bottom, that loon will have to drown. When the fisherman takes in his lines he will haul up the dead loon.

A fisherman of Keuka hauled up a set line the other morning from a depth of seventy feet, and fast to one of his hooks was a dead loon. That is the deepest a loon was ever known to dive in Lake Keuka, although they have often been taken on set lines at a depth of forty and fifty feet. A Hammondsport fisherman had a set line planted in the inlet of the lake at this place. He went over it early one morning last week, just after, as it had happened two loons had gone down to the bottom, and attacked the bait fish on the line. Both birds had hooked themselves. When they were drawn to the surface they were still in good wind. As he hauled them in the loons angrily resented their capture, and made a combined attack on the fishermen. He tried to overpower the fierce divers but they were too much for him, and routed him completely. In the melee they broke the snoods or short lines that held them to the set line, and flew away with them dangling from their mouths.—N. Y. Sun.

HOW HE DRUMS.

A New Theory Concerning the Noise Made by the Grouse.

Mr. W. H. Gibson says: In the so called "drumming" of the ruffled grouse, that soft murmurous tatoo by which his ardent lordship musters his little company of willing captives, we have another familiar sound as yet as much wrapped in mystery as the "boom" of the night-hawk.

What is the origin and nature of that "drum" which has so long puzzled the world?

Many naturalists have definitely located this mysterious drum, the hollow "drumming log" having long been considered a necessary adjunct to this muffled roll. Such has been the most commonly-accepted theory, seemingly abetted by the bird itself, from its singular preference for a fallen log as the seat of the musical performance. Brewer claims that the bird "beats its sides and the log" simultaneously; a belief which is shared by Samuels and many others. Against this I would oppose the witness of an unprofessional but close observer—the writer, in fruit—who deposes and says that the bird does nothing of the kind; that in the one instance, though brief, when its movements were observed by him, the clearly-defined limit of the visible whirr of the wings seen from behind demonstrated that no feather of the bird's wing touched the body, or the log upon which the bird stood; while, upon the other hand, the feathery halo almost merged over the back, suggesting a new possibility in the resonant source.—Harper's Monthly.

ANNOYED BY A NICKNAME.

The name of "Sunset," which clung to the late Samuel S. Cox, was a constant source of annoyance to that genial statesman.

"On one occasion," said Senator Vest the other day, "Mr. Cox was paying a flying visit to the scenes of his boyhood in Ohio, and attended church on Sunday. The pastor took for his text, 'As a servant desireth the shadow.' The preacher began by saying he had seen a picture illustrating the text, which represented a slave looking toward the West, waiting for the end of the day's work. I was entitled, 'Longing for Sunset.' The preacher dwelt upon the worthies of both Testaments. He pictured Jacob longing for Joseph and old Simeon's desire to go as soon as his eyes were made glad. He hinged his discourse entirely upon the word 'sunset.' Mr. Cox became nervous and annoyed; he tore and fidgeted with his prayer-book, and shifted about in his seat until the minister in a burst of eloquence said: "When the river is passed, the dark swollen floods surmounted and Heaven attained there will be unshadowed joy, for there will be no 'sunset' in Heaven." Then he closed his book, and Mr. Cox, with a stately and dignified tread, went out into the clear morning air.—Chicago Evening Journal.

The Johannesburg Cemetery.

Mr. Walter Besant once wrote a pathetic description of the churchyard at Bournemouth, where so many young folks are buried, but the following note from Johannesburg tells a still more pathetic tale: "One of the saddest sights in the world is the cemetery at Johannesburg. It is a heart-breaking place. A piece of raw veld on the slope of a hill above the town has been inclosed, and this is the last resting-place of between twelve and fourteen hundred people, the larger portion of whom are young fellows between nineteen and thirty, who rushed up here convinced that a few months would see them rich for life. Most of the graves are nameless, but all are numbered. Just beyond the cemetery is a glittering mountain. When the sun shines on it it sparkles with a thousand prismatic colors and looks like the entrance to the palace of diamonds, where the fairy Florizella lives; but in reality it is merely the place to which all the rubbish of Johannesburg is carted, and, as apparently half the food of the town comes out of tins, the result is a meretricious splendor quite in keeping with the other attractions of Goldopolis."—London Daily News.

"I HATE TO ASK MY DOCTOR."

False modesty and procrastination are responsible for much female suffering. We can excuse the instinctive delicacy that suggests concealment to the young, but there is no excuse for those who reject the assistance of a woman.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S Vegetable Compound is an entire and permanent cure for the worst forms of female disease, and instantly relieves all weaknesses and ailments peculiar to the sex. It is sold by all Druggists as a standard article, or sent by mail, in form of Pills or Lozenges, on receipt of $1.00.

The Two Ruffians Who Committed the Crime Are Known—Detectives Now on Their Track—Threats of Lynching Made by Indignant Citizens—Robbery the Motive Which Prompted the Deed.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 22.—John Toms, 54 years old, who for the last three winters has been caretaker of the old Felter mansion on the Hamilton street road, about a mile and a half from the boundary line of New Brunswick, is the survivor of an experience of physical torture so diabolical in conception and so cold blooded in execution that few men ever suffered the like and lived to tell the story.

For nearly 52 hours he was suspended by his wrists, which had first been bound behind him, from a hook in a dark closet in a deserted house, his toes just grazing the floor, the closet door closed upon him and the faint hope of rescue that his cries for help might bring banished by a gag which left him powerless to utter any sound.

Scene of the Outrage.

The property is the summer residence of Mrs. Jane Kilpatrick, of 140 Hamilton avenue, this city. That lady, who is quite wealthy, occupied the residence until October last, when she returned to her city residence for the winter. Before leaving for the season, she hired John Toms to take care of the property during her absence.

On the other side of the road is another house, formerly the property of John Boundey, but now in the possession of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, of New York. Until a few months ago, it was occupied by another family. The latter moved away in October, and then two men, apparently single, took possession of it. One was known as John Walker. His companion was called Frank.

The Cowardly Attack.

About noon Saturday last two men entered the Kilpatrick house. Toms was in and when he accosted them they joked with him a few moments, but refused to leave the premises. Finally, while one held him in conversation the other went behind him and felled him to the floor with a terrific blow on the head. They then dragged him to the second story of the house into a small clothes room. Here they tied his hands and leges together.

The defenseless man appealed for mercy. He asked the robbers to release him, and depart with what they had already taken, some $57. They answered his pitiful pleas by carrying him into a hall bedroom, where they passed another rope through that with which his hands were tied behind his back, and throwing it over a hook on the wall, they slowly drew him up until his feet scarcely ouched the floor, and he was suspended in a position that caused him untold agony. They also effactually gagged him with a towel.

They then shut the door, locked it on the outside, piled a large lot of furniture against it, and went off leaving Toms to die like a dog.

Starving and in Agony.

There he hung like a martyr hour after hour. He could neither move nor turn, nor cry for help. He lapsed into unconsciousness again and again, only to recover and realize his terrible position.

How He Was Rescued.

When Toms failed to appear at Mrs. Kilpatrick's on Saturday with the milk, as was his usual custom, the family wondered and felt a little anxious, but thought it might be due to the inclement weather. On Monday, Toms not having yet appeared, Miss Lydia Kilpatrick went out to the country house. She found the house locked. Miss Kilpatrick at once secured the assistance of Oliver Stevenson, a neighbor, and they broke into the house. Not finding Toms on the first floor, they went upstairs, and heard a groan from the victim inside the hall room.

When the door was opened, they beheld a fearful sight. The old man was suspended by his wrists. From Saturday afternoon to the greater part of Monday, or for 51 hours, he had hung, with throbbing blood vessels, blinding lights and gangrened sores, making intense torture. When found, his wrists were cut to the bone by the cruel ropes, blood staining his shirt sleeves, and blood also oozing from his mouth from the cruel gag. His rescuers cut him down, and did everything possible for his relief until he could be taken to Mrs. Kilpatrick's house in town.

Threats of Lynching Made.

The news of the crime spread rapidly through the place and caused intense excitement. Men stood in groups and discussed the matter, and hinted at the proper method of punishing the criminals. A grey-haired old man of pronounced respectability, who stood in front of the postoffice, said, as he whacked the walk with his cane,

"Men who would commit a crime of that kind ought to be cremated alive, and then the community would be extending to them an unmerited courtesy."

As the scene of the crime is in Somerset County, which is across the line from the county in which New Brunswick is situated, the only thing the officers could do was to secure warrants for the two men on a charge of larceny. Armed with these they started out on their search.

That Toms did not die many hours before he was discovered excites astonishment. His recovery is doubtful. Even should he survive he will probably be an invalid for the rest of his life.

The Connecticut Legislature Votes Him Another Term at Washington.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 22.—Only one Democratic member of the House was absent when the roll call began on the vote for United States Senator. The result of the joint ballot was as follows: Total number of votes 275, necessary to elect 138. Orville H. Platt received 141 and Carlos French 134. Mr. Platt was declared elected.

The Senate reassembled immediately after the joint session. After a long discussion a resolution of protest against General Merwin calling the Senate to order was passed. The Senate then adjourned to Tuesday, Jan 27.

Entertaining Gov. Hill.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 22.—The first dinner given to Gov. Hill after his election as United States Senator occurred at the elegant rooms of the Albany Club in this city. The dinner was given by Col. Wm. G. Rice, who was one of the original appointees of Gov. Cleveland, and after Mr. Cleveland went to Washington, became the successor of Col. D. S. Lamont as private secretary to Gov. Hill, which position he held until the appointment of Col. T. S. Williams. The dinner was most thoroughly enjoyed by Senator-elect Hill, and, although no speeches were made, the affair had something of a political bearing. Many distinguished Democrats were present.

An American Schooner Lost.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—News of the foundering of the American schooner Maggie F. Gray, and the possible loss of her captain and crew of three men, reached this city this morning from Baltimore. The vessel sailed on December 16 from Grand Cayman for Baltimore with a cargo of salt. She was under the command of Capt. Johnson. Nothing was heard of the schooner after she sailed until a piece of wreckage identified as coming from her was picked up near Cayman.

Warrants have been issued for his arrest.

Formally Declared Senator.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 22.—The two Houses of the Legislature met in joint convention, but a joint ballot for United States Senator was not unnecessary under the law, as Senator Cameron received a majority in each House. The Deadlock Continues Over the Elections Bill.

PLAYING A WAITING GAME.

Vice-President Morton Holds the Key to the Situation.

Senator Cameron's Name Worked Into the Silver Pool—A Plan to Avoid an Extra Session—The Appropriations to be Extended Six Months—The President Distributes Several Bottles of Lymph.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The game of cross-purposes being played in the Senate is in such a state that a prediction as to the final outcome would amount to nothing more than mere conjecture.

The Democrats have entered upon a policy of delay that can only be offset by some flank movement on the part of the Republicans, backed by a ruling favorable to the majority party by the Vice-President.

The Republicans are playing a waiting game. They think that protracted sessions may tire the Democrats to such a degree that little resistance will be offered to some motion that will lead up to the approval of the journal, and the consequent resumption of unfinished business—the consideration of the elcture rule. But the Democrats say that they are determined not to be tired out.

Messrs. Morgan, Gray and Kenna have been selected as the next speakers, and as they are men of wonderful physical endurance there is apparently but a small chance for the Republicans to successfully carry out their plan.

A thorough discussion of the situation has taken place among the Republican leaders, resulting in the general agreement that Mr. Morton holds the key to the situation. But the main difficulty is for Mr. Morton to find an opportunity to make use of the key. This he cannot do, it is said, without making some radical ruling.

The House was in a wrangle again during the discussion on the approval of the journal, and hot words were exchanged between Mr. Mills and several Republican leaders.

NO EXTRA SESSION.

A Plan to Avoid It by Extending the Appropriations Six Months.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—The apparent indifference of the Committee on Rules to the amount of time now being consumed in debate in the House is explained to some extent by the fact that the majority have arranged a plan of campaign.

Several of the leaders, who are particularly interested in the Elections bill, are determined that the measure, if it comes from the Senate, shall be passed at all hazards.

They propose to pass at the same time, and with the same quorum, a joint resolution extending the appropriations for a period of six months, or from July 1, 1891, to Jan. 1, 1892.

They hold that if it is legal to extend appropriations one or two months, as is frequently done, it is permissible to extend them six months.

By this means an extra session can be avoided, and yet the various departments will not suffer on account of the failure of the appropriation bills to pass.

THE SILVER POOL.

Mr. Vest Says that Senator Cameron Dealt in Silver.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The Silver Pool Investigating Committee examined Congressman Dockery of Missouri, who introduced the resolution of investigation. Mr. Dockery said he had heard no Congressman say he was interested in any siver pool, but had heard a Senator say that a Senator or member, he could not remember which, was implicated.

Senator Vest, Mr. Dockery admitted after some hesitation, was the man who made the remark.

Senator Vest was called and testified that Senator Cameron told him he had bought and sold silver after the vote in the Senate and that Mr. Cameron said that he thought he had a perfect right to do this because the vote had been taken and his action therefore could not be influenced.

The Dominion's Finances in a Bad State.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—A dispatch from Ottawa says that one of the leading financiers of the Dominion said that "it is useless to ignore the fact that Canada is now in a bad state. There is no money in the country and none coming in. Money now being withdrawn from the savings banks is not going into banks but is being spent. An immense sum of money has to be sent abroad this month to pay interest on the bonds, etc. These payments will cripple us still further. If there is a surplus of grain in the northwest it is not being removed. The lumber trade is dead, and the McKinley bill restricts dealings with the United States."

THE ROAD TIED UP.

Traffic Stopped on the Chicago & Erie by the Dispatchers' Strike.

CHICAGO, Jan. 22.—While the Chicago & Erie Railroad is seriously crippled by the strike of the train-dispatchers, operators and a few conductors on the Chicago division, it cannot be said that the strikers have gained anything by the serious stoppage of traffic.

In fact, if there has been any change in the situation at this end of the line during the past 24 hours, it would appear that the strikers had been slightly worsted in the fight.

At a meeting of switchmen and yardmen, they refused to side with the strikers, claiming that the cause of the strike did not concern their organization at all. This action disconcerted the strikers very much, and is no doubt the reason why the engineers have remained at their posts also.

"The company concluded to stop all freight traffic for the present," said General Manager Tucker, "but it may be resumed to-morrow. With the exception of a local accommodation train, all our regular passenger trains went out to-day, manned by regular crews."

Mr. Tucker stated, emphatically that under no circumstances would the company recede from its position in regard to the discharge of Train Dispatcher Scott.

Rich and Robinson were engaged in the wholesale boot and shoe business at Bradford, Pa., and obtained credit to the amount of about $100,000 from different houses throughout the East.

On December 20 they left for parts unknown, after disposing of about all their stock. The prisoners were both accompanied by their wives when arrested, and were on their way to England.

An Avalanche of Bills.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 22.—A great mass of bills was presented in the House, covering almost every conceivable subject. The Speaker got tired of the business by the time he had reached Lebanon County, and stopped. The call for the bills will be resumed to-morrow. Nearly every member had a liquor bill of some sort to introduce, and there were at least a dozen of them read in place. It is understood that the bill of Fow, of Philadelphia, will be the official one, since it has been revised and approved by the judges of that city.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 22.—In the Greek Catholic Church at Hazleton there is a great deal of trouble. Six of the six trustees entered the apartments of the priest and demanded the money of the church. The priest called for assistance, but no one heard him.

Full Attendance at the Opening of Parliament To-Day.

THE GOVERNMENT CONFIDENT.

Relying on Parnell's Assistance to Pass Balfour's Land Purchase Bill.

The Liberals Score a Victory Over a Unionist Candidate—Revolutionists Gaining in Chili—President Balmaceda Ready to Flee on Account of Desertion of His Troops.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—Parliament reopened to-day with a much better situation for the Government than it had at the close of the preceding session. The official outlook is more or less encouraging.

The Liberals will be obliged to stand aside while the Ministry and Parnell discuss amendments to Balfour's Land Purchase bill, as they will control a sure majority and be able to do very much as they please with the House. It will be interesting to see whether the patriotic Irish members will range themselves under Mr. Gladstone's or Mr. Parnell's lead on the land question. It is not at all certain what direction the debate will take on either side.

Mr. Justin McCarthy will ask for a day when he can introduce a motion in connection with the administration of the Crimes act, especially with reference to the Tipperary trials.

Lord Salisbury said he did not believe that Home Rule was either dead or on the point of victory, and that many positions must be carried before it could be victorious. Even if Mr. Gladstone should succeed in passing his mysterious Home Rule bill, it would be the duty of Unionists to persevere and undue the work.

THE REBELS WINNING.

Captain O'Shea Backs Justin McCarthy.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—It has transpired that Captain O'Shea last December addressed a communication to Mr. Justin McCarthy, the anti-Parnellite leader, demanding an apology for remarks made by him (McCarthy) to the effect that a different color might have been given to Mr. Parnell's conduct with regard to Mrs. O'Shea had Capt. O'Shea been vigorously cross-examined. Failing to receive any satisfaction, Capt. O'Shea has addressed the following peremptory note to Mr. McCarthy: "However funny you must always appear as a leader of men, ill-constructed dummy that you are, the straw starting from every seam, acknowledge that you possess two qualifications for your present post—meanness and mendacity."

The Divided Irish Party.

DUBLIN, Jan. 22.—The Freeman's Journal says that it regrets that the Irish party in Parliament for the first time in years is disunited on the re-assembling of Parliament. The conferences, according to the Journal, have not tended to advance the questions in dispute further towards a solution.

Kalakaua's Remains Sent Home To-day on an American Warship.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—The funeral of the dead King Kalakaua is taking place this afternoon. There are 12 acting and 12 honorary pallbearers. General Gibbons is grand marshal of the funeral escort. After the services at Trinity Church the remains will be escorted by United States troops, second brigade California National Guard and various Masonic bodies to the wharf, where they will be officially received by Rear-Admiral Brown and conveyed on board the flagship Charleston which will be ready to receive them. The Charleston will then sail immediately for Honolulu. The King's personal attendants, Colonels McFarlane and Baker will accompany the remains.

The steamer Australia, which has just arrived from Honolulu, brought the news that extensive preparations were being made to welcome the King on his return to the islands. The King was expected to return about to-day week, and the whole city will be decorated. Triumphal arches are being built, and the troops and volunteers have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for a parade. There was to be a ball on the evening of the King's arrival and his return was to be the signal for a season of festivities. The triumphal arch and houses will now have to be stripped of their gay coloring and emblems of mourning put on in their stead.

A cablegram received a few days ago by Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, announced the safe arrival in Europe of his mother, Mrs. Warren Marsh.

Edward Milliken, of Central avenue, who recently returned from a hunting trip to South Carolina, says that his party shot over 600 quail in a few days.

At the annual meeting and election of officers of the Bridge athletic club, held in Brooklyn recently, Edward Foster, formerly of this city where his mother still resides, was chosen president.

Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Jr., and Vincent W. Baker, of this city, have been enjoying a visit from their father and mother of Asbury Park. Mr. Baker, senior, though 65 years of age does not look over 40. He bathes in the surf when home every morning of his life, Summer and Winter.

A Prosperous Organization.

Chamberlin, of Brooklyn, made an excellent address. The basket collection amounted to $70.

Cows by the Quart.

In Sussex county, they sell cows by the quart. They give the cow a fair week's trial, keeping correct account of the number of quarts of milk she gives, and then divide it by seven, giving the number of quarts daily. The rule is to pay $2.50 a quart. If the cow gives an average of 20 quarts daily, she is then valued at $50; if, say, 16 quarts daily, then the price is $40.

Allow me to add my tribute to the efficacy of Ely's Cream Balm. I was suffering from a severe attack of influenza and catarrh and was induced to try your remedy. The result was marvelous. I could hardly articulate, and in less than twenty four hours the catarrhal symptoms and my hoarseness disappeared and I was able to sing a heavy role in Grand Opera with voice unimpaired. I strongly recommend it to all singers.—Wm. H. Hamilton, leading basso of the C. D. Hess Grand Opera Co.

MR. MARSH VIEWED FROM NEWARK.

Law for Lawyers and Law for Laymen.

[Editorial in The Newark Evening News.]

Every day newspaper readers are likely to hear of new rights and privileges peculiar to lawyers. Recently there came from an eminent Judge a statement which can be construed as meaning that a lawyer has some special right not enjoyed by a layman to considerate treatment when he is accused of contempt of court, and a few days later in the Somerset County Court a Plainfield lawyer made an equally remarkable assertion of the especial privilege which doth hedge a member of the bar. It appears that for the purpose of merely influencing a jury to give a verdict of the kind which he desired in a libel case he had in his address before the twelve peers reflected severely upon the conduct and character of a witness. This witness is the editor of Plainfield paper, and is seemingly cordially hated by the publishers of a rival journal in the same town. In the latter paper a full report of the lawyer's severe animadversions was published. Now it happens that the counsellor is on terms of personal friendship with the editorial witness whose acts he described before the jury in the terms which might have been used in dealing with those of a thief. The editor, it appeared, had made a very natural blunder in the case in question, and as he had done all that he could and more than he could have been expected to do to retrieve it, he naturally felt aggrieved when his rival blazoned to the world these severe reflections upon him.

Sorry that he had hurt the feelings of his journalistic friend, and not forgetful, perhaps, of the fact that the latter might before long find opportunity for effectual retaliation, the lawyer decided to take it all back. Accordingly, at the next session of the court—after the jury had retired and was out of hearing—he made an apology. He said that he had been represented as likening the editor to a thief, but that he had not done so. All that he had done had been to say that his own client's liability had been no more than if he had locked up the article furnished by him to the editor in his drawer, and it had been stolen and published without his authority. The Judge, the courtroom audience and the editor having had time to see the beautiful difference of the distinction the lawyer continued. "Sometimes counsel in their zeal for a client," he said, "will in the heat of argument unduly criticise the witness for the other side. In such a case it would be improper for a newspaper to publish an accurate report of such criticism, much more an inaccurate report."

In other words, lawyers addressing a Jury have a right to accuse or abuse witnesses in such fashion that it would be improper for a newspaper to publish their remarks. They have a right to libel witnesses in open court when they want to do so, and it is a crime to call attention to their actions. It has been stated that they have also privileges denied to laymen in the matter of contempt of court, and notoriously when holding public office they can safely take fees which would be regarded as bribes if accepted by men outside of the profession.

What an interesting and instructive thing it would be for some able jurist to collect in a big book a list of the immunities which lawyers enjoy from the ordinary rules and responsibilities of civilized human conduct.

Some Plainfield Knights to Meet Illustrious People.

The thirteenth annual reception of the famous Palestine Commandery, Knights Templar, of New York city, will be held in the Metropolitan Opera House in that city, Thursday evening of next week. The most elaborate preparations have been made for this occasion, which promises to be the grandest and most successful social event of the season. Stephen D. Affick, formerly of Plainfield, is one of Palestine's most prominent and popular members, and a number of the members of Trinity Commandery, this city, will also attend.

The reception of Palestine Commandery is always looked forward to by the elite of New York city with keenest anticipation, and is usually attended not only by the most distinguished and exalted Masons of that and adjoining States, but by the leading society people of New York and neighboring cities. The Reception Committee announce that among the distinguished gentlemen who have signified acceptance and will be present are the Hon. J. W. Longley, Attorney-General of Halifax, N. S.; the Hon. Wilfred Laurier, M. P., Quebec; Gov. Hill; Mayor Grant; the Hon. Erastus Wiman; ex-President Cleveland; and Gen. Sherman.

One of the grand features of the reception is the Templar drill, which has given this Commandery a national reputation, and several new and brilliant figures, besides the Maltese and Roman crosses, stars, etc., will be executed this year under direction of the Captain-General. The Metropolitan Opera House will be elaborately and tastefully decorated with the magnificent military symbols of Templar Masonry. Cappa's famous Seventh Regiment Band and Neyer's Orchestra will furnish the music.

It is Roycefield Now.

The names of the station Ricefield, on the South Branch Railroad, and of the post-office Roysfield, at the same place, have both been changed to Roycefield. The change has been authorized by the officials of the Railroad Company and Post Office Department, and went into effect at the beginning of the present year.

A Complaint Against School Ventilation.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Real estate brokers are necessarily the custodians of objections and complaints from all quarters. The latest bit of faultfinding concerns the bad ventilation of some of the public school rooms. Because of mismanagement of the vent of one room in particular in the Bryant building, tax-payers have had to take their children out of school, and others threaten to do the same. Please make public this matter, as the parties at fault have been remonstrated with.

E. U. M.

[The correspondent evidently wishes to be understood not that the systems of ventilation in the different schools buildings are at fault, but that the teachers in the class rooms do not properly and intelligently manipulate those systems.]

Fanwood Can't Raise Ten Good Bowlers.

The bowlers of the Fanwood club went to Elizabeth, last evening, and were defeated for the second time this week. It seems that five reliable bowlers are all that Fanwood can raise, and they are outclassed in ten-men contests. The score was:

ELIZABETH ATH. CLUB.		FANWOOD.
Foster	153	Force	161
Whipple	196	H. Kyte	161
Price	122	Hamlin	107
Golden	150	G. Kyte	110
Pond	159	Warren	151
Barber	127	Brown	147
Gustin	161	Handy	156
Bauer	150	Stevens	198
Downes	121	Smith	147
Lenher	157	Moore	173
	1,505		1,566

After the game the Fanwood men were handsomely entertained by members of the Elizabeth Club.

They Had an "Elegant" Reception in Plainfield.

The following, from the manager of the Gilbert Dramatic Society, which appeared in Music Hall, Tuesday evening, was received the next day. It is a most unexpected testimonial of appreciation; and its spontaneous and speedy expression of good feeling, evidences its sincerity:

Wm. H Lyon, Jr.,

DEAR SIR AND BRO.—Permit me on behalf of my company to extend to you and the members of Plainfield Council, our most sincere thanks for the many kindnesses we received at your hands and the elegant manner in which we were received.

Our only hope is that we merited your many favors. With kind regards and best wishes for the welfare of Plainfield, I am, yours in 1105,

JAS. J. DARLING.

L. M. Codington, Sheriff, to Ann M. Noyes, property in North Plainfield, $200.

Frivolities From the "Central Times."

"If the waters could speak as they flow" by Stiger's Alley they would probably say "dam."

Plainfield's new fire alarm chime-gong wakes up the people of Bound Brook when is is sounded. It can be heard almost as plainly in Somerville, too, but Somervillians never wake up.

The Somerset Messenger announces that "our public schools are badly in need of paint" and forgets to explain whether it refers to the buildings or the teachers.

Losing Their Places Because of Bad Habits.

At least one of the large manufacturing institutions of the city has been making inquiry into the mode of living and general habits of employes, and some unexpected discharges have been made as a consequence. An officer of a company said recently: "We don't care to know anything about the private lives of employes that they don't want to tell us; but we have found it imperative to be informed whenever a man forms drinking or gambling habits and to drop him in consequence."

South Plainfield's New Railway.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, re-elected officers and directors Tuesday. The annual report showed about $17,000,000 receipts, of which, after paying all expenses, there was only about $100,000 surplus. The report says:

The elaborate and costly extensions planned by the Company are rapidly approaching completion. The line across New York State, from Geneva to Buffalo, will be finished some time this year, and the line from South Plainfield to Jersey City by the way of Newark will also be completed soon. This will make a new route from Lake Erie to tidewater. The Company has arranged for a coal storage depot at South Plainfield with a capacity of 1,250,000 tons, has completed a coal storage terminal near Buffalo with a capacity of 150,000 tons, and intends to establish a freight and coal depot at Constable Hook. Other improvements are being made at various points. The Company has ordered 2,000 house cars and 1,000 coal cars in anticipation of heavy traffic this year.

What will most surprise you, when taking Hires' Cough Cure, is how effective and pleasant it is to take. That hacking cough that disturbs your friends, and kept you awake all night, will yield immediately to its magical properties.

Among the Theatres.

William Mestayer, one of the two "Babes" in the pantomime of "Babes in the Wood" at Niblo's, withdrawe from the cast at the end of the New York engagement. The management intend to replace him with a certain Thespian, confessed to be the leanest, tallest, lankest and most hungry-looking being connected with the stage of this country. This will make a nice contrast to the three hundred and fifty pounds of avoirdupois known as George K. Fortescue.

The desire for realism in stage presentation is still rampant. In "Noah's Ark," a new local melodrama which brings old Josh Hart once more into the field of theatricals, a realistic fire scene will be introduced supplemented by the novel introduction of "shooting the life-line," a new feature in the life-saving apparatus of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade. Brooklyn Bridge, City Hall and the new Pulitzer World building will be among the scenic novelties of the new piece which will receive its initial presentation at Niblo's after the end of the pantomime season, a week from Saturday.

New York couldn't stand the loss of "The Old Homestead," and Denman Thompson has decided to return it to the stage of the Academy, on Monday evening, with its original cast and exquisite scenic surroundings supplemented by a number of new features. An idea of the hold the remarkable play has upon the playgoers of the big city may be gleaned from the fact that on the day the announcement was made of its contemplated return the advance sale of seats amounted to over $3,000. Its temporary withdrawal was to afford Mr. Thompson and his company a relief from the fatigue necessarily incident to the uninterrupted enacting of the same roles for so many consecutive seasons at the Academy.

The person who goes to Proctor's Theatre, Twenty-third street, New York, to see "Men and Women" on the strength of its long run, will not wonder at the great success of this beautiful play. He can find no fault with the actors and actresses in the cast, who are all competent people. Nor can he find fault with the play; therefore, it is a success. The third act, however, explains the success of "Men and Women." The midnight meeting of the bank officials is an elaborate and well-wrought drama in itself. The silence of the real culprit, the agony of the innocent suspect, the action of the different characters under the intense excitement of the financial crisis, are all certainly worth seeing, though two very interesting acts precede this climax, and another follows after. It is worth going twice to see the guilty man, as yet unsuspected, take the handcuffs from the table, after his innocent friend has been handed over, to a detective, and, placing them around his own wrists, wait in the darkened room for the officer's return. The true, deep penitence of a man who regrets his sin, and makes reparation at every cost to himself, could find no stronger representation than is given in this scene. Thackeray says that many a poem has been written around one really beautiful line that has occurred to the author. Similarly, one is inclined to think, the writers of "Men and Women" were inspired by their conception of this midnight meeting; they wrote a play around it. They knew that with a scene like that in it the play could not fail. Their judgment was correct.

—A handsome inkstand, with bottles of black and crimson ink, mucilage, etc., valued in all at $2.50, is being offered for $1.00 by Carter, Dinsmore & Co., to introduce their goods. In the cent-a-word column of this issue an advertisement tells how to get it all.

Are O! so fair to see,
But fairer than these flowers are
In the rose that blooms for me
On the cheeks once pale and hollow,
And God be thanked, I say,
That the rose of health and happiness
Blooms out again to-day.

That is what many a man feels like saying when he sees some member of his family restored to health after a long and wasting illness. In many households there are persons who seem to be fading out of life slowly. There is a general debility that indicates a lack of vital force. The blood seems to be blood only in color. There is often a dry, hard cough. Night brings no refreshing sleep. The cheek grows thin and pale. What shall be done to ward off disease which is making slow but sure efforts to secure another victim? Let me tell you: Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and fight the enemy with it. There is nothing like it to build up a weakened system, and restore lost vitality. It is a most wonderful tonic, nutritive and alterative, or blood-purifier.

TO PRESERVE THE SABBATH.

Pastors and Laymen Organizing to Oppose Desecration and Abolishment of the Day of Rest and Holy Worship.

Sermons will be preached in the churches of Plainfield Sunday, and other action outlined below will be taken, in accordance with the suggestions of the following letter:

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 15, 1891.

DEAR BROTHER:—At a recent meeting of the clergy of Newark, of all denominations, the subscribers were appointed a committee to call the attention of their brethern throughout the State to a matter of common concern.

The liquor interest of New Jersey is now demanding the abrogation of fatal alteration of our Sunday laws. Last September the Saloon-Keepers' Association, in annual convention, adopted a series of resolutions embracing three essential points: the lowering of the present license, to a minimum of $100, the opening of the saloons on Sunday after 12 o'clock, M., and the repeal of the statute which declares "that the sale of liquor on Sunday constitutes a disorderly house." Now the Legislature is to be approached. Indeed, an active lobby is already at work in Trenton, to effect the desired revolution.

Let us not forget that the American Sunday is incorporated in public law. In legal language, it is dies non, does not exist for purposes of secular business. On this day the National and State Legislatures hold no sessions; the courts do not sit; the exchanges are closed; the banks are shut; the places of amusement are barred and bolted.

The law does not command public worship; it simply secures it. It is based, not on religion, but on economic grounds. It is set aside as a rest day. This phase of the question concerns every one—Jew and gentile, agnostic and believer; the public as a whole, composed of all races and all creeds. The religious use of the Sunday depends for its maintenance upon the individual. But this economic character of the day has been determined by the public expressing itself through statutes.

One of the ablest and purest of the Judges of the United States Supreme Court, Mr. Justice Field, has forcibly said: "Laws setting aside Sunday as a day of rest are upheld, not from any right of the government to legislate for the promotion of religious observances, but from its right to protect all persons from the physical and moral debasement which comes from uninterrupted labor. Such laws have always been deemed beneficent and merciful laws, especially to the poor and dependent, to the laborers in our factories and workshops, and in the heated rooms of our cities; and their validity has been sustained by the highest courts of the several States."

Now, the practical question is this: possessing such a day in the settled customs of the Nation, and in the long-established recognition and sanction of public law, are we ready to surrender it, or essentially to change its character? The American Sunday is just as distinctively an American institution as are the free schools and the ballot-box. Imagine the indignation which would blast the person who should propose to abolish the free school system, or who should venture to lay a sacrilegious hand upon that ark of political liberty, the ballot-box.

Thus far we have called your attention only to those phases of the issue which are of universal interest. But as clergymen we cannot forget the Fourth Commandment. We demand the maintenance of the laws which guard the Sabbath on higher grounds than public expediency. God has spoken. This day is His day. We say to the saloon-keepers: Hands off! You are seeking to touch the ark, and your sacrilege will bring upon you the awful punishment of Uzzah!* Meddling with divine sanctions is dangerous, especially meddling with them in order to sell rum.

And, pray, why should the saloons be accorded a privilege which is denied to honest business? Why should liquor be sold on a day when groceries, clothing, dry goods, and shoes are shelved by law behind closed doors? Our Jewish fellow-citizens, and others who observe the Seventh day as a Sabbath, are nevertheless compelled to remain idle on the first day of the week. Are the saloon keepers to be given an advantage enjoyed by no one else? Shall we have in New Jersey an aristocracy of beer, a privileged class whose source is liquor selling?

Another point. If the saloons are opened on Sunday, that day will be transformed into a Saturnalia. There will be more drunkenness and more disorder on Sunday afternoon and evening than at any other time. For then there is more leisure for guzzling and rowdyism. Sunday-school children and church-goers will be jostled and hustled when going to and from the House of God. We protest against this in the interest of sober and quiet Sunday streets.

Assuming your interest in this issue, as a matter of course, we urgently request you to unite with your brethren throughout the State in calling the attention of your congregation to the subject in a sermon on Sunday, the 29th of January, 1891. Sound the trumpet with no uncertain tone! "When bad men combine,"—says Edmund Burke—"the good must organize." Let us work as well as pray for the preservation of the American Sunday. In the past it has been, in the future it will be, the creator and conservator of the noblest feature of individual and national character.

We beg you, in addition to your sermon, personally to see the representative from your town or district, and to move your influential parishioners to co-operate with you, for the purpose of informing him of the peril, and of the feeling regarding it.

Should you prefer, a mass meeting might be called in place of, or in addition to your sermon, with addresses by competent laymen. Please, also, to announce your discourse in your town journal; and to secure the publication of this letter, so that our simultaneous action may appear.

God save the State, and keep uplifted the mailed arm of the Commonwealth to protect the right, and to smite the wrong!

BOTH SIDES TO BE HEARD.

The Legislature, Though Democratic, Will Fully Investigate the Charge Against Keys.

[Trenton dispatch to The New York World.]

Most people seem to imagine that the protest against the seating of William J. Keys as Senator from Somerset county will not receive any consideration because he is a Democrat and the majority in the Senate is of the same faith. This impression was strengthened by the appointment of Senators McDonald, Keys and Carter as the Elections Committee. Those who know President Adrain regarded this as one of his characteristic jokes, but sober-minded people took it as a defiance to the Republicans who wrongfully unseated Senator McDonald last Winter and an intimation that they need not look for any consideration in their attempt to prove that Senator Keys had not the legal qualifications in the matter of residence in this State for the required period.

No attempt is made to justify President Adrain's selection of Mr. Keys as one of the judges of his own case. His warmest admirers admit that it was a blunder—though an unintential one—that will have to be retrieved as quickly as possible. Senator Keys feels the delicacy of his position, and will probably asked to be relieved.

But it can be stated authoritatively that the Republicans will have all the opportunity they want to present evidence in support of their protest.

"The protest was referred to our committee about five minutes' before the Senate adjourned on Tuesday,"—says Senator McDonald—"and it was too late to do anything. Until then the Committee had nothing to do. Now it has something to do, and I shall call the Committee together at the earliest moment, probably Monday night, to organize and map out a plan of procedure. We shall give ample opportunity for both sides to be heard. We shall first examine the protest and find out what is charged, and then hear any statements or evidence to be submitted in support of it. Senator Keys, will, I presume, be represented by counsel, and we shall hear anything that is to be said on his side of the case. In a general way that's what we'll do, but of course the actual details cannot be foreshadowed until the Committee meet. We have not yet had any talk over the matter, but so far as I am concerned the investigation will be a thorough one, and everybody interested will have an opportunity to be heard."

"Do you know whether Senator Keys intends to retain his membership on the Committee?"

"I cannot speak for Mr. Keys. If he does not want to stay on the Committee the matter is in his own hands."

The Shotwell Verdict a Great Surprise.

[From The Somerville Messenger.]

The verdict of six cents for the plaintiff in the Shotwell-Rice case, by the jury, was a great surprise to a large number of people of this county. It did appear, from the evidence, that if there ever was a case of slander that ought to have caused damages it was this one. It is undoubtedly true that Shotwell was publicly defamed by a newspaper attack, and not a single allegation against him sustained; and the editor himself, who wrote and published the defamatory matter, publicly confessed he had been deceived by the defendant, and made a most humble and satisfactory apology. We cannot understand how the jury can be satisfied with its own verdict, except on the ground that untrue as the charges were they did not believe they damaged the plaintiff, which is, of course, paying a high compliment to Mr. Shotwell's good name, and that this was satisfaction enough. But if so, the plaintiff should not have been put to any expense in defending his good name.

Many cases of rheumatism, which have resisted the skill of the profession, have promptly yielded to that wonderful remedy, Salvation Oil. 25 cents.

Take the news home to Mary, and tell her that my cough has gone, and that a 25 cent bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup did the blessed work.

W. C. T. U. NOTES.

[In Charge of Superintendent of Press Work.]

The model town of Pullman, Ill., named for the founder and the famous builder of the Pullman cars, is a prohibition town, as indeed all model towns are. An Australian gentleman, becoming interested in this widly-known village, addressed a number of questions to a leading official of Pullman. An English paper gives the result as follows:

1. In what year was the city of Pullman founded? Answer. 1880.

2. What is the population at present (February, 1890)? Answer. 11,000.

3. How many churches does it contain? Answer. Six.

4. How many schools also, and teachers employed? Answer. Four day schools and one night school. Twenty-four teachers.

5. How many lockups or jails? Answer. None.

6. How many magistrates with amount of salaries? Answer. None.

7. Number of police and their cost? Answer. Two at seventy-five dollars per month.

8. What is the annual amount spent in the relief of the poor? Answer. None.

9 Can you furnish us with your statistics of crime? Answer. We have none.

10. Have you any asylums, such as those for lunatics, orphans, benevolent, etc.? Answer. None.

11. Is the trade in strong drink prohibited? Answer. Yes.

12. Do you attribute to the absence of facilities for getting drink an improved state of morals as compared with other cities in your state? Answer. Yes.

The Thursday Afternoon meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms was of unusual interest to those present. The first half-hour was devoted to prayer and testimony. Then followed the parliamentary drill, conducted by the Superintendent. Many came from curiosity, wondering what kind of an exercise would be given. When the class was called on to review plans of organization, elections of officers, branches of work, and how to work effectually, almost every one present took part in a true parliamentary way, offering resolutions, amendments, and amendments to amendments, calling for previous question, etc., in a manner which would have startled some older deliberative heads. As is customary the question basket was passed, and the following were some asked:—How many motions can be sustained by the chair at one time? Is the previous question debatable? Which motions do not require to be seconded? What motions cannot be reconsidered?

Promptness in opening and closing the meetings is a special feature, and those who have not been able to attend the Thursday meetings lately will please notice the hour is 3:30 P. M.

The School of Methods, to be held here in March, under direction of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, will hold its sessions in the Crescent Avenue church. Further notice will be given.

WHO WILL BE SECRETARY?

The Masons Talking of a Successor to the Late Grand Secretary Hough.

There are nearly 14,000 Masons in New Jersey, including Plainfield's 200, and at the present time they are all discussing the merits of a number of men who have been mentioned in connection with the vacant grand secretaryship. Three weeks ago Joseph L. Hough, after being in office for fifty years, suddenly died, and since that time the work of the grand secretary's office has been done by the deputy grand secretary, Thomas H. R. Redway, of Asbury Park.

The grand lodge will meet in annual communication on Tuesday, Jan. 27, in Masonic Temple, Trenton. They will then select a grand secretary. Five men are mentioned in connection with the office, which pays $1,500 a year and carries with it much honor.

Essex county lodges are interested in the candidacy of the Rev. H. Vehslage, of Irvington. He is one of the grand chaplains and is an old-time Mason.

Many of the Masons of this county are working for Dr. Henry R. Cannon of Elizabeth. He is a past grand master, and has for years been chairman of the historical committee, and is working on a history of the order. It is urged that he will be better equipped for his historical researches if in charge of the grand secretary's office.

Within the last few days a new candidate has come to the surface in Jersey City in the presence of Col. John J. Toffey, the present state treasurer.

An Example.

The Royal Baking Powder is advertised in all the best newspapers. Royal Baking Powder is used practically by everybody. The Royal Baking Powder Company give the credit of their success to advertising in the newspapers. They have advertised in THE PRESS for years, and are advertising in THE PRESS yet. Last year it is said the company cleared four hundred thousand dollars. Their trade was won and is largely held by advertising.

Inspecting the Railway Bridges.

R. J. Swackhammer, Master of Bridges, of Dunellen, and G. Q. Dolliver, Clerk of Building Supplies, of North Plainfield, with others, are on a tour of inspection and measurement of all bridges on the Central New Jersey Railroad and branches. Their car went through this city this morning.

AN EXHAUSTING PLACE.

Mistress—I am at a loss to understand your motive in leaving.

Bridget—The work is too harrud, mum, and it's worn out I be entirely.

Mistress—Why, I have done most of it myself!

Bridget—Yes, but it's worn out I be hearing yez tell me of it.—Munsey's Weekly.

Dutch Dignity.

A case brought by a revenue officer has helped to enlighten the proceedings of a somewhat prosaic court of law in Amsterdam. Upon the cause list stood the petition of a tax collector versus the Sultan of Turkey for nonpayment of rent. The judge, as usual, ordered the usher to call both parties before the court. The usher, with his stately step, left the precincts of the court, and in his formal monotone called: "Herr N—— N——, and his Majesty the Sultan of Turkey, Abdul Hamid!" and then returned into court. The Judge—"Are the parties to the suit present?" The Usher—"No, your honor; only the plaintiff. His Majesty the Sultan does not appear." The judge considered the dignity of the court must be upheld, and judgment was given accordingly.—Chicago Evening Mail.

Needless Alarm.

"Who is going to edit the paper while you are away?" inquired the foreman of the Weekly Tomahawk printing office.

"My wife," replied the editor.

"Will she—will she stay here at the office and look after things as you do?" asked the foreman, with blanched cheeks and trembling voice.

"No. She will remain at the house and send her copy down here by one of the boys."

The shadow of a great dread was lifted from the heart of the foreman, and he went about his work with his accustomed cheerfulness. He had feared it would be necessary to have the office towel washed.—Chicago Tribune.

A Welcome Visitor.

"You will have to state your business, sir."

"I have a scheme for getting around the agreement that the railroad presidents entered into yesterday."

"Step in, sir. President Hawkins will be glad to talk with you on this matter."—Puck.

A Response to Applause.

Rawley—Why, Curtin, how is it you were not a first-nighter at your own play?

Curtin—I was too nervous. Are you just from the theater?

Rawley—Yes.

Curtin—Did my pathetic scenes bring any tears?

Rawley—Yes, the people in the house laughed till they cried.—Munsey's Weekly.

An Excellent Bargain.

Mrs. Bargain Hunter—How much are your handkerchiefs?

Ketchem (the clerk, glibly)—These sell at thirty cents, and these at twenty; but if you take one of each you may have them for twenty-five cents apiece.

Mrs. Bargain Hunter (eagerly)—I'll take half a dozen. And she goes home satisfied.—Judge.

Entirely Different.

Smiley—Do you know why you are different from the Willamette river?

Dedbroke—That's a conundrum, and I give it up.

Dedbroke—Well, then, I suppose I'm like the Columbia, which puts all its deposits on the bar.—West Shore.

After the Ball.

Husband—You let that rake, De Courcy, kiss your hand in the conservatory.

Wife—It's an abominable falsehood.

Husband—For shame! I saw it!

Wife (crying)—Now I know you love me no longer, when you believe your own eyes rather than your poor wife's word!—Grip.

A Wicked Man.

First Man—What do you think of Jones? I heard this morning that he actually owes for the wig he wears!

Second Man—That's what you might call a hair-owing case, isn't it?—Texas Siftings.

The Changes Time Brings.

Cholly Cholmondeley—I visited an old aunt to-day, whom I had not seen since I was a baby; and she wewarked that I was much changed. Do you notice it, Hawold?

Hawold Hawkington—No! How stwange!—Jewelers' Circular.

A Modern Instance.

She (at the ball)—I don't know that I have ever met you in the evening before, and I hardly knew you in a dress suit. Isn't the gentleman here who occupies the same apartments with you?

He—No. He stayed home.—Life.

Both Hard at Work.

Advertising Poet—There, Bell, I've got out three lines of my poem already.

Victory for Gladstonians.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—The election at West Hartlepool resulted in the success of the Gladstonian candidate, Mr. Furness, by a vote of 4,003 to 4,305 for Sir William Gray, the Unionist candidate. There is great rejoicing among the Liberals over this victory.

Over 100 Persons Killed.

LONDON, Jan. 22.—From Kharkov, Southern Russia, comes the news of a frightful colliery explosion. The accident occurred at a place called Jasinowata, not far from Kharkov. Over 100 persons were killed.

The Kaiser Surprised the Soldiers.

BERLIN, Jan. 22.—The Hanover garrison was last evening surprised by the arrival there of the Kaiser nine hours before he was expected. Nevertheless the troops were called out and reviewed.

F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.:
For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with one kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many and it has never failed in every case heard from.

BULLETINS FROM BABY.

Pretty Tears from How They Will Be Frequent but Different.

When a young mother and her first born, still a tender monthling, left Pittsburgh to visit friends in the East, the former sent bulletins on postal cards from three or four stopping places to the father, who was, or was supposed to be, in a very critical state of anxiety about the baby's entire safety and happiness.

Here is a sample bulletin: "Baby has been sleeping twenty minutes—before that took a great fancy to that young man you introduced me to in the next section and was rather inclined to be cross because I wouldn't let my precious pull his newspaper to pieces. He cries whenever the train stops, but seems to like the motion of the cars—still sleeping—Harrisburg, 2:45 p. m."

A bachelor friend of the happy father, to whom the latter confided the baby bulletin idea, smiled one of those aggravating smiles the unmarried man keeps constantly in stock and said: "Twenty years hence, old man, that boy of yours will send his own bulletins when he goes a-traveling, and they will be briefer and more stirring messages than his mother's. Something of this sort: 'Dead broke—send twenty dollars quick!'"—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

A LENGTHY INTERRUPTION.

Mr. Cates (of the moonshine district)—You started t' marry us this mornin', parson, an' got as far as askin' us whether we'd hev each other when her ole man came up.

The Parson—I did.

Mr. Cates—Well, we've swum Snake river, clum over Bald mountain an' waded Simm's swamp; an' now that we've shook him, we wanter say "yes" an' wind up th' ceremony.—Judge.

In a Terrible Predicament.

Dashley—Just been reading an account of a shipwreck. A crew remained for days in mid-ocean suffering the cruelest pangs of hunger.

Dashley—They even thought of cannibalism when they were thrown upon a desert island, but even here they could get nothing to eat.

Cashley—Oh, they could have worried along on a little moss or sea-weed or something.

Dashley—Think of it—no cigars to smoke.

Keeping Him a Lover.

Mrs. Sharptongue—D'ye mean t' say you've been married ten years an' never had a quarrel with y'r husband?

Fair Stranger—That is true, madam.

"And ye always let him have the last word?"

"Yes, madam; I wouldn't for the world do any thing to lessen my husband's love for me. He might get careless."

"Careless?"

"Yes. We are jugglers by profession, and at two performances every day I stand against a board while he throws the knives."—N. Y. Weekly.

A Stitch in Time.

Jim Snively has just returned to Austin from a pleasure trip through Kentucky, his native State. He tells a good story about what the guide told him in the Mammoth Cave.

He asked the guide if he (Snively) could not break off a small piece of stalactite and take it along with him to Texas.

"No, you don't," responded the custodian of the cave. "If we were to allow every darned fool to carry off chunks of rock, it would have got away with the whole cave."—Texas Siftings.

Taking Stock.

Clerk—We don't seem able to do any thing with our "Consumption Cure," sir; it don't sell, even at the reduced price of ninety-nine cents a bottle.

Proprietor—H'm! well—just keep it in stock, and in a few weeks we'll work it off as imported lymph—at the same price.—Harper's Weekly.

He Couldn't Stand the Water.

"What kind of goods is it?" asked Colonel Blood, of Kentucky, when his wife displayed her new gown.

"It's watered silk."

"Ah! that's why it turned my stomach as soon as I saw it."—Munsey's Weekly.

He Wanted to See.

Kind Lady—Poor man, will you not tell me how you came to lose your eyesight?

Blind Man—All right, marm, but first let me see the money you are going to give me.—Texas Siftings.

Still Running.

"Were you at the opera last night?"

"Yes."

"What did you hear?"

"A very interesting conversation between two ladies and a dude in one of the boxes."—Life.

Taking Him Down.

"These portraits belonged to my great-great grandfather," said Lord Albert Hall, proudly.

"Was he a dealer?" queried Miss Ida Hoe.—Puck.

MAGIC MIRRORS.

"We see as in a glass, darkly," says the apostle, but the general persuasion of mankind has long been that we may see, in a glass, quite clearly, persons and objects far removed by time and space, says the London News. In some notes of Mr. Clouston's to Chaucer's "Squire's Tale," published by the Chaucer Society, there is an interesting essay on the magic mirrors which reveal the absent. A belief so common in mediæval times is not likely to have wanted precedents in the ancient world. The speculum is the natural home of the spectra. Mr. Clouston is only able to give one classical instance, from Pausanius, who wrote a guide book to ancient Greece. It is the twenty-first chapter of his seventh book, where he says that the Achæans, after making certain fumigations, let down a mirror into the holy well of Demeter; they then looked into the mirror and discerned whether a sick person would live or die. Mr. Clouston says they saw faces, healthy or distempered, in the mirror, a circumstance not mentioned by Thomas Taylor in his old translation. The famous mirror in which Surrey saw fair Geraldine is discredited by Mr. Clouston, who does not rely on the directions given in Reginald Scott's "Discovery of Witchcraft," written in 1584, a classical text with which he does not seem to be acquainted. Any member of the Psychical Society may try the experiment for himself. In the first place he must conciliate his good genius. Then he retires into his closet with a little table and silk carpet and two waxen candles lighted, as also with a crystal triangular stone "about the quantity of an apple." Then, after a prayer, he must sprinkle every thing with his own blood, and utter a magic charm or two, and finally sit down with a Bible in one hand and a crystal in the other. The spirit comes in about a quarter of an hour, but the curious thing is that various pictures first appear in the glass, beginning with a beaten track or road, travelers, a shepherd with sheep, "strange appearances, noises, glances and affrightments, which shows will all at last vanish on the appearance of the Genius." Such things Dr. Dee may have beheld in his crystal, at least if we believe Godwin in his "Lives of the Necromancers," not exactly a contemporary authority. According to Joachim Camerarius, quoted by Mr. Clouston, the spectator must be a young boy, or a person of the purest life. Granvil quotes a case of one Compton, who showed a certain Mr. Hill his wife in a looking-glass. Scott uses the idea in "My Aunt Margaret's Mirror," but the great masters of this art are the modern Egyptians.

Curiously enough, and too late for Mr. Clouston's use, Sir Walter Scott tells a long tale of the Egyptian ink mirror in his diary for October, 1831. He was then in London, where people were talking of the mystery on the evidence of Lord Prudhoe, "whom I know as an honorable man." At Cairo Lord Prudhoe heard of a magician "from the interior of Africa," who gave an instance of his powers. Lord Prudhoe chose a Nubian boy, in whose hand the magician drew a kind of pentacle in ink. Through this, "as if the substance of the hand had been removed," the boy saw what was asked for.

As in Achæa of old, there were first fumigations of incense, then flags and a sultan appeared. These, as in Reginald Scott's account, were mere preliminary apparitions. Then Shakespeare was asked for, and described in accordance with his portraits. Then the brother of one of the English spectators was correctly described; he had lost an arm, and this was mentioned. In Malta Sir Walter made inquiries, and found that Shakespeare (sheikh spar!) originally showed in the complexion of an Arab! On the whole, Sir Walter thought the whole affair an imposture. Six years later, in his Egyptian book, Mr. Lane seemed more credulous. He gives a long account of the affair. The boy first sees a man sweeping, then a procession of flags, then the Sultan; finally he saw and correctly described Lord Nelson: "He has not lost his left arm, it is placed to his breast," where Nelson pinned his empty sleeve. Mr. Lane was puzzled; not so Mr. Kinglake, who tells in "Eothen" how he asked for Keate, the famed Eton headmaster, who was described as a beautiful girl with golden hair—a very bad shot at some non-existent Kate. Mr. Clouston has found similar rites in Southern India. The Maories of New Zealand characteristically use a drop of blood instead of ink. In Southern India not a man but monkeys sweep the floor as a preliminary vision. The interesting point in all this farrago is the coincidence of human beliefs. Plainly enough, if any thing is seen at all, it is because the spectator has hypnotized by staring at the little pool of ink, the crystal, or what not, which acts in the same way as the metal disk in hypnotism. He then answers to "suggestions."

The advertising man of a well known New York clothing house says: "We were the first to use the sails of vessels as an advertising medium. Then we got up the 'alphabet puzzle,' and gave away 500,000 puzzles while the craze lasted. Afterward we invented the Waterbury watch idea. We had to do something, because three of our principal competitors had failed, and their stocks were being sold for next to nothing by assignees; so we decided to give a Waterbury watch with every twelve dollars' worth of goods purchased. We advertised the watches 'wound and set.' To wind them fast enough we had to rig up a little machine worked like a sewing machine that would do the winding, and we kept several boys at work winding and setting them. Before we quit we had given away 40,000 of the watches.

"But nothing ever pays us like the ordinary newspaper advertising. The fact is there has come to be in this city a class of advertisement readers just as there is of news readers. They read the advertisements every day, and of course the man who wants to attract them has to get up an advertisement that will do it. The day of standing advertisements in the paper, 'Go to So-and-So's for clothing,' or 'Go to This-and-That's for shoes,' has passed, just as the day for painting signs on rocks and fences or on the sails of boats has passed. You must have something interesting and fresh in every advertisement, and it will be read.

A Place for Talent.

In nearly all regulated lines of industry at present the advertising man is one of the most important adjuncts of a business. And on the other hand the advertising department of a first class newspaper is not what it used to be, but is instead fast becoming an interesting feature of all enterprising journals. Formerly the prevailing idea among the uninitiated was that the talented, the best, most versatile and most ingenious writers and artists were all employed in the news department. How nearly correct this idea may have been need not be stated, but that such is not the case now may be seen by a perusal of the "ads" of any flourishing paper. The competitions between the merchants and between the papers' agents have become so great that the great wholesale and retail houses of the large cities employ talented men at big salaries to attend to their advertising alone, and the men who want the best positions in the counting rooms of newspapers must combine fine business qualifications with the talent that wins success in the editorial chair.—Yenowine's News.

Advertising Necessary to Success.

The merchant or manufacturer who does not advertise his goods cannot succeed. Of late newspaper advertising has become a distinct trade in itself, and all over the country leading concerns pay fabulous prices for men who are skillful in writing catchy advertisements. In many large cities there are men earning from $3,000 to $10,000 a year to write advertisements. This fact in itself shows advertising pays.

If people interested in this subject will investigate it for themselves they will find that the leading advertisers in The Plain Dealer are the merchants who have the best stores, the best assortments of goods and who sell at the most reasonable prices. Such merchants do a much larger business than merchants who do not advertise; consequently they turn their goods over more quickly and can afford to give better prices. Close buyers appreciate this. What is the moral? He who advertises the most judiciously succeeds the best, and the buyers who seek the best bargains patronize such merchants.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Never Be Commonplace.

"Bring your feet with you and have them fitted to a pair of your common sense shoes," is the way a Pittsburg dealer advertises. It is a good phrase and one which attracts attention. The man who succeeds in advertising in such a way that people read his advertisement is the one who draws trade to his store as sure as a magnet draws a needle to itself. Study up quaint, pithy or witty phrases to head your advertisements, and be not too modest in the space they occupy.—Brockton Shoe.

Regular Publications Best.

No one takes up a regular publication without the expectation of finding something of interest. The simple act of turning the pages is as positive an example of expectation as is the opening of a closet if one is in search of a coat. Hence an announcement in a regular publication has an advantage over any other form of business solicitation—that of meeting the sought for eye at a time that it is in a mood for such greeting.—A. C. Ladd.

Must Have Genius.

The simplest advertisements sometimes require the most care and thought in their construction. To write a column is a matter of time, but to edit it down into a sentence is something more.—Printer's Ink.

NOTHING BUT CRANKS.

The Peculiar People a Barber Has to Deal With.

"Cranks in barber-chairs?" said the barber, letting down the head-rest and tucking in the towel, thousands of 'em. There isn't one man in a thousand who comes into this shop who has not his own notion about the way I should cut his hair, trim his beard or handle a razor on his face.

"Not too close? All right, sir.

"Now, there's the man who thinks that the barber is going to miss a single hair somewhere on his face. It is a mania with him. He insists upon getting up and looking into the mirror. He feels of his face carefully. He asks you to go over it again; he——

"Only once? All right, sir.

"There's the man who thinks that he chews his mustache, and wants me to trim the split hairs. Another one knows that his hair is stubborn, and makes me cut it in one direction. It wouldn't be a bit stubborn if he allowed me to follow it, but he looks solemn and tells me that he has struggled with that head of hair for forty-two years. He——

"No powder? All right, sir.

"Then there's the man who detests bay-rum. He isn't so bad, though, as the man who always takes a dry shampoo.

"Other kind always gives me a cold,' he says.

"'Can't stand having my head wet,' he says.

"'Ever try a good shampoo?' I say.

"'No, sir,' he says; 'don't you suppose I know whether or not I am subject to colds?'

"Don't twist your mustache? All right, sir. Now, that's funny. The man who just got out of the chair before you took it always has his curled. When I say:

"'Have it curled, sir?' he says:

"'I don't know; what d' ye think?'

"'Needs it, sir.'

"'Oh, all right.'

"But if I forget to ask him he gets mad and forgets to tip me. That's the way. You see——

"Comb it straight down? All right, sir.

"You see, they're all different. One man says:

"'Cut it square across the front. I've got a little bald spot there.'

"Hasn't any bald spot at all. Wants it banged, but doesn't like to say so.

"One man who comes in here always brushes his own hair when I get through with him. He thinks no one else can do it as he does.

"'Old trick of mine,' he says; 'took me years to learn it. Some day I'll show you.' He——

"'How's that? Your chin? Oh, yes, a little alum will do that.

"I was saying there's the man who——

"This man I started to tell you about. He——

"Little powder on your nose. All right, sir. Thank you, sir. Come in some day again and I'll tell you more about 'em. I've just got started on 'em. Nine hundred and ninety-nine men out of a——. Good day, sir."—N. Y. Tribune.

THE CHINESE DECK.

Playing-Cards of the Almond-Eyed Celestial.

The Chinese name for a card considered singly or as one of the parts of a pack is shen, or "fan," a most evident reference to the manner of holding cards spread open like a fan, which is common to all nations.

The shape and size of the Chinese card are peculiar. They are printed in black on a thin cardboard. The backs are sometimes bright crimson, and sometimes black or yellow, and they are the shape and size of a finger. Some of them are little more than half an inch broad by three inches long, and others are one inch wide by three and a half long. The pips and court cards are always printed in black on a white back-ground, and on the characters printed in red. In some packs the cards have animals, such as horses and deer represented upon them; while in others character which may mean the names only of the animals are written above the pips. The cards are rounded at the top and bottom, and at the upper end a small portion is left blank, as if to hold them conveniently and allow of their being spread or "fanned" out, showing the whole of the pictured surface, the blank space being held under the thumb and fingers. Strangely enough, this blank space being at the top instead of at the bottom of the card, it would seem that they should be held by the top and spread out in exactly the reverse way customary among Europeans. The tiny cards are so narrow and so small that they might well be held concealed by the palm of the hand, which could effectually cover them and prevent the shape of the pips being seen through the thin cardboard or the number of the cards being counted by the opponent.

The Chinese have another name for their cards, and this is Wat-pi, but it seems to be the name given to different games, as they also call queer-looking tablets on which round dots are placed in regular order, and which resemble our dominos by the same name.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

—As is well known, certain chemical reactions are accelerated by sunlight; but Herr Bruhl, a German chemist, has recently intensified the effect by placing the retort in the focus of a concave mirror. The vessel contained zinc filings and ethyl iodide, and the mirror, which was about a foot in diameter, concentrated the sun's rays upon it. The reaction soon began and continued briskly till, at the end of a quarter of an hour, the ethyl iodide was all consumed and a good supply of zinc ethyl ultimately obtained. Herr Bruhl considers the concave mirror preferable to a glass lens, which would be less powerful, owing to the athermancy of the glass, so at least it is reported.

I was suffering for years from a terrible disease more or less; tried everything I heard of, spared neither money nor time to get well, but none had the desired effect, until Rev. Nagel recommended the Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, of which I used but three bottles and completely recovered my health and happiness. I hope others will be benefited by the remedy as much as I was. DAMAGE BY FLOODS

Several New England Mills Forced to Suspend Work.

THE HOUSATONIC DAM BROKEN.

An Historic Spot in New Jersey Destroyed by the Freshet—Business Suspended at Danbury, Conn.—Cellars Flooded and Railroad Tracks Under Water—One-Third of Wilkesbarre Submerged.

ANSONIA, Conn., Jan. 23.—Last evening the big Housatonic dam began to weaken from the heavy rains, and at 8 o'clock the two towns of Birmingham and Shelton were in an uproar.

This town was alarmed by the blowing of the big whistle in the Wilkinson paper mill, and thousands of people lined the shore watching the turbulent waters. Crowds of people went up the river to the site of the dam and watched the work of destruction. The gate house on the east side was the first to go, the water bursting the gates, tore away the foundation walls and the house fell into the water.

Numerous cakes of ice came down the river and crashed against the wall of solid masonry, making it tremble from end to end. For hours the dam withstood the terrible onslaught, but finally 150 feet of stone work was carried away, the foundation undermined and the general crash came.

An immense mass of water rushed into the river below. The chances are that no more will escape, but if the river does not go down the whole 400 feet will be washed away.

The dam is the second largest in New England. It supplies power for 40 factories, and thus furnishes employment for 5,000 people.

The flood is the most disastrous ever known in the Housatonic Valley. The Derby & Naugatuck Railroad tracks are covered, and trains are stalled on each side of the water. No traffic can pass over it for the next 12 hours.

The loss by stoppage of factories and to the dam will reach half a million dollars.

TWO DAMS SWEPT AWAY.

The Lowlands of Morristown, N. J., Flooded and an Old Building Ruined.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Jan. 23.—Two mills above this city, on Speedwell Lake, a body of water four miles in circumference, is the iron foundry formerly owned by Stephen Vail, the builder of the first steam vessel to cross the Atlantic. In this building Morse's telegraph instrument was stationed when the first message over a telegraph wire was sent to Boston in 1885. The building was an antiquated wooden structure. In the last five years many New Yorkers have endeavored to purchase it on account of its historical associations.

Last evening the ice in Speedwell Lake began to break up. A great volume of water swept over the dam near the old iron foundry, and in a short time a break was made. A little later the dam gave way with a thundering roar, and carried with it a large portion of the old building.

Speedwell Lake empties into Lake Pocahontas. The ice and wreckage rushed through this body of water, and five minutes later had broken the dam at the lower end and inundated the lowlying districts of Morristown. Many horses and cattle were drowned and two score of houses were half submerged. The occupants of the houses, chiefly laborers, were taken out in boats. Some, however, refused to leave their possessions to the mercy of the waves.

MANY TOWNS SUFFER.

Railroad Tracks Under Water and Cellars Along the River Banks Flooded.

PALMER, Mass., Jan. 23.—The storm has done considerable damage in this section. The river rose six feet in many hours, barns and cellars along the banks are flooded. Roads are flooded and wires are down in all directions.

At Three Rivers, Vermont, it is feared that the bridge of the New London Northern Railroad may be carried away. The tracks of the Boston & Albany Railroad are 18 inches under water and most of the cellars in the place are filled with water.

At Great Barrington, Mass., considerable damage was inflicted by the storm. Cellars are flooded and roads are impassable. The loss will reach several thousand dollars.

One-Third of a City Submerged.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Jan. 23.—Along Canal and North Washington streets every cellar is flooded to the first floors. The steam heating plant is completely submerged, and two fire engines are pumping the water out. The gorge in the Susquehanna now extends from Tunkhannock to Nanticoke, a distance of 37 miles, and it is feared that the storm may cause the river to back up and flood the valley from end to end.

Danbury Suffers from Floods.

DANBURY, Conn., Jan. 23.—A terrific rain storm, accompanied by high winds, did a vast amount of damage here. The water in Still River has risen above its banks, and the lower floors of factories along its banks are flooded. In all parts of the city cellars are flooded and streets are almost impassable. The schools are closed and business entirely suspended. Several washouts are reported on the New York & New Haven Railroad, east of here.

High Water Stops Factories.

WATERBURY, Conn., Jan. 23.—The storm here last night was very severe. Great masses of ice are falling into the river and the water is continually rising. Many merchants are suffering from flooded cellars, and the damage to stock thus far indicated amounts to over $2,000. Several factories have been obliged to stop their power on account of high water.

A Big Dam May Give Way.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Jan. 23.—The Norton Jewelry Company's uncompleted factory at Chartley was blown down last evening, causing a loss of $5,000. There is fear that the ice in the Norton reservoir may break up. If this should happen, the big dam may give way and do thousands of dollars' worth of damage.

A MOTHER'S RASH ACT.

Jealousy Caused Her to Poison Herself and Three Children.

BROCKTON, Mass., Jan. 23.—Mrs. Hudwid Anderson, wife of Louis Anderson, purchased a drachm of morphine, and when her husband had left for his work she mixed the entire quantity, and, dividing it into four parts, gave one to each of her children, aged five, four and two years, and took the fourth one herself.

She then retired to her chamber, taking the children with her, with the intention of never awaking again. Her brother, by mere accident, returned to the house, and finding all quiet, proceeded to investigate, and on entering his sister's room found her and the children in a stupor.

He called for assistance and Drs. Locke, Brown, and King were summoned. After heroic efforts the mother and children were brought to consciousness, but rapidly sank again and are now expected to die at any moment.

The cause attributed for the rash act is that of jealousy. She consulted a medium, who told her that her husband was keeping company with other women and she resolved to commit suicide.

EVA HAS NO CLAIM.

The Surrogate Decides that She is Not Robert Ray Hamilton's Widow.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The Hamilton will contest was quickly disposed of by Surrogate Ransom. He decided that the marriage of Eva L. Hamilton to Robert Ray Hamilton was void and that she is still the wife of Joshua J. Mann.

The Surrogate's decision was lengthy and he carefully reviewed the evidence. In the midst of the delivery of his decision the Surrogate made the assertion that his finding of fact where there is a conflict of evidence, settled the case for all time as the appellate courts would be powerless to review his decision.

While this action disposes of Eva finally, it is probable that Schuyler Hamilton, jr., and his wife, the chief legatees, will now contest the annuity left to the bogus infant in trust, it being now proved that the child was not Robert Ray Hamilton's.

TOMS IS RECOVERING.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 23.—The condition of John Thoms, the caretaner of the old Felter mansion on the Hamilton street road, who was triced up by his wrists by two robbers, and left hanging for 51 hours, is improved, but he still suffers from the shock to his nervous system, and his wrists are in a terrible condition.

Detectives Oliver and Housell have not yet succeeded in running down Cook and Walker, the perpetrators of the dastardly outrage. They are known to have left here on the 1:18 p. m. train Monday towards New York, and it is hoped they will be captured to-day.

Captain Schley's Daughter Married.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 23.—Miss Virginia Schley, daughter of Captain Winfield Scott Schley of the cruiser Baltimor, and Mr. Ralph Montague Stuart-Wortley of Portsmouth, Va., were married, and all the prominent people in Baltimore and many members of Washington society invited. Mr. Wortley is the second son of the Earl of Wharncliffe.

State Prison for Twenty-five Years.

BOSTON, Jan. 23.—Judge Sherman, in the Superior Criminal Court, sentenced William Crotty to 25 years in State prison for breaking into Morse's jewelry store here, on Tremont street. Crotty was brought here from New York on a requisition, was indicted under the habitual criminal law, and pleaded guilty.

May Save the Westinghouse Company.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 23.—A circular letter has been received from London, stating that George Westinghouse has received $250,000 for his air brake patents from the London Air Brake Company. He is also to receive a salary of $30,000 a year to cover any air brake invention he may produce.

An Editor's Body Horribly Mangled.

HAMILTON, Ohio, Jan. 23.—John K. Aydelotte, editor of the Daily Democrat, was caught in the fly-wheel in the engine room of his new building and instantly killed, his body being mangled in a horrible manner. He was a prominent Freemason of this city and at one time postmaster.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

The Republican Senators Have Agreed on a Programme.

WILL PUSH THE CLOTURE RULE.

If There is a Quorum To-Morrow a Vote Will be Taken.

Speaker Reed Talks to the House—Constant Bickering He Desires Stopped. Increase in Internal Revenue Collections—Knights and Farmers Meet and Form a Strong Confederation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The cloture is squarely before the Senate. It is the unfinished business.

The Republican Senators have, it is understood, agreed upon a programme of action, under which they hope to bring the cloture rule and the Elections bill to a vote to-morrow. Whether the programme is a success or not, they propose to stand or fall by it. The plan arranged is this:

If there is a quorum of Republican Senators present on Saturday, Mr. Aldrich will move that a vote be taken on the pending cloture rule. It is expected that at this juncture some Democratic Senator will attempt to take the floor for the purpose of continuing the debate. Mr. Aldrich will then raise the point of order that further debate would be in the nature of dilatory proceedings. This point of order will be decided by the presiding officer to be not well taken, as debate is always in order under the existing rules. From that decision an appeal will be taken.

If the Republicans can muster a quorum, they will refuse to sustain the decision of the Chair, and the next move will be a motion to vote on the cloture rule.

THE SPEAKER EXPLAINS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—In the House the Speaker made a statement of his position. The debate, he said, while nominally upon the approval of the journal, had really been upon the propriety of certain rulings. He did not think the frequent bickerings of the past few days added to the dignity of the House. The business of a legislative body was to legislate and not to permit its legislation to be wantonly interrupted even by motions ordinarily proper. He explained thus fully that the ground of his action might be understood, and sincerely hoped that there would be no further personal matters connected with it.

Mr. McMillan reminded the Speaker that under the rules his motion was one which could not be made more than once.

The Speaker replied that the scenes of disorder yesterday were sufficient to satisfy every member of the justice of the action of the Chair. He sincerely hoped that these scenes of disorder would cease.

The journal was approved by a rising vote.

MAY MEAN A THIRD PARTY.

Workingmen and Farmers Form a Close Federation at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The biggest federation of labor organizations ever known in this country was practically agreed upon here during the day when committees representing the National Farmers' Alliance, the Colored Farmers' Alliance, the Knights of Labor and the Citizens' Alliance met and agreed to form a close confederation for both offense and defense. Word has been received from the Grange, the Farmers' Mutual Benefit Association and the Northwestern Alliance that they are in full sympathy with the movement and can be counted in.

While the delegation here disclaim any idea of a third party movement, the very general idea is that the action today will be the inception of an independent political movement. The demands which will be formulated will without doubt contain the principles if not the words of the Sub-Treasury plan, and the government control and ultimately ownership of the means of transportation. The demands will be laid before the old parties, and if they are not granted the third party will follow. This is the opinion of many who are on the inside.

Information About Lake Commerce.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Secretary Windom has appointed C. H. Kepp, of Buffalo, N. Y., an agent of the Treasury Department to collect information about the coast-wise commerce of the great lakes. The information will subsequently be published by the Treasury Department.

Internal Revenue Collections.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—A statement prepared by Mr. Mason, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, shows that the total collections for the first six months of the current fiscal year were $75,697,148, an increase over the first half of the previous fiscal year of $6,619,663.

STRIKERS IN CONTROL.

The Chicago & Erie Road Forced to Shut Down.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—"We are completely tied up," says General Manager Tucker, of the Chicago & Erie road. "It may last one day and it may last weeks. We will not accede to the demands of the strikers."

"Will you run passenger trains to-day?"

"No; we will wait and see when the strikers get tired. We are fixed for the strike. There is not a pound of perishable freight on the road, and we are refusing any freight of whatever description. This is the dull season of the year, and we might as well lay off a month as not. There are no damage suits coming. We have prepared for that. We are going to make a test case of this. Our car shops are shut down and our trains are not running. We will run them whenever the strikers will let us. They have cut the wires, and what they will do next remains to be seen. Passengers on the tied-up trains will be brought in over other lines."

The conductors and despatchers in conference decided to make an offer of settlement, which was to the effect that Despatcher Scott, who was discharged, shall be reinstated and given a chance to resign, and that all men who were interested in the strike shall return to work and the company take no action against them. William McGregor, president of the First National Bank, and Mayor Randolph were selected by the men to present their offer to the company and they did so. The company has not yet given an answer.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEART.

A Well-Known Citizen of New Jersey Kills Himself.

RAHWAY, N. J., Jan. 23.—Charles E. Pratt, one of the wealthiest and best known citizens of New Jersey, shot and killed himself early in the morning. Financial reverses and brain trouble are supposed to be the causes.

Mr. Pratt recently fell heir to his father's fortune in England, and with his wife, who was a Miss Brown of this place before her marriage, inherited the estate of her sister, the late Mrs. Cory.

These inheritances are estimated at $500,000, and Mr. Pratt before these additions to his wealth was already a rich man. He was said to be worth three-quarters of a million dollars.

Nearly all this fortune, it is reported, was swept away in recent unfortunate speculations in Wall street and Western mining properties. This, together with his old-time ailment, made him despondent.

HORRIBLE DEATH.

A Man's Body Crushed as Flat as a Piece of Paper.

BOONTON, N. J., Jan. 23.—Thomas Northwood, a boss roller in the iron rolling mill here, was caught between the rollers while making some repairs early in the morning, and was drawn through, his body being crushed as flat as a sheet of paper.

The rollers turn out wrought iron plates half an inch in thickness, and Northwood's body passed through. His flesh and bones were crushed to jelly.

Northwood was 36 years old, and leaves a widow and three children.

Narrow Escape from a Military Academy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Fuesy's military academy at College Point, L. I., was burned during the morning. There was a large number of boys as well as several women asleep in the academy, and before they could all be aroused the flames had made considerable headway. The boys were gotten out of the building without much difficulty when they were awakened, but with the women it was different. They became panic-stricken, and several attempted to jump out of the windows. They were restrained, however, and all escaped in safety.

Forger Relyea's Delinquencies.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Several additional notes bearing evidence of John J. Relyea's forgeries have come to light. Three of them aggregating $800 bore the signature of Solomon Wells, and one for $1,000 contains the name of Prof. Henry O. Barrow. It was also discovered that just prior to his hurried departure Relyea made firm collections and borrowed money amounting to over $3,000. His delinquencies, genuine and forged, will reach $20,000.

Killed By a Train.

THE COMING BATTLE

Plans Completed for the Great Miners' Strike.

150,000 MEN WILL BE INVOLVED.

It Will be the Greatest Industrial Conflict Ever Inaugurated in America.

Millions of Capital Against Labor Organizations Well Supplied With Money—A Fight for an Eight-Hour Day—How the Money to Carry on the Contemplated Struggle is Raised.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 23.—The miners of the United States have just completed plans for the greatest industrial battle ever fought in America. The conflict between the miners and the mine owners will take place on the first of May.

The entire national organization of miners, comprising 150,000 men, will be directly involved in a demand for the eight-hour day. According to the figures which are being given, it will be a battle of millions of capital against labor organizations, also backed by millions of money.

Backed by the Federation of Labor.

At the recent convention of the American Federation of Labor Unions, held in Detroit, it was decided to back the miners for eight hours next May. The utterances of the officers of the United Mine Workers on the subject leaves no doubt that the miners will make the fight.

An immense strike fund is being made ready for the miners, and when the latter go out they will have at their back for immediate use nearly $1,000,000. This fund will be swelled from time to time at the rate of $30,000 a week.

Labor's Sinews of War.

W. J. Dillon, Secretary of the American Flint Glass Workers' Union, United States organizer for the American Federation of Labor, has just given the following interview on the coming fight: "In the aggregate we figure on 150,000 miners in the United States. Almost 75,000 of these are active members of the United Mine Workers. The remainder are members of the organization when it comes to a struggle. These are the men who will strike for eight hours next May.

"The Federation numbers about 690,000 men and 500,000 can be counted upon. For six weeks before May 1, strike contributions will be levied on the members at the rate of ten cents a week. This will make $300,000 for the six weeks. The formal ratification will take place at next month's convention of the United Mine Workers to be held in Columbus, Ohio.

"The latter organization has a strike fund of its own amounting to several hundred thousand dollars. Besides this, it will raise a special fund before the fight, so that $1,000,000 will be ready by May 1, on which to conduct the contemplated conflict."

FLUSHED WITH VICTORY.

Gladstone Would Have Retired if Defeated at Hartlepool.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—It has just become known that on the result of the Hartlepool election depended whether Mr. Gladstone would continue as leader of the Liberal party. This fact was known to Mr. Morley, Mr. Sherbourn and a few others, but was carefully kept secret, for fear of discouragement, from the rank and file of the party.

This was one reason why the Liberals made the Hartlepool contest a national affair, and the leaders devoted themselves to the canvass with as much energy as if a general election was at stake, in striking contrast to the Unionists, who left their candidate to work out his own salvation, so that they might be able to claim, in the event of defeat, that they had never expected victory. Mr. Gladstone had intended to remain for some days at Hawarden, and will now appear in the House of Commons.

The opening of Parliament was strikingly evident of the change which a few hours had made in the fortunes of the Liberal party. The Liberals came in flushed with success, and without the cloud that for weeks had rested on the faces of the most courageous of them, while the Tories and Dissentient Liberals were deeply and manifestly downcast.

Mr. Parnell was entirely ignored by his former Liberal friends as he entered the House, while Justin McCarthy's followers were received with hearty greetings. The Tories also failed to notice Parnell, who, however, seemed not to be moved by the change from the time when men, irrespective of party, sought his recognition.

European Disarmament.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—M. Jules Simon, in a letter advocating the necessity of a general disarmament throughout Europe, says: "I consider that a federation of Europe, with its railways and telegraphs, would not be more ridiculous than the federation of the United States was, but arbitration and disarmament could be realized separately. The adoption of either would lead rapidly to the other."

Parnell Beaten in the Lobby.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—Mr. Parnell declared in the lobby of the House of Commons that he intended to assert his authority as leader and work actively during the session. His motion as to the Crimes Act cut the ground from under McCarthy's feet, and obtains precedence over McCarthy's motion concerning the trial of Mr. O'Brien.

Bequest to Yale College.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 23.—By the will of the late Dr. Alvan Talcott of Guilford, Yale College will receive $25,000 and a valuable medical library.

HIS MILLIONS GONE.

"Old Hutch" Chicago's Bold Speculator Forced to Retire.

CHICAGO, Jan. 23.—Hutchinson, the veteran Board of Trade man, and the boldest speculator the Chicago Board of Trade has ever known, has withdrawn from speculation.

It is estimated that "Old Hutch" has lost about $10,000,000 within 20 years. In 1870 he was reported to have a fortune of $20,000,000. Ten years ago his wealth had dwindled to $10,000,000, and now there is but $1,000,000. It was to save this from following the rest of his money that Mr. Richardson's family insisted upon his retirement.

Some time ago Charles Hutchinson, his son, and also president of the Board of Trade, had a talk with his father, and told him that unless he would close up his deals quietly and give up all speculative business, the matter would be taken into the courts and a conservator applied for. Mr. Hutchinson, sr., was very angry for a time, but finally consented to the terms and at once opened up his trades and closed his books. Mr. Hutchinson still frequents the trading hall but places no deals.

Kidnapped the Count's Daughter.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The facts in a sad and romantic story, in which a Hungarian nobleman, Count Szirmay, is the principal victim, has just come to light here. His discarded mistress, Maria Polski, swept like an unclean thing from his palace, kidnapped the Countess Virginie from the convent where her father placed her. The Count at least learns his handsome daughter's fate by visiting New York. She is an inmate of a dance hall in this city. Her ruin is complete.

BY THE WAY.

—A great many people are under the weather. And no wonder. Such weather!

—Gertrude Norman and Company in "A Woman of the People," at Amphion Hall, to-night.

—To-night, the Young People's League will hold their meeting in the First Baptist church at 8 o'clock. Everybody welcome.

—Seely Edsall leads the young men's meeting next Sunday at 4:15 P. M. There will be vocal solos, singing by the boy choir and brief remarks by young men.

—Mrs. N. E. Slack, of Lambertville, is holding fast to a can of peaches which her mother, Mrs. Sarah Holcombe, of West Amwell, put up some thirty years ago.

—On Thursday evening, Feb. 5, the following question will be debated in the Association Hall. Resolved: That the McKinley bill benefits the laboring classes.

—Dr. Hurlbut will give a talk entitled "In the footprints of John Wesley," illustrated by stereopticon views, at the meeting of the Epworth League in Vincent chapel this evening. All are welcome.

—Elizabeth people are happy over the existing war between two rival gas companies. The rate per thousand feet has already gone down to 75 cents, and promises to descend to 50. The rate here is $2.50.

—Vineland cigar dealers are adhering strictly to a resolution not to sell cigarettes at all, and the boys of that town have to make their own cigarettes or smoke a pipe. Plainfield has only one such dealer—Dobbins.

—The following lucid remark, for which the Boston Advertiser is responsible, must have been written by a "journalist": "Things having been as they were no one has reason to wonder that the outcome is what we see."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Geo. Mehl, Sr., of West Second street, entertained a number of his friends, last evening, at a turkey supper, followed by singing, recitations and speech-making.

Patrick Day died at his home on West Third street, last evening, in the 55th year of his age. Funeral services will be held to-morrow morning at nine o'clock. He leaves two sons.

A supper and dance was enjoyed at Van Court Inn, Roselle, Wednesday evening, by Miss Massett, Miss Van Buren, Miss Erickson, John N. Moore, E. M. Van Buren, Arthur McKinney, and Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Timpson, all of Plainfield.

The marriage of Florence Helene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Clay Swain, to Frederic Martin, Jr., took place at Brooklyn, N. Y., Wednesday. All of the parties are well known in Plainfield and Netherwood society, having spent several summers here. The groom is a son of Col. Frederic Martin, Superintendent of the Brooklyn elevated railroads.

An Old Nuisance to be Abated.

Upon complaint of many residents in the vicinity, and at the request of Mayor Gilbert, George W. Rockfellow of the Board of Health, Street Commissioner Meeker and Chief Doane, made an inspection of the dumping ground on Broadway above Ninth street, yesterday.

They report that it is a foul nuisance. Everything is dumped there and when set afire by hot coals, as is the case almost every day, the noxious gas and odorous smoke from the burning heap are not only vile to the sense but decidedly unhealthy. The practice of dumping anything there in the future except ashes, will be stopped at once.

All the Way From Five Days to Three Years.

Sentences in the Somerset county court this morning, were as follows:

For stealing turkeys around the country, Mr. Dunbar was given three years in State Prison. Mulford got eighteen months for assaulting an officer. Young Fries who stole a bicycle from a North Plainfield dealer, was sent to the Reform School. Pochunk and Marco, Italians, were given five and ten days, respectively, for assault. Green got three months for larceny; and Searls was charged a fine of $50 and costs, for forgery.

Just Missed the Whirling Buzz Saw.

Louis C. Beekman, moulder, of East Third street, narrowly escaped frightful injury in Smith's carpentry shop at Westfield Tuesday. He was struck on the forehead by some moving machinery, and was thrown down so that his body just escaped being cut in twain by a huge whirling circular saw. The wound above his eye will keep him confined to the house for some time.

Mr. McPherson as President.

It is our duty to report the fact that the Hon. John Roderick McPherson of New Jersey is beginning to loom up as a possible candidate for President.—New York Sun.

All right, Sunny! If Senator McPherson is the candidate for President in 1892 you will be surprised at the big vote New Jersey will give him.—Somerville Messenger.

THE PYRAMUS AND THISBE.

Successful Performances of Plainfield's New Dramatic Club—"First Mate" and "A Box of Monkeys" Charmingly Rendered at The Casino.

Perhaps the most notable event in Plainfield's history—and surely the most notable of the present season—was the performance of "The Pyramus and Thisbe" dramatic club at The Casino last night. The handsome little theatre held a large and thoroughly appreciative audience, which was quick to respond to the many clever doings in the course of the evening's entertainment.

Two plays were given. The first was a picturesque old English comedy-drama, in two acts, entitled "First Mate," which dealt with the haps and mishaps of an old sailor turned farmer, and with the love affairs of his son and daughter and the son and daughter of some other people. "Farmer Braddock," a nautical agriculturist, who was too good a sailor to learn the knack of successful farming, was personated by William T. Pelletier. "Jack Braddock," his son, first officer on a merchant ship, who returns to the farm from a voyage just in time to avert financial disaster and foil the villain, was done by Evarts Tracy. Daniel Ginna, as "Mr. Brogden," junior in the firm of Brogden & Sons, landlords' agents, was the villain, and an artistically good one.

George Wharton Edwards had the main comedy character in "Watty," the rustic. He was sufficiently bucolic. His make-up was very funny, and his every appearance was a signal for an uproar of mirth. Edward Bloodgood was a "limb of the law," "Fred Finch" by name, who liked racing better than law and was in love with "Deborah," the farmer's daughter. Percy Stewart, as "Slive", a messenger, was almost as slow as the genuine District Telegraph article. Miss Lizzie VanBoskerck, as "Mrs. Braddock," the farmer's wife, received liberal applause. "Letty Landsdell," Sailor Jack's sweetheart, a demure and pretty country lassie, whom "Mr. Brogden" sought to win by the power of money, was prettily played by Miss Elizabeth Stewart. Miss Maud VanBoskerck, as "Rhoda," a rustic, made life unpleasant for "Watty" in the first part of the play, but graciously relented before it was too late. Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, as "Deborah," the nautical farmer's first mate, made cheerful sacrifices for her friend, "Letty Landsdell," with her brother Jack's money, and got the farmer into a peck of trouble, which was all smoothed out properly by Jack when he returned from voyaging over the seas.

The most decided hits of the play were doubtless those made by Mrs. Edwards and Mr. Pelletier in their respective roles, but especial mention also should be made of the acting and picturesqueness of Miss Stewart and the Misses VanBoskerck. Mr. Bloodgood made an excellent "Welcher," and the lawyer of Mr. Ginna was a careful performance, while the character of "Jack" was well sustained by Mr. Tracy, and Mr. Edwards was excellent. The costumes and characters were all carefully studied. The play was very prettily staged, and everything was artistically appropriate, as was to have been expected from the superintendency of Mr. Edwards as stage manager.

The drama was followed by a laughable farce entitled "A Box of Monkeys," wherein Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. Mason, and Mrs. Evans, were each sprightly, very English, and extremely fashionable in the order named. The costumes were charming. The male characters were ably sustained by Messrs. Perkins and VanVliet. The stage setting—a beautiful parlor scene, in pink, white and gold—was painted expressly for the occasion by George Wharton Edwards, and was much admired.

In "A Box of Monkeys" Deuse M. Van Vliet was "Edward Ralston," the young American mine owner; Edward C. Perkins was "Chauncey Oglethorpe," his partner and the second son of a Lord; Mrs. George C. Evans was "Mrs. Ondego-Jhones," an aunt who admired rank; Mrs Charles E. Brooks was her niece—"Sierra Bengaline," a "prairie rose;" and Mrs. J. Parker Mason was the "Lady Guinevere Llandpoore," an "English primrose," daughter of the "Earl of Paynaught."

The programmes were probably the richest thing of the kind ever seen in Plainfield. They were elegantly printed by DeVinne on the choicest of hand-made parchment paper, and made a souvenir of the occasion that all will treasure with happy memories.

The affair was given for the benefit of the Boys' Club, the Muhlenberg Hospital and the Children's Home, of this city, and will net a handsome sum. A second performance will take place in April, when two new plays will be given for the same charities. Tickets are already selling very fast, and may be had of the Patrons, as already published in THE PRESS, and of J. Parker Mason, Central avenue.

People will not have a new cough remedy, when they know the value of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

She stood at the gate in the late Spring twilight, and when she said good-bye, she felt neuralgia kiss her rosy cheek; but she only smiled, for her mother had invested 25 cents in a bottle of Salvation Oil.

OBITUARY.

William Mooney.

The death of William Mooney, of Grove street, North Plainfield, occurred at Peoria, Ill., Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Mooney was sitting in the rotunda of the National Hotel at Peoria, talking to friends, when he was seized with a fit of coughing. In fifteen minutes he was dead.

Mr. Mooney was born in Stamford, Conn., in 1839, and went to New York when thirteen years old. He learned the profession of architect in the office of J. B. Snook. For years he was Superintendent for Carl Phiefer, and while engaged with him looked after the construction of many prominent buildings, including Bellevue Hospital.

During this period he studied gas engineering, eventually forming a partnership with Wm. Farmer, a well-known gas engineer. Five years ago Mr. Farmer retired, and Mr. Mooney continued the business alone.

As a gas engineer Mr. Mooney built the Cincinnati Gas Works and a portion of the Brooklyn Gas Works, and was the patentee of several gas appliances. He was the author of "The American Gas Engineer and Superintendents' Hand Book," a standard scientific work, and was an active member of the Society of Gas-Light Engineers. His office was at 94 Liberty street.

At the time of his death he was constructing engineer for the Providence, R. I., and New Haven, Conn., Gas Companies.

He had lately taken out a patent for an invention to take the tar out of gas before going to the holder. This machine is intended to supplant the English machine now generally used for that purpose.

Mr. Mooney left New York for Peoria last Monday evening. He recently built a gas-holder and gas retort for the Peoria Gas Company, and went on, it is understood, to explain certain parts of its mechanism to the company's officers. At the time he was seized with the fit of coughing he was talking with Peter C. Coffey, the President of the gas company. The direct cause of death was due to hemorrhage. Mr. Mooney had not been in good health for a number of years past, but nothing serious had been expected.

He leaves a wife, a son, and two daughters, at his home in the Borough. His remains will be brought East for burial.

"Hasten Slowly."

Early last week the store of Dawe Bros., No. 50 West Second street, was closed. Inquiry showed that they finding themselves heavily involved, had left the city. William A. Coddington of this city, who, though not yet admitted to the bar, has been employed in many suits in Justices' courts, at once issued eight writs of attachment, which were duly executed, and then issued eight summonses for the same causes of action which were returnable before Justice Nodyne yesterday morning. Charles A. Reed appeared for the defendants. Having first received the assurance of Mr. Coddington that the actions by attachment had been discontinued, he charged that the Court had no juri diction because the service of every summons was defective for two causes: First—that five full days had not expired since the service; and second—that a service on a member of the family above the age of fourteen years, had not been made at the dwelling house of the defendant, but elsewhere.

Though the Justice was loth, the actions were all dismissed and the creditors went to Elizabeth to obtain attachments out of the Circuit Court, which were executed yesterday. Settlement of the case will take weeks.

A Double Funeral Sunday.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Gen. Michael Butt Hewson will be held in the Church of the Heavenly Rest Sunday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock, at the same time as the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hewson, who died an hour and a half before him at the home of C. J. Noel of Netherwood.

Gen. Hewson was formerly a resident of the State of Mississippi, but resided for the past two years in Washington. He died at Providence Hospital, in that city, of Bright's disease. Gen. Hewson was chief engineer of the Mississippi and Tennessee Railroad when that road was being constructed, and also chief engineer during the construction of the Mississippi levees. He also held the post of Adjutant-General of the State of Mississippi for a time.

Nerves Him Right.

Chancellor McGill has just made public recognition of the reputation and ability of Charles A. Reed, Esq., of this city, as an equity lawyer, by appointing him to the honorable office of Special Master in Chancery. Mr. Reed is appointed to the vacancy caused by the death of the late Judge Enos W. Runyon, and is to be congratulated upon this substantial proof of the esteem in which he is held by the Chancellor.

A Rotary Match.

The Crescent League bowling team defeated the Newark Bay Boat Club, Thursday evening of last week in this city, by a score of 1,401 to 1,341. These teams will roll a return game this evening at Bayonne. The Plainfield bowlers will be Van Emburgh, Van Winkle, Blondie, Teel, Haven, Thiers, Pelletreau, Vail, Dilts and Reed.

THEY HAVE TO REVEAL THEIR AGES

Some Particulars About the Organization, and Some Secrets of the Independent Order of Odd Ladies.

A public installation of the Independent Order of Odd Ladies of Plainfield, will be held in Howell Division Hall, East Front street, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The United Order of Independent Odd Ladies originated in East Boston, July 14, 1845, with six members. At that time there was no organization composed entirely of women in the United States. It is therefore the oldest sisterhood and the only one that is not a branch of, or in any way auxiliary to some brotherhood. It was, however, patterned somewhat after the Odd Fellows.

It requires a good deal of courage to become an Odd Lady, and it requires a good deal of red tape before the candidate is in good and regular standing and qualified to wear the purple insignia which signifies membership on the Government Board. The applicant for Odd Ladyship must reveal her age to the members of the committee. She must confess to some age between 18 and 60. When that is done the worst of the preparatory work is over. She must also advance $2 before her request for admission is acted upon. If everything goes well the candidate is invited to inspect the goat, and if her courage holds out she emerges a full fledged Odd Lady. A white regalia is placed over her shoulders and she is entitled to a seat in the lodge room. But she is not eligible for office until she has taken the second and third degrees. They have grips, passwords and signs for each degree, just like men.

The lodge pays a sick benefit of $3 a week, and a burial benefit of $30. Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, of Plainfield, was organized Aug. 28, 1888. This lodge was the first one outside of Massachusetts.

Safe So Far.

Private advice informs THE PRESS that Messrs. E. P. Thorn and Ellis A. Campbell arrived safely at Jacksonville, Fla., on the 19th inst., after their departure from Plainfield on the 16th for Crescent City, Fla. Mr. Thorn says in his letter that Old Neptune did not interfere with his internal arrangements during his voyage, and that the first and only familiar face he met on landing from his steamer was that of A. L. Force, junior member of the firm of W. L. Force & Bro., editors and proprietors of THE CONSTITUTIONALIST and DAILY PRESS, of this city, who is making a tour of the South on account of his health. He further states that he has not yet begun to catch black bass or kill quail, but his many friends in this section expect to hear great reports from him in that line later on, but will not, however, rest content with any story told of wonderful catches and kills, unless they receive a substantial evidence of his skill. His "side partner" regrets that circumstances prevent him from being with him in his coming pleasures.

The Horse Epidemic Ended.

The epidemic of glanders which threatened to spread through Central New Jersey has been checked by the prompt action of the State Board of Health. Dr. J. Gerth, Jr., yesterday raised the quarantine on the Scotch Plains stables where the disease had gained a foothold before it was discovered. Dr. Gerth announces that there is now no more danger from either glanders or farcy.

The biggest thing out is what the druggists term Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; its sale is enormous and it has never been known to fail. Price 25 cents.

It is well to remember that the oldest cases of rheumatism and neuralgia have been speedily cured by Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents a bottle.

IF HE DESERVED THAT, HE DESERVED MORE.

Another Unjust Verdict by a Petit Jury--If Dr. Long's Defense Was True, the Verdict is Unjust to Him; If Not, the Verdict is Unjust to Uhrhahn.

William Uhrhahn, blacksmith, has been awarded $250 damages in his suit against Dr. Monroe B. Long. Uhrhahn sued for $10,000, claiming that he had been injured to that extent through the physician's alleged improper treatment of his leg. The trial of the case lasted three days. Yesterday morning was devoted to the summing-up of counsel—Richard V. Lindabury for Dr. Long, and Craig A. Marsh for Mr. Uhrhahn. Judge Van Syckel's charge to the jury occupied about half an hour, and the jury retired at 12:30, noon. They were eight hours reaching their verdict.

The defense made by Dr. Long was that up to the time he ceased to visit Uhrhahn there was no dislocation of the hip joint, that he altogether discontinued his treatment three weeks and a few days after the injury, and that whatever dislocation there was must have occurred between the time when he gave up the case and the time when the joint was restored to its socket, and was consequently due to no fault or neglect of his. The physicians who found and set the dislocation did not do so until seven or eight weeks after the original injury, and a great deal of expert medical testimony was introduced to show that if the dislocation had occurred while Dr. Long had charge of the case the joint could not have set as readily as had been testified by Drs. Field and Cooper.

Dr. Long's evidence further showed that Uhrhahn had not permitted him to make such an examination as he had desired to make. The physician had sought to make a thorough investigation, and as it would have been an extremely painful one he had insisted on Uhrhahn's being put under the influence of ether. Uhrhahn had said no: he had taken ether once at the hospital, and he'd die before he'd take it again. So—Dr. Long's counsel contested—even if the joint had been dislocated during Dr. Long's charge of the case it was not any fault of the physician's, since the patient had refused to submit to a thorough examination.

It is understood that Dr. Long will appeal the case.

Democratic New Jersey.

(From The Somerville Messenger)

The Unionist-Gazette says: "New Jersey has so many good qualities that all Jerseymen ought to feel like patting her on the back. Yes, they should boom her." It forgot to mention, among New Jersey's good qualities, that she is Democratic. We feel very much inclined ourselves to pat New Jersey on the back, especially because she is Democratic first, last and all the time. She has been persistent, consistent and uniformly Democratic. Through all the war her Democracy knew no shadow of turning. She had a Democratic war Governor, taxed herself liberally, sent thousands of her sons to the front, and cast her vote for Democratic Presidential candidates. We feel like patting her on the back right royally. And, best of all, she never forsook her political faith, nor went after false gods. New Jersey can't easily be fooled. Pat New Jersey on the back and give her a boom, on account of her steadfast Democracy. "Old Virginny never tires."

The Y. M. C. A. Reception.

The reception given last evening by the Young Men's Christian Association, was attended by about 150 guests, and was a success in every particular. After spending some time in social intercourse, all were invited to the Association Hall where a musical and literary programme was most acceptably rendered by George Jenkins, James L. Dudley, F. A. Lewis, Henry S. Phillips, C. E. Scudder and William Holmes. The programme was received with most hearty applause, and especially was this true of the banjo solos of George Jenkins, of Somerville, who fairly captivated his audience.

After announcements, refreshments prepared by members of the "Ladies Nine" were served by the reception committee. The singing of college songs added to the evening's enjoyment.

The Reform Club Still Growing.

The regular weekly meeting of the Plainfield Reform Club, held at the hall last evening, was well attended. President Spencer occupied the chair. The Rev. Dr. Moneyman conducted the devotional exercises, and delivered the opening address. He was followed by Dr. Burnett and George Angleman with very appropriate remarks. The choir under the leadership of Prof. Vanderbeek assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Klug and Miss Hawkins, rendered some fine selections. Other speeches were made by Messrs. Gillies, Whiting and Mrs. Lord. An earnest appeal was made by the President for signers to the pledge, which was responded to by 12 coming forward and placing their name on the roll.

Charles Schermerhorn President.

At a regular convention of the Plainfield Assembly of the Non-Secret Endowment Order, held Wednesday evening, the following officers were installed, by J. B. Higgins, D. S. D., assisted by President Charles Schermerhorn:

President—Charles Schermerhorn.
Vice President—Horace J. Martin.
Secretary—J. B. Higgins.
Treasurer—Lewis R. Blackford.
Conductor—E. L. Boice.
Guardian—W. H. Warner.
Councilor—Walter L. Hetfield.

A Netherwood Correspondent Drops Into Poetry on the Nuisance at That Station.

To the Editor of The Press:—

Councilmen may come,
And councilmen may go,
But the water at the Netherwood depot
Still runs with a gurgling flow.

What is the present Council going to do to abate the nuisance at the Netherwood station?

How long will a suffering people submit to the present condition of things. It seem to me that a suit could be successfully brought against the city for allowing the nuisance to continue so long, menacing the health of the community.

The former ticket agent at the station had to give up the place on account of ill health, and the present agent, Mr. Erickson, and his family are sick most of the time.

Under the present condition of things how would it do to establish a pontoon train so that East Front streeters could reach the station direct after an ordinary rain, instead of having to go a mile out of their way to the Plainfield depot to take the train for New York.

Westfield, Too, Was Highly Pleased.

(From the Westfield Leader.)

A large delegation of Westfielders attended the presentation of "Mixed Pickles" at Stillman Music Hall, Plainfield, Tuesday evening. The entertainment was given by the Gilbert Dramatic Society of Brooklyn under the auspices of the Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, and most of the representatives from Westfield were either members or beneficiaries of that order, and present by invitation. The play was an entire success, all of the parts being well sustained, and the interest of the audience maintained throughout. The pickles into which the two Pickles, especially Joe, got themselves and other people were ludicrous in the extreme, and any artistic criticisms that might be made to the merit of the performance were silenced by the vim and spirit with which the whole cast entered into their work. Plainfield Council is to be congratulated on the outcome of their venture, no less for the pluck which they showed in arranging for such an entertainment than for the success with which it was carried out.

A Word for the Local Paper.

[From The Brownsburg Record].

Any man can take a newspaper. It is the cheapest thing he can buy. Every time a hen clucks and has laid an egg, his day's paper is paid for. It costs less than a postage stamp—less than to send or receive a single letter. What good does it do you? It instructs you and broadens your views. It interests you and your wife and educates your children. It comes to you every day, rain or shine, calm or storm, bringing you the news of the busy world. No matter what hap pens, it enters your door unceasingly as a welcome friend, full of sunshine, cheer and interest. It opens the door of the great world and puts you face to face with its people and its great events. It shortens the long Summer days and it enlivens the long Winter nights. It is your adviser, your gossip and your friend. No man is just to his children who does not give them the local paper to read. No man is good to himself and his wife who does not take first-class newspapers.

That Multifarious Family.

(From the Somerville Unionist-Gazette.)

How many Tottens are there in Somerset county? There is never a term of court that one does not bob up serenely as a juror, a plaintiff, a defendant, or a witness, and sometimes a half-dozen of them appear in a bunch. As the same one rarely shows himself twice there seems to be no end of them.—Plainfield Press.

For the information of The Press we will state that whatever the number may be they are all excellent citizens. Many of them have served their country and State with distinction. The county cannot have too many of them.

Already Selecting the Governor's Successor.

[From The Englewood Press.]

Senator Henry D. Winton is prominently mentioned as a probable successor to Gov. Abbett. Bergen county has had the nomination only once in its history, when Rodman M. Price, still a resident of the county, was elected. He served from 1854 to 1857. We should like to see the Senator become the nominee of the party for Governor. He has the ability and force of character to meet satisfactorily all the requirements of the high office.

King's Daughters to Meet.

A general meeting of the King's Daughters is called for Friday, Jan. 30, at 3:30 P. M., in the Central Baptist church of Elizabeth. Mrs. Isabella C. Davis will deliver the address. Leaders of Circles, and members, are requested to attend and to report their work.

By order of the Central Council,

State Secretary of New Jersey.

Just Like a Somervillian.

Mrs. Bishop Secures a Verdict.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The jury in the suit of Mrs. Eleanor A. The suit was brought to recover property belonging to her son, the mind reader.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—William C. Duncan, a city salesman for the diamond house of Lewessohn & Co., No. 41 Maiden Lane, has disappeared with $30,000 worth of loose diamonds. Inspector Byrnes is on the case.

Mr. Vilas Nominated for Senator.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 23.—In the joint Democratic legislative caucus at Madison Wm. F. Vilas, Postmaster-General under Cleveland's administration, was nominated for U. S. Senator. He will be elected on Tuesday.

Several Postmasters Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The following postmasters have been appointed by the President: Pennsylvania, Miss E. V. Neyman, Grove City; H. A. Groman, Bethlehem; P. R. Stetson, Reading. New Jersey, J. C. Youngblood, Morristown; J. H. Ackeman, Englewood; William Cumberbench, Orange Valley. New York, G. A. Wilkard, Booneville.

Strikers Delay Starting of Vessels.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The strike of the dock laborers has impeded the work of loading the steamship Ludgate Hill, which is taking on cargo in this city for New York, to such a degree that the departure of the vessel for her point of destination will be delayed for another week.

Dissolution Not Probable.

About Printers' Ink.

This is the day of printers' ink, and the prizes are for those who use it. Your traditions and prejudices may be to the contrary, but the world doesn't care a fig for them. The man who sits and waits for his trade in these days gets left. Don't advertise, don't quote your price lists, don't see that your city or your business is represented in your patronizing territory, and don't stand up manfully alongside of those who are fighting for your rights and interests, and there can be but one result—shrivel-ing up. Good salesmen, first class articles, gilt edged credit are not enough. They are excellent, necessary—but not enough. Printers' ink beats them in the long run. Uncle Sam's mails go every day, carrying their freight of special offers, new crops, long credits, cash discounts, job lots and lovers' tales from everywhere. And in the end your trade is seduced. It's the world-old story of the honeyed tongue and the open ear. In the fierce competition of these days old habits and associations simply cannot stand the pressure. The trade is for the man who uses printers' ink.—Grocery World.

Development in Advertising.

In no department of the modern newspaper has there been greater and more marked improvements shown than in the field of advertising. There is a greater display of taste and literary style in the composition, and an evident effort is made to appeal to the intelligence and refinement of the reader. This is seen not only in the advertisements of the large mercantile establishments, where trained skill is employed, but as well in the three line advertisement which is written by the advertiser himself and which, in terseness and directness of style, can lay claim to great literary merit. The development of advertising may yet lead to the establishment of special courses of training in business colleges. Already nearly $25,000,000 are spent annually in the United States in newspaper advertising, every dollar of which, if used judiciously, has returned a large interest to the investor.—Philadelphia Press.

You Must Have the Stuff.

Advertising alone—no matter how excellent—cannot build up a big trade or make a house great; yet vital importance hinges upon advertising, for very few concerns have ever reached colossal proportions without liberal and intelligent advertising. I have in my mind four words that mean much:

Variety, Style, Quality, Price!

The store that has these, and in its advertisements tells its story in a plain, fair, square way that's attractive and readable, is bound to prosper.—Henry Curtin in Clothing Gazette.

Don't Be Afraid.

Too little advertising is like sowing too little seed. A farmer in planting corn puts a number of grains into each hill, and is satisfied if one good healthy stalk comes from each planting. It's the constant advertiser that is bound to attract attention. It's the succession of bright, catchy advertisements that refuse to be ignored. That the proper time must be allowed for the fruit to grow, ripen and be gathered is as true as that wheat cannot be reaped the day after it is sown.—Printer's Ink.

Decline of the Non-Advertising Class.

It is curious to watch how old things are passing away, and "all things becoming new." In not one only, but in many trades, pursuits and professions, methods have been completely revolutionized, and it has become the fact that such means as need to bring success in the olden time are now obsolete, discarded and wholly lacking in utility. Take the great daily newspaper of today for an example. Who would be satisfied with the papers of even thirty years ago, printed as they were in their comparatively small circulations on the lumbering presses of that period? The perfecting of the stereotypers' art brought in a new era of newspaper enterprise, and now circulations of two or three hundred thousand are printed on the fastest printing machines of the day in an hour or two—the machines being increased in number as required, and the stereotyping process being equal to the manufacture of as many duplicate pages as may be needed.

It is an age of stir. Men must move, and they must make their business move. The man who doesn't advertise in the newspapers is a back number. Men regard him as a curiosity—a relic, and the boys ask him where he got his hat. He is behind the times. The race to which he belongs is nearly extinct. The advertiser has most of the business the relic used to have, and will soon have the rest. And where will the relic be then? What can he do but to retire from the unequal struggle, and join his ancestors in that silent city where nobody advertises—that place whose inhabitants are noted for being "unanimous" and for "letting well enough alone!" No trade revolution is more complete—none better established—than the change which has been worked in the matter of newspaper advertising. The merchant who doesn't use the newspaper advertising columns freely is doomed. The merchant who uses them freely and judiciously must reap great rewards.

Advertising Aphorisms.

Too little advertising is like planting too little seed.

A can of printer's ink is not to be fooled with any more than a can of dynamite. Both are as effective and useful if used carefully as they are dangerous and destructive if used carelessly.

The successful advertiser not only gives particular attention to the wording of an advertisement, but is also just as particular about its typographical construction and display, so that a casual glance tells the story, while the "make up" and general arrangement is pleasing and catchy to the eye.

The great secret of success in newspaper advertising is the selection of the proper journals and a properly worded and correctly displayed advertisement. No little interest and attractiveness is added by the judicious use of cuts. An attractive illustration excites the curiosity of the reader, and he reads to satisfy his curiosity.

The progressive merchant of today owes his success to advertising; without it one might as well take down his sign and invite the sheriff to walk in and close up his business. The wisest business men and the most successful ones are those who keep their names prominently before the public when trade is good as well as when it is dull. Constant and continuous advertising, got up in an attractive style, is like the constant dripping of water upon the flinty rock; slowly but surely an impression is made.—Las Vegas (N. M.) Optic.

Concerning Salesmen.

The stock of merchandise may be varied, seasonable and large, and displayed in the most seductive manner possible, but the measure of success will be very small if the salesman is inefficient or unobliging. The dry goods clerk who feels that the halls of congress are his proper sphere may be correct; it is pretty certain that clerking behind the gingham counter is not. It is better to be a good lawyer or constable than an indifferent ribbon or cheese dispenser. A merchant should be a good salesman himself—courteous, genial, obliging, well informed of everything in his line—and he should have only good clerks about him. Better no clerks than poor ones. And the clerk who is not a success should either quickly improve or quit the business.

Good Natured Advertising.

The merchant or business man in any line who desires to reach the public, and profit in doing so, should give his announcements and invitations a genial, frank and good natured cast. The advertisement that bears on its surface the indications of a disordered liver does not attract. It repels, and instead of doing the writer good, it injures him and drives people elsewhere. The merchant who smiles through his announcements and over his counter makes friends and money. "We go this way but once," and people turn aside and pay good money to meet a warm hand clasp and a smile.

Keep Before the Public.

To a certain extent general advertising creates a want. It announces new things and familiarizes the public with old ones. General advertising is of as great value to the advertiser in keeping an established article before the public as in introducing a new one. The most successful business men realize this, and they never let the public forget their existence. The oft repeated assertion that advertisements are not read is proved to be a lie of the most senseless kind by the advertiser's record of results.—Journalist.

A Fable (Not from Æsop).

An owl once said: "Who so wise as I?
See the length of my head; see the size of my eyes;
I will go up in a tree and cry,
"Who, who, who! so wise as I!"
The chickens began to cackle and fly,
The rabbit cut to their holes did hie,
The mice they hid in the granary,
But a boy with a gun stole out on the sly,
And blew that owl to eternity.
Then he exclaimed, with a merry grin,
"Did to judiciously advertise."
Moral—Don't advertise your weak points to your competitor.

CONVINCED AT LAST.

A Court Episode Which Proves That All Things Are Possible.

These were the words an excited young man shouted as he rushed into the office of a justice of the peace and paused before the desk whereon the venerable bulwark of the law was reposing his weary feet. If the young man thought to infuse the legal luminary with a portion of his excitement he was disappointed. Justices do not get excited unless they see a chance of losing their fees. This one simply removed the pedal rampart from between his red nose and the excited youth, dropped upon the desk the hands that had been clasped behind his repository of legal lore and eyed the applicant for a warrant with mingled curiosity and doubt.

"What d'ye want a warrent fer?" he finally asked.

"I want to arrest a woman for stealing my sister's dress."

"How old's yer sister?"

"Six years old."

"I saw her wear it last night. She'd made it over to fit her, but I knew it in a minute."

"See here, young feller," said the august judge, as he eyed the young man in a threatening way, "don't ye go fer to be a foolin' with the dignity of this yer court. Don't ye suppose I know that a woman can't make over a dress of a six-year-old child to fit her? They ain't goods enough. I hain't been married thirty years without learnin' somethin' about wimmin's fixin's. Now, you go right away from yere before I fine yer five dollars fer contempt of court."

"But it was an opera dress; she was wearing it at the opera last night."

"Oh! Well, that's different. Why didn't ye say so in the first place? Ye kin have the warrent."—Quill, in West Shore.

Carrie (aged six, very indignant)—I'll let you know I've blue blood in my veins, too. My grandfather was one of the pilgrims that came to this country in the ship Sunflower, and landed on Plimpton rock.—Judge.

Convincing His Wife.

"No, sir, I do not."

"Thank you—thank you. My wife wants me to sell a favorite dog and buy her a sealskin sacque with the money; but I reckon four hundred and three positive refusals to buy will convince her of her folly."—Munsey's Weekly.

Brown—Say, Jones, do you know Rev. Dr. Thirdly?

Jones—Yes. He's a very good man.

Brown (a little later, to Smith)—Say, Smith, do you know Skinny Pete, the "Milwaukee Terror?"

Hostess—No, he's at home. He hasn't been away for months. Why?

Caller—Oh, nothing, nothing at all. By the way, I wonder what has become of the pretty Widow Wilkins.—Good News.

Contrary to Precedent.

"Well," said Mr. Hojack, "young Mr. Trotter is in the toils at last. I understand he is engaged to—"

"He won't like that," replied Hojack, interrupting, "he always objected to toil of all kinds."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

ANT BRIDGE BUILDERS.

The following story, told by an eye-witness, is entitled to a place among the instances of intelligence among the lower animals. A cook was much annoyed to find her pastry shelves attacked by ants. By careful watching it was discovered that they came out twice a day in search of food, at about seven in the morning and four in the afternoon. How were the pies to be protected against the invaders?

After many things had been tried without success, it was suggested that a circle of molasses one inch in diameter be made around the pies. The next morning, therefore, one of the boys, who had a personal interest in the matter, got up early and prepared his attack. By a quarter of seven every thing was ready, and he took his point of observation.

He did not have long to wait, for at 6:50 o'clock he noticed that off in the left-hand corner of the pantry was a line of ants slowly making their way in the direction of the pies. They seemed like a vast army coming forth to attack the enemy. In front was a leader, who was larger than any of the others, and who always kept a little ahead of his troops.

They were of the sort known as the medium-sized red ant, which is regarded as the most intelligent of its kind.

Slowly they marched along in double file, until the leader came within six inches of the circle of molasses. Then, evidently, a signal to halt was given, for every ant stood still, while the leader went on to investigate the unforeseen obstacle. Soon he returned, and instead of taking his place again at the head of the army, he went along the line, summoning here and there one—the leading intellects, probably—from the ranks.

About forty ants out of five hundred stepped out and joined the leader. The General and his aids held a council, and then proceeded to examine the circle of molasses. Certain portions of it seemed to be assigned to the different ants, and each selected unerringly the point in the section under his charge where the stream of molasses was narrowest. Then the leader made his tour of investigation.

He went around the entire circle and decided upon one particular spot as the narrowest; his aids joined him there, and then, one being left to guard this narrow point, the others returned to those who were still in line. The order to march was given, and the ants all made their way to a nail hole in the wall at which the plastering was loose.

Here they broke rank and set about carrying pieces of plaster to the place in the molasses which had been agreed upon as the narrowest. To and fro they went from the nail hole to the molasses until, at 11:30 o'clock, they had thrown a bridge across. Then they formed themselves in line again and marched over, and by 12:45 every ant was eating pie.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

KICKED HIS PATIENT.

The Novel Manner in Which a Doctor Cured a Case of Malaria.

None know the value of the imagination in therapeutics better than the doctors, who sometimes, with entire credit to themselves, put quite as much imagination as medicine into their patients, and with perhaps better effect. Not long ago a physician told an amusing illustration of this. He had been warned, he said, by a brother physician of a certain rascally impostor who was making the rounds of the profession with an assumed case of malaria. The real purpose of his visit was blackmail. One day a man exactly answering this man's description came into the house office of this physician, and, after detailing the symptoms of malaria, asked the doctor to treat him. "I asked him," said the doctor, "to step out into the yard with me. As soon as I got him safely outside I walked up to him and gave him the best thrashing I ever gave any body in my life, ending it by kicking him down to the gate. To my surprise he made little resistance, and when I released him at the gate, saying, "There, I think that will cure you,' he responded, humbly: 'Thank you, doctor,' and went away. In a few days, to my utter astonishment, he came back to tell me that he was much better. 'But, doctor,' he suggested, mildly, 'could you kick a little easier this time?" Then," said the doctor, "I began to talk to the fellow, and found that I was altogether mistaken in the case. This poor fellow actually had malaria and was no more a blackmailer than I. I treated him thereafter with less powerful remedies, but he always declared that no treatment I ever gave him did him the good that one thrashing did. 'And did I ever tell him of my mistake?' Certainly not. Why should I? It helped cure him."—N. Y Sun.

Glad to See Him.

Dashaway—I visited my native place last week. Thought I would show my old schoolmates how prosperous I had been since I left home.

Cleverton—Did they seem to appreciate your rise?

Dashaway—Well, I should say so. Almost every man I met wanted to borrow a dollar.—Munsey's Weekly.

A WONDERFUL RACE.

That Is What a Detroit Man Calls the Japanese.

Interesting Things Seen in the Land of the Mikado—"Japan for the Japanese" the Popular Sentiment—A Decidedly Receptive People.

Mr. Frederick Stearns, of Detroit, has returned after a year's residence in Japan and has some interesting things to tell of that wonderful people. To a Free Press reporter Mr. Stearns said, among other things, speaking of their agricultural methods:

"Their methods are unlike ours in every respect. We can teach them nothing in the line of agriculture; on the contrary, we have many things to learn from them. Our plows, harrows, reapers, mowers, etc., while not unknown to them, have not been adopted, as they consider their own ideas superior, which they undoubtedly are."

"Yes, in much the same style, and each is named after a favorite god or deified great man. The houses of the majority of the people are but one story in height and are constructed of bamboo poles fastened together, surmounted by a thatched roof. There are no walls, the Japanese paper, which serves the double purpose of providing shelter and light, being substituted. Glass windows and shingled roofs may be seen on some few houses. All views from the house open upon the garden, the street being entirely closed up. The Japanese will have his garden if it is but half the size of an ordinary billiard table. The love of the beautiful in nature and art is inherent with the whole race—absolutely a part of their existence. On all sides of the house are built porches, it being the especial delight of the Japanese to live in the open air as much as possible. Rich foliage and flowers may be seen in these gardens. The chrysanthemum is the imperial flower, but the cherry blossom is the most popular with the people.

"Japan is populated with an aggregate of 38,000,000 souls, a martial race that has never yet been invaded. The people are resolute, full of courage, and are very patriotic. Since the revolution of 1868 they have had a constitutional government. The Mikado is the nominal ruler, his powers being limited by a body of men divided into two branches, which corresponds to our Senate and House of Representatives. Their form of government is even more liberal than that of Great Britain.

"There are fewer social distinctions there than in other countries, the people living upon terms of equality. The men have adopted the regulation English dress, wherein I think they made a mistake, because their own peculiar costume is much prettier, lighter and more comfortable, allowing greater freedom to the movements of the body. I noticed that, although they wear the European costume in the daytime, they discard it and don their own attire in the evening. The women have refused to adopt the dress of the English and American ladies and cling to the garments they have been accustomed to wear, although the court ladies wear the French costumes."

"Are the people possessed of abundant educational facilities?"

"They are, indeed—the men, I mean, for the women are not allowed the advantages of acquirement of knowledge. They are beautiful and virtuous and make excellent mothers, but are looked upon as inferiors. I said to the Japanese: 'Your greatest ambition is to reach a point where you can be considered the equals of the Europeans, but you can never attain that end until you alter your treatment of your women, educate them, refine them and consider them as good as yourselves.'

"The Japanese are very receptive and imitative. They have adopted many of our own commercial ideas, and carry on mining, manufactures and build their own steamships and railroad cars. The locomotives and rails are imported. Every important point in the country can now be reached by railroad. The Japanese are very jealous of foreigners and will allow no outsider to obtain a foothold in their country for the purpose of engaging in business—and they are right. America for the Americans and Japan for the Japanese is my sentiment."

UNDER PETTICOAT RULE

A Sioux Chief Who Bows Meekly to His White Wife's Will.

It is twenty-five years since Bruginer, the Sioux chief, cut away from his aboriginal moorings and married his present wife, an accomplished woman and the descendant of St. Louis pioneers. Now he is ending his eventful life in a modern home. His is noted among the best equipped and most productive of Missouri farms. Mrs. Bruginer is very much younger than he, and, whatever his kingly prerogatives among the Sioux may have been, she is certainly now the ruler. Like most frontiersmen, Bruginer is famously extravagant. Three or four fortunes had slipped out of his hands in a misty way, when Mrs. Bruginer took the reins, and to her economic skill and management is due his financial regeneration. They are rich again, and it is almost pathetic to hear this old man talking about going to Paris and around the world some day. In spite of his years and hardships the spirit of adventure is as strong in him as ever. He is wonderfully preserved in health and strength. His voice is still as sonorous as a grizzly's. His unflinching gray eyes, deep set beneath shaggy, frowning brows, are the undimmed mirrors of what was once a relentless, unyielding will. "Ze Siouxi" he exclaimed at the outset of a recent conversation, "I am ze King." And, seemingly not quite satisfied that this sufficiently emphasized his supreme relation, he added: "By gar, I am ze Emp'r-r-or!" As the leave-taking he was asked by the visitor if there was any probability of soon meeting him again in the city. He glanced deferentially at Mrs. Bruginer. "I don't let him go there any more," said she. "No," he supplemented, apologetically, "she go."

One Man's Way.

If one were to stand in any fair sized audience in this country and exclaim, "No stranger should leave the city without a box of"— and ask his hearers to finish the sentence, it is a hundred to one that the audience would shout, "——'s candy!" giving the name of a well known Chicago confectioner. This gentleman started in business a few years ago with two leading ideas distinctly in mind: To make strictly first class goods, to tell the public that he had them and to keep telling the public that he had them. He has not used large advertisements—in his line and for his purpose that would not have been the best way; but he has persistently and continuously hammered out the statement that no stranger should leave the city without a box of his candy, until his name and personality are associated with the candy business in that city as no others are.

The illustration suggests three points: Advertising matter should be plain in composition, it should suggest the individuality of the advertiser, and it should be continued indefinitely in use. Of course the plan referred to in the foregoing is better adapted to paid matter in the form of "readers" than to displayed advertising.

In mercantile advertising where display is used it is well to make one advertisement have relation to another which is to follow. Having secured the attention of a reader for his announcement the advertiser can catch him for the next by a line inviting particular notice to the proclamation which will appear in the same paper the next day or the next week, as the case may be.

The study of methods is one which every advertiser can make very profitable. Newspaper advertising is a necessity for the good business man, and pays him well; but he can multiply its returns by using his space with energy and judgment.

Small Matters.

Advertisers cannot take too much care in the typographical setting of their announcements. Sometimes a trifling alteration, the substitution of a slightly different style of type, or the rearrangement of a headline, will tell perceptibly upon the general appearance of the advertisement and the results to the advertiser.

The Question, "Is Marriage a Failure," Settled at Last.

The two lines above show the arrangement of a heading of an advertisement sent to a well known magazine. Upon the suggestion of the publisher it was changed to read as follows:

The Question,
"Is Marriage a Failure?"
Settled at Last.

In making this alteration the publisher writes: "It may be a small matter, but in my opinion the success or failure of an advertisement oftentimes depends upon just such small matters." And just here the question arises, Do advertisers in general bestow as much attention as they ought upon these "small matters?"

But They Must Be Good Ones.

It is the time now for merchants to take advantage of the demand for pictorial advertising. This demand is not new. On the contrary, it has always existed. Heretofore, however, merchants have chosen to satisfy the demand with pictures which, to say the least, were coarse and repulsive, and which did not properly reflect the taste of the age. It is now time for merchants to use art in advertising. It is no more expensive than the inartistic method, and gives a certain tone and character to a store which the blatant, boisterous and altogether preposterous cuts do not give.—American Storekeeper.

An Unworthy View.

It is well understood by fair minded business men that local enterprises are dependent on the newspaper, while the newspaper is, to a certain extent, dependent on local enterprises. When the enterprise ignores the newspaper the newspaper must retaliate in kind.—Lancaster (N. H.) Democrat.

An Advertising Speculation.

Among the many incidents characteristic of human nature is one which recently came under the observation of a young man connected with a prominent publishing house, one of the oldest in the country, and which has for three generations been conducted by the descendants of the original founder. With other publications there was issued a neat little treatise on household economy, showing how, on a small income, it was possible to live comfortably. The author was a woman, and gave her book the title, "How She Did It." The book had a fairly good sale, but presently there appeared to be a sudden and unaccountable demand for the volume, and every fortnight the house was puzzled by orders for more. It ran through a fourth edition before the young superintendent learned the cause. The orders had invariably come from the same source, and it was then discovered that the persistent buyer advertised the book extensively in sporting and other journals. His method was simplicity itself. The title given, he would insert, "Mailed secure for fifty cents, sealed."—Truth.

"I HATE TO ASK MY DOCTOR."

False modesty and procrastination are responsible for much female suffering. We can excuse the instinctive delicacy that suggests concealment to the young, but there is no excuse for those who reject the assistance of a woman.

ACCIDENT BY FALLING WALLS

Two Firemen's Heads Split Open and Their Bodies Horribly Mangled.

Four Others Were Badly Injured—The Building Gave the Appearance of a Large Gas Stove While Burning—The Stocks of all the Occupants a Complete Loss—Names of the Killed.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 24.—About $300,000 worth of property was destroyed or damaged by fire, smoke and water last night, and two firemen killed and four others injured by falling walls.

The fire started in the rear of the store on Pearl street, near the Terrace, occupied by L. Marcus & Co., clothing manufacturers, in the large building known as the Clothing Exchange. The corner store was occupied by the owners of the building, Warner Brothers, clothing manufacturers. Next was Darling & Scholes, button manufacturers, next Singsheim & Harris, manufacturers of boys' and children's clothing. Marcus & Company's store came next.

The Whole Department at Work.

Th fire was discovered about ten minutes to 9 o'clock bursting simultaneously from the three stories of that section occupied by L. Marcus & Son. The alarm was sent in from the fire house on Franklin street directly back of the building. When the department arrived on the scene the Marcus store was in flames, which shot out from all the windows. The building gave the appearance of a large gas stove. Chief Hornung immediately sent in the second and third alarms and the whole department was soon at work. The fire was difficult to get at, except from the front, being surrounded on nearly all sides by smaller buildings.

Firemen Buried in the Ruins.

After the fire was under control, the floors having fallen, a half dozen firemen were standing close to the curb playing streams of water into the building. Suddenly a large arch, of which there were several at the top of the building, swung out and fell to the ground. The firemen under it were caught. Their comrades at once began the removal of the debris. Four men were badly injured, and two—Jacob Schneider and Adam Fischer—were literally crushed to death. The falling wall struck them on the head, crushing the skull of each and splitting open their bodies. Several other firemen near by were injured by flying bricks.

The stocks of all the occupants of the building except the Warners are a total loss, while that of the Warners was very largely damaged.

A BRITISH AFFAIR.

Americans Not Wanted at the Jamaica Exposition.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The coming Jamaica Exposition is to be made, if England can make it, a strictly British affair. Prince George of Wales is now on his way to open the exposition, with great eclat and a grand display of royalty.

The chagrin in the United States at the failure of the British to extend an unqualified invitation to American exhibitors excites amusement here, where the motive is well understood.

Canada, Jamaica and the remainder of Great Britain's colonies in North, Central and South America are to be united in one grand customs union, buying from each other such products as they require, and giving the rest of the world the go-by.

The colonies will be expected to discriminate in favor of British manufacturers as against non-British, but otherwise they will, to all intents and purposes, of a tariff character, be a union with themselves.

The scheme takes in Belize and Honduras, as well as the Falkland Islands, in fact, everything British on the American continent, or geographically connected with it.

The consent of the colonies is needed, and that is to be won through such events as the Jamaica Exposition.

A vast display of American manufactures on the occasion would mar the harmony, and not tend to the consummation of the plan.

Daniel W. Flagler to be Chief of Ordnance with the rank of Brigadier General.

The Irish Programme.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—As soon as the Boulogne negotiations between the two factions of the Irish party are concluded, delegates are to be sent to America and Australia to acquaint the friends of Ireland in those countries with the exact state of affairs. In the meantime the dual party promises to make a pretty bad time for the Ministers, who will have their hands full deciding their rival claims to the attention of the House, attending to the motions of censure and answering the double-barreled questions of the two-headed Irish contingent.

Jim Daly and Tom Tobin Matched.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 24.—Articles of agreement have been signed for a glove fight between Jim Daly of Philadelphia, who recently fought Ed Smith, and Tom Tobin of Troy, N. Y. The men are to fight here on January 28 for a purse of $600 and gate money. Daly's friends are confident of success.

To Take Mad King Otto's Place.

MUNICH, Jan. 24.—The papers here propose that Regent Luitpold, uncle of the insane King Otto, be proclaimed King of Bavaria on his coming birthday, March 12. The consent of the Upper House and of the Landtag is necessary and will probably be given, as Otto is hopelessly insane.

FEARS OF A FRESHET.

The Hudson River Rising and Its Tributaries Breaking Up.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 23.—There are indications of a heavy freshet along the Hudson river. The water is now six feet above the ordinary level, and a further rise is expected. All the streams emptying into the Hudson at this locality are very high and threaten to break up.

Dispatches from Tribes Hill say that the ice in the Mohawk broke up at 8 a. m. and that the hotel and three dwelling houses are surrounded by water. Their is a gorge about two miles below the town and the ice is within three feet of the suspension bridge.

ROSDOUT, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Walkill, Rondout and Esopus creeks have swollen to immense proportions and the waters are still continuing to rise rapidly. Houses, stores, barns and outbuildings are flooded, and much of the contents destroyed. The situation at Eddyville is alarming. The immense ice jam which formed last week causes the water to back up and flood the village to a depth of several feet. The people fled from their homes last night and sought safety in higher altitudes.

The ground floor of a hotel a quarter of a mile from the creek is covered with water to a depth of three feet. Boats are being used to-day to go through some of the streets. Much damage is again being wrought. Grave fears are entertained that the ice jam will give way and rush the water and ice down Rondout Creek to the Hudson.

PREFERS HER EVIL LIFE.

The Countess Szirmay the Wife of a Jersey City Barber.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The sad story of the Countess Jeanne Marie Szirmony, who was brought to America by her father's cast off mistress, has aroused universal interest, and much sympathy is felt for the young girl who so pitifully replies to the question why she does not reform and return to the honored name of her father. "I cannot. My mother mother was bad and from her I inherited it all, and rather than return to my father's roof and riches I prefer to follow the lot that has been cast for me." This was the answer the girl made to the urgent request of Marshal Bernard to return to her home.

Joseph Monderer, a barber, who works at No. 203 Washington street, Jersey City, shows a marriage certificate in proof of his statement that he married Virginie Szirmoy on May 6, 1890. Monderer seems proud of his father-in-law, though he says he will bring an action for divorce, his wife having deserted him for another man.

An Old Man Murdered.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 24.—Elbridge G. Reed, a milk dealer residing near Captain's Pond in North Salem, N. H., was found dead in his barn during the morning by his wife. There were bruises on the back of his head which evidently caused death. No cause can be assigned for the murder, as the deceased had no enemies so far as known, and but little money. The murdered man was 70 years old. Two men have been arrested on suspicion.

A QUORUM ON HAND

The Battle Nearly Over on the Closure Resolution.

A VOTE TO BE TAKEN TUESDAY.

Sharp Passage in the House Between the Speaker and Mr. Cooper.

Senator Cameron Will Probably Explain To-Day His Connection With the Silver Pool—Mr. Blaine Will Send the Resolutions on Jewish Persecution to Russia. The House Preparing to Rush Business.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The indications are that the Republican leaders will force a vote on the closure resolution next Tuesday. Mr. Aldrich asked unanimous consent that a vote be taken at 5 o'clock to-day, but this was objected to by the Democrats.

The Republicans now have a quorum. It was secured through the return of Senator Chandler from New Hampshire and the attendance of Senators Quay and Cameron of Pennsylvania, which resulted in the presence in the city of 46 Republican Senators, or one more than a quorum. Information is also said to have been received to the effect that Senator Squire of Washington is on his way to the capital.

It is not believed now that more than four Republicans—Teller, Wolcott, Stewart and Jones—will vote against the closure resolution.

WORK IN THE HOUSE.

Sharp Passages Between Speaker Reed and Mr. Cooper of Indiana.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—In the House, on the demand of Mr. Breckinridge of Arkansas, the journal was read in full, and after some debate was approved.

There were some sharp passages between the Speaker and Mr. Cooper of Indiana, growing out of a point of order by Mr. McKinley on a resolution offered by Mr. Cooper directing the committee investigating the Pension Bureau to report the resolution to the House. The resolution was finally reported and referred to the Committee on Rules. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Naval Appropriation bill.

THAT SILVER POOL.

Littler Bought Silver for Senator Cameron Before the Bill Passed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—David T. Littler of Illinois created a great deal of mischief for Senator Cameron in his testimony before the Silver Pool Investigating Committee. It will be recalled that Senator Vest swore that Senator Cameron had told him his purchases of silver had not been made until after legislation had become an accomplished fact. Littler contradicts this. After stating that he had bought, on his own account, between $40,000 and $50,000 worth of silver some time in the early part of last summer, Littler testified as follows:

"I also purchased about $100,000 worth for Senator Cameron. I did so at his request. The purchase was made when silver legislation was pending."

Senator Cameron will probably take the stand in his own defense. He claims that he has done nothing to merit criticism. His purchases, he urges, were in no way influenced by legislation, nor did they influence his vote for the Free Coinage bill.

Mr. Blaine Will Send the Resolutions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Representatives Cummings of New York, and Catchings of Mississippi, called upon Secretary Blaine and presented him resolutions adopted by the Hebrews of Gainesville, Miss., asking the Secretary to protest against the persecution of the Jews in Russia. The Secretary said that he had received many similar petitions from all parts of the country, which would be forwarded to the United States Minister at St. Petersburg, and by him transmitted to M. De Giers, the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Want a Place for Gen. Banks.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The friends of General N. P. Banks are pressing him for United States Marshal of Massachusetts, a vacancy in the office having been created by the appointment of the incumbent to a State office. General Butler, among others, is enlisted in the movement. General Banks is old and needs assistance. He held this place under Mr. Arthur; but, unfortunately for the present movement, got his accounts in a helpless tangle. The salary is $6,000 a year.

THE BROCKTON TRAGEDY.

Mrs. Anderson and One Child Dead—Astrologer George Arrested.

BROCKTON, Mass., Jan. 24.—Mrs. Anderson, who took poison and gave it to her three children, died at 12:55 p. m., after suffering great agony. The oldest child is still in a deep stupor and is not expected to live. Another, Edith, died last night.

George H. George, better known as M. George, the astrologer and seer, was arrested on complaint that he was an accessory before the fact to Mrs. Anderson's suicide. He is a thin, undersized man, with an iron grey beard, is well along in years, and has long followed astrology, travelling from town to town in winter and in summer frequenting the Spiritualistic resorts.

He was brought before Judge Reed, who continued the case until Tuesday morning, and George, in default of $2,000 bonds, will remain in prison. He pleaded not guilty, and to a reporter denied having told to Mrs. Anderson anything that could have caused the tragedy.

FIENDISH TREATMENT.

A Father Holds His Child on a Hot Stove for a Trifling Offense.

NEW EGYPT, N. J., Jan. 24.—Fiendish cruelty was perpetrated by John Meiser, an Ocean County farmer, living near here, upon his son, who is not yet four years of age.

The child was in the house at the time and committed some slight offense. The father flew into a rage, and seizing the child, placed it on the top of a hot stove, burning the flesh in a terrible manner.

The screams of the child quickly brought its mother to the scene, and she carried it to another room, where she dressed its injuries as best she could. Meiser was ashamed to admit that he did the deed intentionally, and said he merely held the boy over the stove to frighten him, but that he accidentally dropped him.

Immediately after the affair Meiser fled to escape arrest. The child's condition is critical.

Chilian Insurgents in Control.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 24.—Information has been received here from Chili that the insurgents are masters of the situation. All stores in Valparaiso containing, or supposed to contain, arms and ammunition, were completely gutted by the rebels. The revolutionists will permit the port of Valparaiso to be reopened on condition that the foreign consuls observe a neutral attitude. Foreigners residing in the city are declared to be safe from molestation. The opinion generally prevails throughout Chili that unless President Balmaceda speedily resigns the entire armed force of Chili will arise in insurrection.

BELGIUM'S MYSTERY

Great Excitement Over Prince Baudouin's Death.

HE WAS HEIR TO THE THRONE.

His Love for a Banished Governess Said to Have Caused His Demise.

The Court Physicians Say He Died of Congestion of the Lungs—King Leopold Plunged In the Deepest Grief—Strange Fatality that Pursues All Connected With the Conquest of Mexico.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 24.—The death of Prince Baudouin, nephew of King Leopold and heir to the throne of Belgium, has caused a tremendous sensation and creates consternation in all classes in Brussels. There are all sorts of rumors circulating, as the public was entirely unaware that the Prince was ill.

The official bulletin issued by the court physicians gives the cause of the Prince's death as congestion of the lungs.

Crowds of people are parading the streets or gathered in knots at street corners eagerly discussing the situation.

Did He Commit Suicide?

The popular story current to-day is that the Prince either committed suicide or died of a broken heart. The opinion is freely uttered that it is a repetition of Prince Rudolph's case. King Leopold, it is said, undertook personally to break up an attachment which Prince Baudouin had formed for a lovely plebian, employed in training the young Princess Josephine. The attachment was discovered only recently, although an intrigue had been going on for over a year, and a prince is said to have been born who will never figure in the list of the royal family.

Prince Baudouin, it is asserted, actually shocked the royal household by proposing to marry the woman he loved, even at the cost of forfeiting his princely position, thus following the example of Prince Oscar of Sweden, who threw up all his princely titles to marry Miss Monk. But King Leopold would not have it. He drove the unhappy mistress, with her child, out of Belgium, with a provision for their support provided she should never see Baudouin again.

The Body Lying in State.

The body of the Prince lies in state on the bed in which he died, surrounded by tall wax candles in golden candlesticks. It is attired in the uniform of a captain of the Royal Belgian Carabineers. In one hand he grasps his sword and the other hand holds a rosary, from which is pendant a golden cross. The features of the Prince are calm, pale and placid, and apparently not in the slightest degree changed by death.

Guarding the deathbed, the death chamber and the palace is a guard of honor from the carabineer regiment to which the Prince belonged. Officers of that regiment, in full uniform and with drawn swords, will guard the Prince's body until it is finally laid to rest in the burial vaults of the royal family of Belgium.

Among the additional facts gathered in connection with the Prince's death is the news that King Leopold visited the dying Prince's bedside at midnight and that the Ministers had previously called to the palace of the Count of Flanders.

The New Heir to the Throne.

By the death of Prince Baudouin, his brother Albert Leopold Clement Marie Meinrad, who was born April 8, 1885, and who is now a student in the military school, becomes heir to the throne of Belgium.

Again the Story is Told.

EDINBURGH, Jan. 24.—It is reported in this city that the great railroad strike has been settled, but the same rumor has been circulated several times during the past four or five weeks.

A STRANGE REQUEST.

Dr. Heuser's Ghastly Directions for the Disposal of His Remains.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 25.—The body of Dr. Charles F. Heuser, who died at 214 South Sharp street, was cremated at Loudon Park. He was a well known physician and apothecary. The circumstances connected with his ghastly directions for the disposal of his remains make his story and that of his family a very remarkable one.

Dr. Heuser left a will in which he requested that his heart be taken from his body in the presence of witnesses on the day of his death, and that his remains be afterwards cremated, the ashes to be distributed among his friends.

The strange clause concerning the heart of the dead physician caused somewhat of a sensation, but his friends resolved to carry out his wishes as nearly as possible. A number of physicians and surgeons declined to mutilate the corpse of their dead friend, but yesterday Dr. Bernard T. Meyer, in the presence of a few friends removed the heart from the body. Then replacing it, the remains were made ready for cremation. The ashes will be disposed of as directed in the will.

The circumstance that lends additional interest to the singular ceremony is the fact that Dr. Heuser, after his wife's death some years ago, drove a knife into her heart to protect her from the possibility of being inhumed alive. He has frequently told the story of this affair himself, and said it was the most terrible duty he ever had to perform to thrust the cold steel into the bosom of the woman he loved as she laid in the bier before him, yet he could not think of letting her run the awful risk of coming back to life in her grave.

Another singular circumstance is that many members of Dr. Heuser's family have had their hearts pierced or their veins and arteries cut after death. The fear of premature burial seems to have pervaded the whole family and led to the utmost precautions being taken to ensure escape from such a fate. None of them, however, except the doctor, have been cremated.

HE HANDLES THREE MILLION TONS A YEAR.

But It is as a Generous Handed, Genial Hearted Citizen That He is Widest Known.

THE PRESS takes pleasure in republishing from last Saturday's issue of The Engineering and Mining Journal, the following sketch of a citizen whom most of our readers know and highly esteem. The article, however, has one great fault, it does not do the subject justice:

As much for his jovial good nature as for his large experience and high standing in the coal trade, Col. John F. Wilson ranks literally as a "leading coal man" He has not been in the coal business all his life, as have most of the other leading coal men, but was in 1866 selected to fill the responsible position of sales agent for the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company, on account of his success in the wholesale coal business in Baltimore for a few years previous.

Mr. Wilson was born in Baltimore, Md., in 1832, and was taken by his parents to Alabama in 1834. There was nothing very exceptional about his youth. He attended public school, and, in his own words, "was about as bad as the worst and about as good as the best," as most boys. In 1849 his father died, and he had to plunge into the stream of work to help support his mother and two younger sisters and two younger brothers. By 1854, when he was 22 years of age, he had attained to the position and emolument of a salesman in a Baltimore dry goods house. In a short time, with his characteristic energy, he worked up a large and profitable connection through several Southern States, where he is well remembered to this day. When the war broke out Mr. Wilson enlisted as a private, rendered good service, and when peace was concluded he retired with a colonel's commission.

Instead of returning to the dry goods business, in which he had met with gratifying success, he engaged in the wholesale coal business for a year or two. A short experience convinced him that he had found his proper sphere. It also convinced others of the same fact, and the latter conviction landed him in the position of sales agent which he so ably fills today. During his first year he handled about 13,000 tons of hard coal. During the year 1890 he was the main instrument in placing 3,000,000 tons, and so carefully is this immense business conducted that Mr. Wilson has rarely made a bad debt; in fact, the losses from this cause by his company are the lowest in the trade.

Mr. Wilson was one of the first to labor for the present agreement among the hard-coal companies' sales agents, which has resulted in so material a benefit to the trade. He has always and stanchly maintained among his colleagues that the output must be restricted to the demand to avert the collapse and demoralization which appeared inevitable a year or two ago.

Mr. Wilson is a social and domestic man and largely known in New Jersey, where he resides. Near Plainfield he lives, and there sinks the coal man in the farmer. He cultivates his farm himself. Mr. Wilson shares with the majority of coal men a desire to follow in the footsteps of Isaak Walton. He is an enthusiastic fisherman, however, rather than an angler. No pellucid, running stream or brook satisfies him. He must have the active excitement of trolling and fishing in deep salt water, and it may be said of him, as of many other fishermen, that no one has yet impugned his veracity in other connection than that of his phenomenal catches. But this is hardly considered even a venial offense among fishermen.

Mr. Wilson is charitable. It is said of him in the trade, however, that his charity is somewhat impulsive, and not always discriminating, as the following instance—is absolutely true—may prove: One afternoon Mr. Wilson sat in his office when in rushed a decently dressed youth He had a frank, ingenuous face and a charmingly candid manner. "Mr. Wilson," he said, "you may know me I've sold papers to you. The man on the corner of This street and That street is trying to sell out his news stand. It's the chance of my life. He wants $25 for it. I've been round among my customers, and I've raised so much. Will you help me? I don't ask it as a gift, mind you, but as a loan." He got it. A week or so later Mr. Wilson, who had been deeply impressed with the boy's frank and manly demeanor, thought he would his him to the corner of This street and That street and see how his protege was progressing in his one chance in life. There was not, nor had there ever been, a news stand there.

A few years ago Mr. Wilson suffered a severe affliction in the loss of his estimable wife. As a mark of devotion to her memory he has since had erected the "Mary E. Wilson Memorial Chapel," at Washingtonville, a village nestling in the mountains some two miles from Plainfield, N. J. There had never been any church within several miles, and consequently Mr. Wilson's gift will remain as much a monument to his own great-heartedness as to the memory of his wife. The chapel is union and unsectarian, served by dignitaries of all denominational churches. The result of this is that the congregation is drawn from many miles around. The Sunday-school also is largely attended. It is one of Mr. Wilson's aims in life to leave enough money when he is called to his fathers, to endow this chapel.

Mr Wilson, as we have said, is one of the most popular men in the coal trade. With an equable temperament, a jovial disposition and an evident intention to live his life with as little care as possible, it is not surprising that his company is much sought. "It's just as easy to do business under a smile as under a frown, young man," he said to the writer, "and you'll find it a good deal more profitable in the end." And that about summarizes one of Mr. Wilson's chief characteristics.

HYMENEAL.

Martin—Swain.

The wedding of Frederic Martin, Jr., and Miss Florence Helene Swain, to which THE PRESS referred yesterday, took place at the home of the bride's parents, 82 McDonough street, near Tompkins avenue, Brooklyn, Wednesday evening. The Rev. William V. Kelley, pastor of St. John's M. E. church, performed the ceremony. Invitations had been extended to 400 friends throughout the city, and most of them were accepted; consequently the parlors were comfortably filled. The decorations were floral, and very beautiful. The happy couple stood under an arbor of white roses and smilax while the words were being pronounced that made them man and wife. The bride was attired in a rich costume of white satin with a point lace flounce running from the waist down. A large pendant, studded with diamonds, sparkled from her throat. It was a gift from the groom's parents. She carried a large bouquet of white roses. Miss Adelaide Cullen, of New York, was the bridesmaid, and Harry Martin, a brother of the groom, was "best man." George W. Swain, a brother of the bride, and Mr. Sandford, of this city, a cousin of the groom, acted as ushers. The bride was given away by her father. The gifts were many and beautiful. Included in the presents was a $1,000 bond from Mr. Lewis, grandfather of the groom.

A reception and supper followed the ceremony. The ladies' toilets were all of beautiful designs. A few of the dresses which attracted especial attention were the following: The bride's mother, Mrs. H. C. Swain, wore a lavender brocade trimmed with point lace. The groom's mother, Mrs. Frederick Martin, was attired in a handsome dress of cream brocade, with jewel trimmings. The groom's grandmother, Mrs. Lewis, wore black faille, trimmed with point lace; and the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Hannah W. Swain, looked stately in a heavy black mourning silk. Mrs. George W. Wilmurt's costume was of black silk, with duchess lace. All of the ladies mentioned wore diamond ornaments.

Among the guests were Frederick Martin and wife, Mr. Lewis and wife, Mr. Drake and wife, and others, from this city, where both of the contracting parties are widely known.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin departed on an extended wedding tour. They will visit through the South and on their return will take up their residence at 82 McDonough street. They will be "at home" to their friends February 4.

Praiseworthy Pupils.

The music room and parlors of Mr. A. Venino's residence on Madison avenue, were filled yesterday at a musicale given by a few of his more advanced pupils. The gathering included some of the best known society people of the city and many representatives of the wealthiest families. The programme was:

1. Ballet music.....Meyer-Helmund
   Miss WILLS.
2. Barcarolle.....Bendel
   Miss MARTINO.
3. Romance.....Rubinstein
   Miss EDKINS.
4. Eventide.....Raff
   Miss TRACY.
5. Concert Waltz.....Rhein-Rold
   Miss MOONEY.
6. Masurka.....Lschetisky
   Miss GENNA.
7. Cascade du Chardon.....Bendel
   Miss HOWARD.
8. a. Nocturne } .....Liest
   b. The Return }
   Miss SANDFORD.
9. a. Nocturne.....Chopin
   b. Capriciletto.....E. C. Klein
   Miss WOTHERSPOON.

The playing of Mrs. Howard and Miss Wotherspoon, deserved and received particular commendation. Without question all the most talented and best taught of the amateur pianists of this city, are pupils of Mr. Venino's.

A Concert Criticism as it is Wrote.

A member of the Melopoia has cut from some paper and framed what alleges to be a "criticism" of the Society's recent concert. It is a source of much amusement to all those to whom he has shown it.

In this "criticism" of a concert, the most space is given to an account of the janitor shutting a window. The next most prominent feature in this "criticism" of a concert, is an assurance that the leading lady was beautiful, and she was presented with a "huge bouquet of Jack roses." [They were pale pink.]

Not a word is said of the choruses and how the singers rendered them, nor of any of the other many prominent professionals among the soloists, except this:

A feature which caused continued applause and calls of approval, was "The Whistle Dance"—Paganini's weird, whistling composition—as rendered by Mr. Frank Wilmot, violinist.

The joke of the above is, it is the only musical number mentioned yet it was not given at all. The selection played was Sarasate's "Gypsey Dance."

There is nothing in existence that will equal Salvation Oil in curing pains in the joints, muscles, or spinal affections. Price 25 cents.

A preacher, who had been annoyed by the incessant "hacking" of members of his congregation, recommended such to try Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

NOTES FROM THE PASTOR'S PAPER.

Things of General Interest Reported in "The Visitor."

A new number of The Visitor, that bright little Methodist church paper published by the Rev. Charles B. Yard Mitchell appears today. From its columns the following paragraphs are selected, as items of especially general interest:

Garret Q. Packer was elected a Steward at the last meeting of the Quarterly Conference.

Mrs. E. H. L. Randolph, of Park avenue, is visiting her parents in Nashville, Tenn.

Mrs. Lutz, of Washington, D. C., has been visiting her brother, Geo. B. Cornwell, of Washington street.

The ladies of the Aid Society are preparing for a Martha Washington Tea Party, to be given in the Chapel in the near future.

Will you be at your own service Sunday night, or will you be off somewhere looking for something new? Don't be a Christian tramp!

Prof. W. H. Larrabee has a most interesting article in the current number of The Popular Science Monthly. He is a regular contributor to its pages.

Mrs. F. T. Gaddis, who has devoted much time to labor among the Indians, will be present and address the Woman's Home Missionary Society next Tuesday at 3:30 P. M., the regular meeting of the Society.

Mabel Jenkins and Robbie VanNest, members of the Primary Department, were presented, at Christmas time, with beautiful Bibles, which were given by Mrs. Wm. F. Ault, of Pittsburgh, Pa., sister of the pastor's wife, as prizes for best attendance, deportment and knowledge of the Sunday-school lessons for the preceding nine months.

At our last Communion a very large number communed, more than four hundred. One infant was baptized, and thirty-four adults; the largest number the pastor ever baptized at one time.

The Rev. William Cookman and wife were recently guests of A. A. Taft, of West Front street. Mr. Cookman is a son of the late Dr. Alfred Cookman, and a member of the Philadelphia Conference. Mrs. Cookman is a sister of Mr. Taft.

Next Sunday, to-morrow, the pastor's subject in the morning will be, "The Incredible Things of Life." Lam. 4, 12. In the evening his subject will be. "Sinful Concealment." Jos. 6, 10.

The members of the Official Board made personal contributions amounting to $125, to be dispensed by Dr. Brice in helping such worthy ministers on his District as receive inadequate support.

The Choral Society not only sustained but added to its reputation at its last concert. Those competent to judge say that the Oratorio of "Elijah" was rendered almost faultlessly. The next concert will be given March 5, and "The Crusaders" and Part Songs will be rendered.

Mrs. Eliza Coles, mother of Mrs. P. M. Demarest, of Craig place, will be ninety years of age in a few days. She has been a Christian from childhood, and a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years. With the exception of her eye-sight she is in good health.

The father of Jas. C. Peck, and the mother of Mrs. Peck, are visiting their children at the family home, 105 Rockview avenue.

Dr. Crooks, of Drew Seminary, has recently published the standard "Life of Bishop Simpson." In his book frequent references are made to Dr. Sellers, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who was the intimate friend and advisor of the Bishop. Dr. Sellers was the father of our venerable brother, Robert E. Sellers, of Central avenue.

What will most surprise you, when taking Hires' Cough Cure, is how effective and pleasant it is to take. That hacking cough that disturbs your friends, and kept you awake all night, will yield immediately to its magical properties.

THE REIGNING SENSATION.

Everybody in London is Talking About Prince Baudoin's Death.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The death of Prince Baudoin is the reigning sensation. Everbody is talking about the strange coincidence of fatality that pursues all who were connected with the attempted conquest of Mexico. Maximilian, brother of the Austrian Emperor, and Napoleon's puppet on the Mexican throne, was executed by the Mexicans, and Prince Rudolph, his nephew, heir to the throne of Austria, committed suicide on account of an intrigue. Maximilian's widow, Carlotta, is hopelessly insane, and her nephew, Prince Baudoin, heir to the throne of Belgium, is believed to have taken his own life.

Leopold is said to be plunged into the deepest grief by the unhappy occurrence, coming at a time when a grave crisis exists in the State on account of the universal suffrage agitation. The next heir to the throne, Prince Albert of Flanders, is but 15 years of age, and in far from good health. As the Salic law prevails in Belgium, excluding females from the throne, the kingdom would be in danger of civil war should young Albert die and King Leopold also. Leopold, however, is not yet an old man, and is in fairly vigorous health.

The Boulogne Conference.

DUBLIN, Jan. 24.—Timothy Healy presided over a largely attended meeting of the McCarthyite section of the Irish Parliamentary delegation here. In his address Mr. Healy said that Messrs. McCarthy and Sexton had left for Boulogne to meet John Dillon and William O'Brien. Mr. Healy said that the negotiations would be conducted on the basis of Mr. Parnell's retirement, being a condition precedent to an arrangement. On no other condition, said Mr Healy, would there be a settlement.

UP GOES THE MONUMENT.

Active Work Begun, and the Unveiling Set for Memorial Day Next Year.

The Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument Committee had a live business meeting last night, and perfected plans for the active work of securing subscriptions to the fund. Fourteen of the eighteen committee members were present, and entered enthusiastically into the development of the enterprise. Blank forms for subscription lists were adopted, and will be distributed among the committee members as soon as printed. It was reported that to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., belonged the honor of making the first subscription, in the sum of $100. This amount, however, has already been swallowed up by preliminary expenses.

The committee will seek first to obtain large subscriptions from the generous wealthy people of the city, and will then circulate lists for popular subscriptions, giving a chance for those who can afford only the smaller amounts to contribute. The city and borough will be divided into districts, and canvassers from the Grand Army Posts will do systematic and effective work, giving everyone a chance to make a personal offering and thus to become an active projector in this laudable movement.

It is possible that there may yet be an important change in the design of the monument. The suggestion has been made, and is receiving favorable consideration, that instead of the Goddess of Liberty being posed on one of the three pedestals at the base a sailor's figure be erected. The sailor statue could just as appropriately be made to typify the spirit of Liberty, and the substitution would be a deserving recognition of the navy's part in the historic achievements which the monument is designed to commemorate.

The desire of the Grand Army men is that the monument shall be ready to be unveiled Memorial Day, May 30, 1892, and it is earnestly hoped that the citizens at large will co-operate in prompt and zealous endeavor to have that commendable wish fulfilled. Let the contributions be speedy and big!

Extension Work.

A feeling has developed in the Young Men's Christian Associations of this country that they should do something for young men in foreign lands. As a result of this feeling, what is known as "Extension Work" has been organized. This work is carried on by a fund given in small weekly sums by members of each Association, who form themselves into a band to give a certain sum each week. The money has been used in some instances to pay a General Secretary at Tokio, Japan, or at Madras, India. Some has been given to the Training School at Springfield, Mass., and some to the International Committee. The result has been twofold—considerable money for the work, and a good many men have found out that by giving systematically, though they have little to give from, they can do much. One of these bands of systematic givers has been organized in the Plainfield Association. Further information will be furnished by Secretary Manning.

McPherson as Candidate.

It is our duty to report the fact that the Hon. John Roderick McPherson of New Jersey is beginning to loom up as a possible candidate for President.—New York Sun.

The theory that a Presidential candidate, to be elected, must of necessity be taken from New York is no longer recognized by the National Democracy. The last general election gave that theory its quietus.

With an irrepressible conflict raging between the partisans of Cleveland and Hill in New York, and with the lesson of 1888 as a warning, the eyes of Democrats turn to other States, and what State presents a finer spectacle of loyal and unwavering Democratic Democracy than New Jersey? What State can offer to the National convention of the party in 1892 a better Presidential candidate.—Newark Journal.

Advocating the Service Pension.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A delegation of the Grand Army of the Republic, consisting of General Veasy, commander-in-chief; Colonel Blue of Kansas, and Colonel Emory of Washington, appeared before the House Committee on invalid Pensions in behalf of a bill providing for a service pension intended for the 250,000 soldiers of the class whose cases were not reached by the act of June last.

To Rush Business Along.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Rules Committee of the House is considering a general order to bring into the House, after the Naval Appropriation bill now pending is passed, providing for taking up and considering at one time all the appropriation bills on the calendar. The order will give two days to each bill, and as soon as one is passed the next will come up.

No Silver Legislation This Session.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—It can be stated on reliable authority that silver legislation is dead during this Congress, and the Free Coinage bill will not see the light of day. The silver pool investigation has killed its chances, and the developments of this investigation have utterly changed the complexion of things in the House.

All Depends on the Elections Bill.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 24.—A resolution was introduced in the House opposing an appropriation to have Texas represented at the World's Fair should the Elections bill become a law. The resolution was referred, and should the bill pass it certainly will be adopted.

Run Down and Killed.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 24.—Anthony Geshitch and Joseph Cuantos were run down and killed on the trestle bridge across Saucon Creek by the fast express on the North Pennsylvania road. Joseph Smodji, who was one of the party, escaped injury.

Poor Outlook for Ingalls.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 24.—The arrival of Senator Ingalls has encouraged his friends somewhat and has added interest to the Senatorial battle, but to all appearances little short of a miracle can effect his return to the Senate.

The Housatonic Has Fallen.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Jan. 24.—The big dam is now safe from any further damage at the present as the Housatonic has subsided. The people are now talking over their narrow escape.

Giving Herself Away.

We are perfectly willing to admit that Mrs. Colonel Yerger is a fond wife and mother, etc., but she should not use words that she does not understand. She gave a party a few evenings ago and Dr. Bitters was present. During the conversation on cholera the doctor remarked:

"I am very much afraid the cholera will spread all over the world, and it may even reach Austin."

Mrs. Yerger thought it would not spread.

"What makes you think it will not spread?" asked the doctor.

"You see, doctor," replied Mrs. Yerger, "some people are more adapted to cholera than others. Now, the French are more adapted to cholera than any other people. They are more choleric than the English. People that are choleric are most sure to get the cholera, if there are any microbes floating in the atmosphere."—Texas Siftings.

CHARLEY'S MIRACULOUS ESCAPE

A Cry—Man overboard!

Charley Litewayte—It's all very well to make fun of these English sticks, but they have their uses, bah Jove!—Puck.

Heroic Treatment for a Cold.

"You have taken a severe cold," said the old family doctor, "and it seems to have settled in your throat."

"Yes, doctor, you see I can hardly speak," said the patient, a vivacious, bright-eyed young woman.

"Can you stand heroic treatment, do you think?" asked the doctor.

"Try me!"

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, any thing you like; medicine, mustard plasters, electricity, any thing!" said she in a breath.

"And you want to get back your voice?"

"Yes."

"It's heroic treatment, mind you."

"All right—what is it?"

"You mustn't talk at all for two days."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Only One Thing Lacking.

Friend—Gogson, how is your airship getting along?

Inventor—It is complete, with the exception of one little detail I have not yet perfected. I shall take that up next.

"What is it?"

"A mere trifle that I can think out at any time. The principal feature of my invention is a safety net that will travel along under the airship to prevent fatal accidents. It will make navigating the air absolutely free from danger. In the making of that net I have revolutionized the entire business."

"But how is the net itself to be kept from falling to the ground when any thing happens to your airship?"

"That is the little detail I haven't worked out yet."—Chicago Tribune.

The Race Improving.

"How is your son getting along at school, Uncle Abe?"

"Mighty fine, sah. Gittin ter be a gem'man mighty fast. Ye jes' orter see how he makes fun of us two ole ignerent nigger folks when he comes home. It makes me mighty proud, sah."—Epoch.

The Professor Was Single.

Visitor—You seem to have a bright lot of students.

Professor—Yes, all except Jones. He is so confoundedly stupid that I would not be surprised if he were to come to school some day and tell me that he had gone and got married.—Texas Siftings.

HIS FIRST ELEPHANT.

Pat Saw One for the First Time and Could Not Understand the Two Tails.

An American traveling in Europe last summer wandered aimlessly into an inclosure at Cork, where a traveling menagerie chanced to be exhibiting a collection of animals, among which was a ponderous Indian elephant, a cage of chattering monkeys and a few other living curiosities.

There was nothing unusual about the show. In fact, it was rather a poor exhibition. One man in the throng, however, attracted the gentleman's attention and he paused a moment to observe him.

The man was a typical Handy Andy from the country district who had never visited a city before nor seen any thing more extraordinary in the shape of a quadruped than his own pet pig and the domestic animals of his landlord.

He paused with wonderment before the elephant, eying it with suspicion and keeping at a respectful distance as he surveyed the beast. At last his native curiosity got the better of him.

Uncovering his head and pulling at his shaggy forelock he said, in a whisper of awe tempered with respect, but in the richest Irish brogue imaginable:—

"I'm after axing yer 'oner's pardin', an' phat might that be? Shure the two eyes av me nivver rested on the likes o' that before or since."

The gentleman explained that the animal was an elephant and a harmless beast, and to illustrate the point approached the creature and reached forth his hand containing a bit of something palatable, which the animal conveyed to his mouth with his trunk.

The Irishman, somewhat reassured at the action, still lingered before the elephant inclosure, gazing at the curious anatomy and ponderous bulk of the animal. The latter, not understanding the fixed stare of the man and anxious for another bit of food, reached out his sinuous trunk, and inserting it into the Irishman's pocket, drew forth a huge plug of tobacco, and swallowed it with the same equanimity that he had the candies and other delicacies.

Pat did not relish losing his tobacco. "Ah, ye haythen thief!" he remarked, shaking his clinched fist at the elephant. Then in high indignation he turned on his heel with the intention of visiting the cage of chattering monkeys and other curiosities.

Scarcely had he turned when the elephant, whose palate revolted at the taste of the noxious weed, swung his trunk and catching the man across the shoulders sent him sprawling upon the ground.

The blow, following the theft of the tobacco, infuriated the man, and springing to his feet he cried in a rage: "And yez would be afther striking me, ye thaving, murthering lump o' Satan's blackness; I'll pay yez well for the dishonor of a blow, ye misbeshapen brute, and if I could till which end yer tail was on now I'd punch yer snoot."—N. Y. Herald.

UNPARALLELED CRUELTY.

"Ah! Gathering autumn leaves, I see, Miss Wane."

"Yes. I gather them every year."

"Ah! What a large collection you must have!"—Jury.

Her Tender Point.

A stylishly-dressed woman was recently brought before a New York City magistrate on a charge of stealing ribbons in a store. The chief clerk had observed her talking freely with her counsel, and was puzzled because she looked at him blankly when he asked her name and residence, and replied with a shake of her head. "She is French," explained the lawyer, "and doesn't understand English. Put it down 'Marie Latesche.'" The clerk frowned incredulously. "What age is she?" he asked. "Twenty-two," replied the lawyer. Then the clerk's eyes twinkled as he said, softly: "Thirty-two?" "No, twenty-two!" snapped the fair prisoner. "Umph!" said the clerk. "You can speak English if you don't understand it!"—N. Y. Ledger.

At the Masquerade.

Mrs. Binks (to her husband who has been flirting with her all the evening)—Oh, my! how I looked you. You hadn't an idea I was your wife.

Mr. Binks—No, I hadn't. You were so confoundedly agreeable.—Jury.

That Was Clear.

"I'd have you know I was well brought up!" exclaimed the small man to the large disputant.

"That may be," replied the latter, "but you were not brought up far."—Harper's Bazar.

Didn't Want That Kind.

George—I love you, dearest, more than life itself.

Belle—Oh, you mustn't say that, because if I give you my love, I shall not have you.—Boston Herald.

Specifying the Timbre.

Wool—Patti's voice must be of wonderful timbre; don't you think so?

Van Pelt—Yes. Judging by the price of tickets, it must be sandal-wood.—Harper's Bazar.

His Preference.

Mrs. Slimdiet—What part of the chicken shall I give you, Mr. Goodfeed?

Boarder—All but the neck.—Judge.

Ontario Center, N. Y.
May 7, 1890.
F. E. C. Medicine Co., Rochester, N. Y.:

For seven or eight years my wife has been troubled with some kind of kidney trouble. She tried many different remedies but all in vain. She continued to grow worse. Last fall I induced her to try the F. E. C. Remedy, and before using one bottle she began to improve, and now, after using six bottles, she is entirely cured. I have recommended it to many, and it has benefitted in every case heard from.

From the German.

One of the highest officers in the German army is very particular that his soldiers are properly fed. He is in the habit of making unexpected visits to the barracks and inspecting the food in person. On the occasion of one of these visits he received two soldiers carrying a steaming boiler from the kitchen.

"Put it down. Fetch a spoon," he commanded.

The astonished soldiers looked at each other.

"I want to see what sort of soup you get," said the General, as he dived into the boiler with the spoon, but as soon as he tasted it he spat it out, exclaiming:

"What sort of devil's broth is that? It tastes like dish-water. What is it, anyhow?"

"That's just what it is, your Excellency," replied the soldier. "It's the water the dishes were washed in."—Texas Siftings.

The Smart Clerk.

"Have you any large-sized gentleman's gloves?" he asked.

"How large-sized a gentleman?" inquired the salesman, with a smile of frosty, Bostonian severity.

"Large enough, I think, sir," replied the customer, moving away, "to walk without any help to some other store where the clerks are not so classical."—Chicago Tribune.

An Absolute Necessity.

H. Irving Booth—Would'st thou favor me with the temporary possession of thy electric diamond?

Possart Barrett—Wherefore, mine heart?

H. Irving Booth—I am chartered to enact to-night the Politician in the "Metropolitan City," at yon Hoboken.—Jeweler's Circular.

A Useful Relative.

"Einstein, how do you manage to make a living if you are always selling goods at less than cost?"

"I'll dell you; but you musd geep id close. I haf a cousin who vash a fire insurance adjuster."—Puck.

It Requires No Calculating.

Cumso—If one pair of bellows costs two dollars and seventy two and three-quarters cents, what will three pairs of bellows come to?

Mrs. Cumso—I'm not good at figures, and I don't care anyhow.

Cumso—Oh, well, I'll tell you. They will come to blows.—Judge.

Not Sanguine.

"Doctor, do you believe in this lymph cure for consumption?"

"I'd rather not express an opinion before the inventor is Koch sure of it himself."—Puck.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

The "Ad" Was Read.

Through a typographical error Heavenrich & Co., the shoe dealers, have been brought to acknowledge that their advertisement in The Journal must be pretty generally read. On Wednesday they advertised in The Journal that they would sell on Thursday any pair of $5 shoes in the store for $3.50, provided the purchaser brought a copy of the advertisement to the store. In lifting the forms to the press the figure 3 dropped out of the $3.50, leaving it 50 cents for the $5 shoes. The accident was not noticed until the entire edition had been sent out. Now comes the fun. Heavenrich & Co. are a firm that do exactly as they agree, and the result was necessarily embarrassing.

A reporter of The Journal entered the store at 2:30 yesterday and found it crowded with people from the west side and South Saginaw, each with the little coupons cut from The Journal, while the ever genial Manager Flurry with a double handful of coupons and a flush on his handsome countenance was endeavoring to explain the mistake and showing the figures quoted in other papers. "There's the man that's responsible for all this," he said as he spied The Journal man; "he can explain how it happened." It was soon made clear to the people in the store how it happened, and then they saw that a discount of $1.50 on $5 was the biggest thing they had struck and they began buying, and each one when they left had a pair of regular $5 shoes that cost them only $3.50. Mr. Flurry has not yet said whether he would bring action against The Journal for damage to his nerves or not, but he is convinced that people read advertisements in The Journal. The fact is The Journal circulates largely among a class who study its advertising columns from motives of economy, and save by so doing many dollars every year.—Saginaw (Mich.) Journal.

Value of Newspaper Advertising.

Few people realize the great value of newspaper advertising. On Friday of last week a party residing in Port Jervis lost a valuable piece of jewelry. On Saturday he advertised the loss in The Union and Gazette, and on the following day (Sunday) the lost property, which had in the mean time been found, was restored to the owner. This is only one of numerous instances which are of constant occurrence where lost articles are restored through the medium of newspaper advertising. A single insertion is generally sufficient to accomplish the purpose. The incident above mentioned also proves that honesty is not as uncommon a virtue as some people suppose.—Port Jervis Union.

Always Have a "Leader."

The merchant who would secure and hold a large custom should make it a point to always have some "leader"—something he can recommend as unusually good value for the money, or unusually desirable for some reason. Customers may come to buy the "leader," on which the margin of profit is apt to be quite narrow, but a good salesman can usually succeed in "broadening the horizon" of the average purchaser, if he once gets him in hand, and has honest goods and plenty of them in sufficient variety. Leave some advertising to be done after the customer enters the store.

A Point for the Advertiser.

Pay your readers the compliment of assuming that they will understand what you have to say to them, even if it be technical. If you make or sell first class dry goods tell where yours differ from any one else's, point out how to tell good cloth or lace or whatever you sell. Show the economy in buying the kind that you carry, or, if you carry more than one grade, of buying the best.—Polytechnic in the Office.

Live and Let Live.

The newspaper that takes advertising to fill up with cannot prosper. A newspaper that has its rates too high cannot sell its space. There is a normal rate; that is, a rate which the publisher can afford to accept and make a profit, and which the advertiser can afford to pay and also make a profit. The profit must be mutual, else one or the other will quit.—Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel.

Don't Leave It to Luck.

People sometimes talk about good or bad luck in advertising, just as though the use of printers' ink were a game of chance. Apropos of this an advertising philosopher hits the nail on the head when he says: "Leave nothing to what is called luck, and you will always be lucky."—Exchange.

One Man's Way.

If one were to stand in any fair sized audience in this country and exclaim, "No stranger should leave the city without a box of"— and ask his hearers to finish the sentence, it is a hundred to one that the audience would shout, "——'s candy!" giving the name of a well known Chicago confectioner. This gentleman started in business a few years ago with two leading ideas distinctly in mind: To make strictly first class goods, to tell the public that he had them and to keep telling the public that he had them. He has not used large advertisements—in his line and for his purpose that would not have been the best way; but he has persistently and continuously hammered out the statement that no stranger should leave the city without a box of his candy, until his name and personality are associated with the candy business in that city as no others are.

The illustration suggests three points: Advertising matter should be plain in composition, it should suggest the individuality of the advertiser, and it should be continued indefinitely in use. Of course the plan referred to in the foregoing is better adapted to paid matter in the form of "readers" than to displayed advertising.

In mercantile advertising where display is used it is well to make one advertisement have relation to another which is to follow. Having secured the attention of a reader for his announcement the advertiser can catch him for the next by a line inviting particular notice to the proclamation which will appear in the same paper the next day or the next week, as the case may be.

The study of methods is one which every advertiser can make very profitable. Newspaper advertising is a necessity for the good business man, and pays him well; but he can multiply its returns by using his space with energy and judgment.

Small Matters.

Advertisers cannot take too much care in the typographical setting of their announcements. Sometimes a trifling alteration, the substitution of a slightly different style of type, or the rearrangement of a headline, will tell perceptibly upon the general appearance of the advertisement and the results to the advertiser.

The Question, "Is Marriage a Failure," Settled at Last.

The two lines above show the arrangement of a heading of an advertisement sent to a well known magazine. Upon the suggestion of the publisher it was changed to read as follows:

In making this alteration the publisher writes: "It may be a small matter, but in my opinion the success or failure of an advertisement oftentimes depends upon just such small matters." And just here the question arises, Do advertisers in general bestow as much attention as they ought upon these "small matters?"

But They Must Be Good Ones.

It is the time now for merchants to take advantage of the demand for pictorial advertising. This demand is not new. On the contrary, it has always existed. Heretofore, however, merchants have chosen to satisfy the demand with pictures which, to say the least, were coarse and repulsive, and which did not properly reflect the taste of the age. It is now time for merchants to use art in advertising. It is no more expensive than the inartistic method, and gives a certain tone and character to a store which the blatant, boisterous and altogether preposterous cuts do not give.—American Storekeeper.

An Unworthy View.

It is well understood by fair minded business men that local enterprises are dependent on the newspaper, while the newspaper is, to a certain extent, dependent on local enterprises. When the enterprise ignores the newspaper the newspaper must retaliate in kind.—Lancaster (N. H.) Democrat.

Fulfill Every Promise.

The merchant who desires the confidence and custom of intelligent people should never make a promise that he does not fulfill, or hold out, either by express statement or inference, any inducements that are not fully substantiated by the facts. There is no enduring success where confidence is lacking on the part of customers. Any success not founded on square and liberal dealing is sure to be short lived.

SHE WROTE A LITTLE.

Emiroye Postess, Kevis an Editor Who Is Strict Truthful.

NOTHING gives the average editor such a thrill of keen delight as to meet these modest, unassuming persons who simply "write a little" themselves. The delight is intensified if these Eliots and Thackerays in embryo impart this information in low-voiced confidence, with the further information that they "wouldn't have it known for all the world." In most cases the editor feels quite safe in promising them that the general public will never know any thing about it. He wishes that he might be as ignorant of this knowledge as the general public.

My friend Blank is such an editor. He is one of that blunt, straightforward sort of men, much given to telling the truth, and abhorring any thing that savors of "beating arbund the bush." He is a terror to these persons who "write a little," and who beg him to tell them "the exact truth" about their productions.

I sat behind a screen in his office the other day, when there came a timid little knock on the door, and Blank roared out: "Come in!" in a voice that cracked the plastering. A timid, girlish, little thing of forty-four or forty-five years fluttered in.

"Is this Mr. Blank?" she asked.

"Yes 'm!"

"Yes? I'm so glad to know you, Mr. Blank. I have long been a subscriber to your paper, and really don't know how I could get along without it. And I think your pieces are just splendid. How I envy you writers! And I—I know it's dreadful bold in me to try, even; but, then, I write a little myself, sometimes."

"Do, eh?"

"Oh, yes; just a very, very little bit. It is all so crude and poor that I hardly dare show it to anybody. Really, it is too foolish in me to try, even; but, somehow, I just can't help it! It just seems to me that I must write. I'd give worlds if I could write as you do. Would you be willing to tell me exactly what you think of some of my poor little scribblings, my brain children, as I love to call them?"

"Got 'em with you?"

"Yes; just one or two foolish little fancies that I dashed off in an idle hour. I know just how crude and poor they are."

"Let me see them."

"You'll tell me exactly what you think?"

"Exactly."

"Thanks; it is best that I know the truth."

Blank reads "the foolish little fancies." I peep out, and see a triumphant smile on the author's face. Blank hands back the verses.

"Aren't they too dreadfully awfully bad?"

"They're pretty bad."

"Sir!"

"It is the exact truth."

"Sir!"

"There is no poetry in them."

"Sir, you shall answer for this!"

"You begged me to tell the truth."

"I did not beg you to vent your petty jealousy and spleen over verses of which you are manifestly jealous. I pity you! I supposed, sir, that you were incapable of such envy and malice, and that you were always ready to do honor to real talent. But I see I am mistaken. Remember, sir, that the verses were not offered for sale. Indeed, they are not for sale to such a paper as this. I bid you adieu, sir!"

"The woods are full of 'em," says Blank, sententiously, as the door bangs behind the woman who "wrote a little."—Puck.

The Cannibal's Convert.

"And tell me, Prince Totoe, did my predecessor, whose disappearance has mystified the world, succeed in converting you?" asked the missionary.

"No. Um not converted. Me convert him."

"You converted him?"

"Yah. Me convert him from mission ally into hash."—Jury.

Jealousy.

Emmeline—Oh, Daisy, I hardly know what to do, dear John is so jealous!

Daisy—You poor thing; is that true?

Emmeline—It is, and it's just horrid. He won't even let me throw a kiss to him after he leaves the house because he says it's sure to kiss him and go to some one else.—Chicago Times.

Mrs. Bullion—I bought to-day a genuine Parisian work of art.

Mrs. Billsdoo—One of Detaille's paintings?

Mrs. Bullion—No. A bust of some young woman named Hebe. The dealer assured me it is the real plaster of Paris.—Jeweler's Circular.

THE SENATE'S CRISIS

A Vote on the Closure Rule to Be Demanded To-Morrow.

DEMOCRATS MAY WITHDRAW.

The Difficulty That Confronts the Republicans is in Maintaining a Quorum.

Rumors of a Deal to Sidetrack the Elections Bill—The Time of the House Takes Up with Appropriation Bills—Democrats Talking for Delay—The Philadelphia Marshalship Fight.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—There is strong ground for the belief that the Senate will make history this week, and the eyes of the country will consequently be intent upon its doings.

The victory of the Republicans in securing consideration of the closure rules has made them more determined than ever, but success has by no means blinded them to caution. Mr. Morton holds the key to the situation and he is only apparently awaiting a favorable opportunity to use it.

Report has it that the crisis will be reached to-morrow, when it is expected that the advocates of the Election bill will, by a parliamentary coup d'etat, force a vote and secure the adoption of the closure rule. The closure rule out of the way early action on the Elections bill will be an easy matter.

The main difficulty that confronts the Republicans is in maintaining a quorum of its own members. They think that the Democrats will endeavor to break a quorum when it comes to a question of adopting the closure resolution by withdrawing from the chamber and an effort will be made to keep the Republican Senators together or near at hand.

Senators Stewart, Teller, Wolcott, and probably Senator Jones of Nevada, will vote against the closure resolution, but it is thought they will not assist the Democrats in breaking a quorum. Senator Washburn, who has expressed himself in opposition to the Elections bill, has voted with the Republicans on questions connected with the discussion of the closure resolution, and it is believed that he will vote for its passage.

Taken altogether the situation in the Senate is critical, and this week will probably bring matters to a head.

Proceedings in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The time of the House during this week will probably be occupied with the consideration of appropriation bills. To-day is District of Columbia day, but the District Committee will probably be obliged to surrender it to the Naval Appropriation bill, which has the right of way. As soon as the Naval bill is passed the Legislative bill will be called up. This will be followed by the Diplomatic and Military Academy bills.

The Democratic policy of delaying matters before the House during the pendency of the closure rule and the Elections bill in the Senate, will be continued.

IS THERE A DEAL?

A Rumor That the Elections Bill Will Be Sidetracked Again.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—It is said that a deal is now in progress between the Democratic leaders in the Senate and three or four Republicans, including Hale, Plumb and Washburn, which, if consummated, will result in side-tracking the Elections bill. The arrangement is that if enough Republicans will vote to lay aside the bill and not let it come up again this session, the Democrats will agree not to obstruct any other legislation that the Republicans may choose to pass at the present session.

A compromise of this character is not unlikely. Both ex-President Cleveland and Senator-elect Hill have advised this course, and Senator Gorman is trying to bring it about. The interest of Cleveland and Hill in the matter is that they desire to avoid an extra session, regarding it as bad politics to have the newly elected House organize before the usual time in December.

The Philadelphia Marshalship Fight.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Philadelphia Marshalship fight is lagging, and it is more than likely that no appointment will be made for several days. The Thornton boom seems to be on the wane, while that of Leeds is looming up.

Duty on Sago Flour.

BOSTON, Jan. 26.—A letter has been received by Collector Beard from Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Spaulding to the effect that the department concludes that Sago flour is dutiable at 2 cents per pound. This decision is regarded as remarkable, because the new tariff law distinctly states that Sago flour is free. Assistant Secretary Spaulding in his decision informs the collector that Sago flour is not Sago flour, but is starch, and as such is dutiable.

Forged a Preacher's Name.

CARLISLE, Pa., Jan. 26.—Mrs. Anna S. Custer of Littlestown, Adams County, is charged with forgery. She had applied for a pension, and forged the names of a clergyman and notary public to the papers. She did not get the pension, and said that she did not suppose anybody would be harmed by the forgery. She has been taken to Philadelphia to answer the charge.

Fire Chief Farrier of Jersey City, N.J., was killed and Fireman McDonald was fatally injured at a small fire Saturday night. The driver of Engine No. 3, Daniel Dinan, while driving his engine to the fire was struck by a train on the Pennsylvania Railroad and killed. A woman was injured by a flying piece of the wrecked engine. At another Jersey City fire Henry Gussman was killed and Mary Lavinski was fatally injured.

DYING IN PRISON.

The Suspected Murderer of Emma Pfitzenmayer an Absolute Wreck.

CHESTER, Pa., Jan. 26.—A gentleman just returned from Media states "it is doubtful if Henry Schmidt will ever appear before the court for trial. The confinement in jail is killing him. He is not strong at best, and worriment over the misfortune that has come upon him is playing sad havoc.

"His cheeks are sunken, his eyes have a wierd appearance, and his skin is ashen pale."

There is no one in the city who believes that Schmidt had any complicity in the murder of Emma Pfitzenmayer, and it is only possible that he has knowledge. The loss of his business and other troubles incident to the imputations cast upon him and his wife have naturally, therefore, broken him down.

It was given out a few days ago that efforts had been made to secure one of the counsel who defended Leconey to also defend the Schmidts, and that the gentleman sought asked $1,000 for his services.

One who is directly interested was questioned as to the truth of this report and for a time would make no reply, and even after being pressed for an answer evaded making a positive reply.

DYNAMITE SCARE.

English Authorities Exercised Over Reports from American Agents.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—It is stated on very high authority that there is a great dynamite scare among the authorities, who have received information from their agents in America that the dynamite section is actively preparing to resume operations.

The headquarters are said to be in Philadelphia and Kansas City. The authorities are increasing their vigilance in all parts, and detectives swarm in Queenstown, Liverpool, Southampton and other ports.

The police guards have been increased around the public buildings, and the authorities are considering the advisability of issuing orders for a closer examination of the luggage of passengers arriving in England from the Continent and the United States, which was stopped a few months ago.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

Chicago and Erie Railroad Employes Compromise with the Company.

CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—The strike of the Chicago and Erie conductors and train dispatchers has come to an end, a compromise having been reached by the strikers' committee and the management of the road. The terms of the agreement are that Train Dispatcher Scott shall not be reinstated, but that all other employes shall be allowed to return to their places at their former wages.

The conductors demanded that one man, whose name was not made public, be discharged, but he obviated all dispute on this point by handing in his resignation.

A special from Huntington, Ind., says that Train Dispatcher Scott has withdrawn and the wheels will soon be turning.

Threatened Strike of 16,000 Miners.

SCOTTDALE, Pa., Jan. 26.—The Mine Workers' Convention decided to notify the coke operators immediately that they will have to meet the Scale Committee before February 2 to form a new labor agreement or a strike of 16,000 men would be declared on February 10, when the existing agreement runs out. The operators are obstinate in their refusal to sign the agreement. The miners are actively engaged getting their organization into excellent condition for a struggle.

Students May be Indicted for Gambling.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., Jan. 26.—Twelve or fifteen of the students attending Cornell College at Mount Vernon have been before the grand jury the past week testifying in regard to gambling, which has been engaged in at the college during the last term, and great excitement exists in the college and town. The grand jury has returned no indictments as yet, and no one has been expelled from the college.

Will Build a Monastery.

YONKERS, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Colonel Frederick Shonnard of Yonkers has sold to the Order of Capuchins of New York city six acres of ground, situate south of Shonnard place and east of North Broadway in this city. It is the intention of the order to erect a church, parochial school and novitiate upon the property to cost $90,000.

Commits Suicide at Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, Jan. 26.—A man dressed in a well-made black suit and wearing a silk hat deliberately jumped over the falls from the Goat Island bridge at 7 o'clock last evening. Captain McCloy and his men of the life saving station exerted themselves to the utmost, but their attempts to rescue the unfortunate proved futile.

Declined to Bond the Town.

PELHAM, N. Y., Jan. 26.—The taxpayers of the town of Pelham have declined to bond the town for $90,000 for improvements to the highways.

DISASTROUS STORM

Miles of Wires Down in New York and New Jersey.

ELECTRIC SYSTEMS WRECKED.

Ocean Steamers Driven Out to Sea While Trying to Make Port.

Streets and Sidewalks Ankle Deep in Slush and Water—New York in Darkness Last Night—No Fatal Accident but Many Persons Seriously Injured. Several Horses Shocked to Death.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The damage wrought by the storm of yesterday morning is believed to have been the worst in thirty years. In fact there never was such a diminutive tornado that has caused so much inconvenience, for never before has one come since the telegraph and telephone wires reached their present limit in importance.

Everything conspired to help the cyclone in its work of destruction. The temperature was sufficiently high to make the snow cling to the wires and cables, and to pile treacherous mounds of melting slush on the crossbars of the poles. Many of these latter were old and decayed, and when the wind rose they were not equal to the strain, which supplemented the already unnatural load they were carrying.

All Wires at a Standstill.

The telegraph, telephone and railway service was at a standstill; not a message could be transferred from one police precinct to another; not a fire alarm could be sounded over the wires. The most perfect fire-alarm system in the world was paralyzed, and it was a most fortunate circumstance that the horrors of the situation were not augmented by a conflagration, which, under the existing condition of affairs, it would have been almost impossible to arrest.

To guard against such a possible calamity the police and fire departments were compelled to return to the primitive methods in vogue in country villages, and police and fire-alarm signals were, per force, dispatched by messenger service performed by the police and firemen, who made their way with difficulty along the slush covered streets and through the howling of the blast. No electric lights were in use in New York last night.

The Work of Destruction.

Not a single street in the entire city which has furnished room for telephone or telegraph wires but showed the effects of the storm. Poles and wires laid about in all directions, and it was only because the work of devastation took place at night and on Sunday morning that many fatalities did not occur. As it was there were several accidents.

Horses Killed.

A number of accidents, attributable to demoralized conditions of the telegraph wires, happened. Two horses were killed one by coming in contact with a live wire and another was struck on the head by a piece of telegraph pole. In both instances the drivers narrowly escaped death. The first received a shock which knocked him down and the other was covered with splinters from the shattered pole.

OCEAN SHIPS IN PERIL.

Many Large-Sized Craft in Trying to Make Port Driven Out to Sea.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The storm occasioned considerable inconvenience to masters of harbor craft, and only those under imperative orders ventured away from the shelter of their piers.

The snow and high winds were succeeded later in the morning by a very thick fog that enveloped the rivers and bay, extending as far out to sea as Fire Island, the bright beacon at that point being invisible a hundred feet off shore.

Previous to the fog, big ocean crafts that were near shore, and would have arrived in port within a few hours, were driven out to sea. It was next to impossible for them to return. Only one vessel came in, that being the Trinidad from Bermuda. She arrived early in the morning and sustained some damage.

Three Feet of Snow in Paterson.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 26.—A destructive storm struck this city about 2:30 in the morning, accompanied by heavy snow and rain. Before daylight fully three feet of snow had fallen. The trees were laden with heavy icicles which almost beat them to the ground. Every wire in the town was covered with snow, which caused them to snap and fall to the ground, breaking the large poles and cross-beams. Fully twenty or thirty poles were broken and lay crosswise in the street. At 10 o'clock a. m. Main street, the principal street in the city, was in a state of chaos. Not a horsecar nor a wagon could be seen traveling or any part of the thoroughfare.

Off the Jersey Coast.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—On the New Jersey side the storm raged with equal severity, and several vessels that had reached a point off and in the vicinity of Long Branch narrowly escaped disaster by running into the many sunken wrecks in that locality while being driven out to sea. At Sandy Hook the telegraph wires were swept away, and nothing in the way of news could be had from that point.

The Ice Boat Carnival Results in Death.

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 26.—The ice boat carnival here came to a sudden and tragic termination. Herman Fidler and a party of friends out in the Whiz, and a half gale drove the craft at a terrific speed into a partially submerged log. Mr. Fidler's head was crushed and his legs were broken and he died a few hours later. Henry Schafer, who was also in the party, was badly hurt.

New Jersey in a Tangle.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 26.—The State of New Jersey is a tangle of wrecked poles and wires from one end to the other, and it will be a week before the telegraph service is restored. Five lines of wires across the Newark Meadows look as if a cyclone had passed over them, so completely have the damp, clinging masses of snow done their work.

Toms' Assailants Still at Large.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 26.—No clue has yet been found of John Walker and Frank Cook, the two assailants of John Toms, the aged caretaker employed by Mrs. Jane Kilpatrick.

THE MURDER EXPLAINED.

Two Alleged Slayers and the Wife of Old Man Reed Under Arrest.

NORTH SALEM, N. H., Jan. 26.—The mystery of the death of Elbridge G. Reed, the milk dealer, who was found dead in his barn here, has been cleared up. The alleged murderers are in jail.

The two men arrested are Dan Murphy, alias "Smasher," and Frank Woods, two bad characters.

Woods confessed that Murphy beat the old man to death and that Mrs. Reed paid the two men five dollars apiece to carry the body to the barn. Mrs. Reed has been arrested by the Salem officials and taken to Portsmouth, where she is now imprisoned.

The motive for the murder, say the police, lay with the wife of the murdered man, who instigated the crime because of an infatuation for Dan Murphy.

"Smasher" Murphy was a notorious character at Haverhill, Mass., in 1867 and was always suspected of having killed Officer Burnham in a bank robbery of that year.

Charlie Mitchell to Fight Slavin.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Charlie Mitchell, the pugilist, has signed a contract to make his debut upon the English stage in a great drama to be constructed for him by William Yardley, the successful writer of pantomime and farce. He will begin to study the dramatic art under a tutor and also to take singing lessons before he goes on the stage. However, Mitchell has one or two fights on hand. There is bad blood between him and Frank Slavin, which will probably result in a fight to a finish with bare knuckles within six weeks. Dr. J. A. Dougherty of Philadelphia, having deposited £1,000 forfeit on behalf of Mitchell at the Pelican Club. After he has defeated Slavin Mitchell will challenge the world, giving Sullivan the preference. Then he will go in for histrionic laurels, playing four weeks in London and thence going to America.

Edwards' Body Not Found.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 26.—The authorities have abandoned the idea of finding the body of Frank Edwards, the 8-year-old boy who fell into the trunk sewer Thursday afternoon. The Passaic river has overflowed its banks at different points, and the water has been running a ten-mile-an-hour rate, so that it seems impossible to recover the body.

Violated the Lottery Law.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 26.—Levi Eichholtz of Dillsburg, York County, was arrested by United States Marshal Anderson of this city for violating the Lottery law. He had sent money for lottery tickets to M. A. Dauphin. Eichholtz was brought to Harrisburg and held in $500 bail for a hearing before United States Commissioner Wolfe.

John L. Sullivan Suspended.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 26.—Dr. Simon Quinlan, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, who is in the city, has issued an order suspending John Lawrence Sullivan, who is alleged to have obtained admission into a New Jersey lodge by misrepresentation.

Ex-Minister Mizner Returns.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 26.—The Pacific Mail steamship San Jose has arrived from Central American ports. Ex-Minister Lansing B. Mizner, who was recalled from Guatemala by Secretary Blaine on account of the Barrundia affair, was among the passengers.

Demarest May Escape Persecution.

NEW CITY, N.Y., Jan. 26.—It is rumored at this place, the county seat of Rockland County, that the necessary papers in the prosecution of Assemblyman Demarest will not be forthcoming before the grand jury here to-morrow, and it is intimated they will be suppressed.

Gen. Booth Sticks to His Assertions.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A vigorous reply has been made to the Lord Mayor of London by General Booth of the Salvation Army, who repeats and maintains his declarations as to the existence of extraordinary distress in this city and country. The general declares that his assertions are confirmed by the clergy.

Should a Bishop Ride a Bicycle?

LONDON, Jan. 26.—It is reported that the Bishop of Chester rides a bicycle about his diocese. This has made him very indignant, and he denies it most strenuously. The papers are now engaged in discussing whether or not it is right for a bishop to ride a bicycle.

THE CHILIAN REVOLT

The People Are Rising and Joining the Insurgents.

PRESIDENT BALMACEDA'S PERIL

He Has no Confidence in His Soldiers, and the Situation is Desperate.

Waterford Gives Parnell a Great Reception—The City Decorated in His Honor—Kaiser William's Interest in the Koch Lymph—Great Anxiety About the Pope's Health—Court Intrigues at Rome.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The latest advices from Chili represent the situation as more than desperate for Balmaceda. The people are rising everywhere with the cry, "Live the People," and joining the insurgent forces.

The leaders of the insurrection have distributed circulars broadcast saying that their mission is to break the bonds that have so long fettered the Chilian people, and kept them servants to an arrogant oligarchy.

The Government, which at first threatened the rebels with severe punishment, is afraid to carry out its threats in the case of a few that have fallen into Government hands for fear of retaliation. A rising is imminent in Valparaiso, and Balmaceda has no confidence in his soldiers.

A dispatch just received from Buenos Ayres says that Chilian Government newspapers continue to be filled with reports of defeats suffered by the insurgents.

PARNELL AT WATERFORD.

His Reception in the Irish City Was a Tremendous Affair.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Parnell's reception at Waterford yesterday was a tremendous affair. The streets and houses were decorated and the immense procession paraded the length and breadth of the city.

The address of the Bishop of Ardagh, appealing to the people not to countenance Mr. Parnell, did not have the commanding tone that has heretofore characterized such appeals on the part of the clergy. It was rather in a pleading tone, and alluded to the alleged efforts on the part of Mr. Parnell to separate the people from the priests, who, the Bishop said, were their proper guides in all matters affecting morality.

Mr. Parnell's remarks were listened to with the utmost attention, and sometimes interrupted by cheers and loud groans for his opponents, especially Timothy Healy.

It is said that William O'Brien has received from Mr. Arnold Morley, the Liberal whip, on the part of Mr. Gladstone and his colleagues, such guarantees for a measure of Home Rule as are sufficient to meet the conditions upon which Mr. Parnell will retire from the leadership of the Irish Parliamentary party.

MAY SOON DISSOLVE.

If Parnell Retires the Conservatives May Appeal to the Country.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The rumors of an imminent dissolution of Parliament, which have been current in the last few days, have led to inquiries being made at Conservative headquarters by many of the local organizations. In each case the reply has been that the particular reports referred to were without foundation, but in no case has any definite assurance been forthcoming that such a step is not in contemplation by the Government. On the contrary, hints are freely given that it is as well to be prepared for all contingencies. There is no doubt that Lord Salisbury and his colleagues are keenly watching the development of political events, especially as regards the unity of the Irish party.

As a matter of general tactics, a general election in the autumn would suit the Government better than such an election at the present time; but their decision would be largely influenced by the prospect of an amicable arrangement of the Irish differences. Should Mr. Parnell decide to retire, it would become a question whether, from a party point of view, it would not be better to challenge the judgment of the constituencies while recent events are fresh in the public mind. In no responsible quarter is there now any serious expectation that the Parliament can outlive the present year.

The Kaiser's Interest in the Lymph.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Notwithstanding the denial of the German newspapers that the Kaiser is afflicted with anything like cancer, it is regarded as significant that he never took much interest in the Koch lymph cure until it was reported that the lymph would cure cancer. From that time the Kaiser showed eager interest in the remedy and bestowed honors and promises liberally on Dr. Koch. The Landtag has not yet carried out the promises, and the Kaiser himself is not so enthusiastic as he has been.

Celebrating Burns' Birthday.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—The Burns birthday was celebrated in London and throughout Great Britain with more than usual enthusiasm. In Glasgow a number of railway strikers paraded in honor of the poor man's poet. A placard bore the legend: "Man's Inhumanity to Man Makes Countless Thousands Mourn."

Anxiety About the Pope's Health.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—A dispatch from Rome says the Pope's health occasions great anxiety for the future. He will be eighty-one years old in March, and while not seriously ill, so far as the public are permitted to know, he has been far from well of late.

The American Hog May Triumph Yet.

BERLIN, Jan. 26.—Notwithstanding the unfavorable vote on the proposition, it is said that the Reichstag will shortly repeal the law prohibiting the importation of American pork.

COURT INTRIGUES.

Premier Crispi Will Have to Fight to Retain His Position.

ROME, Jan. 26.—It is said that court intrigues against Signor Crispi, which have been going on for many years, have now reached a crisis, and it will require a supreme effort on the part of the Italian Premier to retain his position.

Queen Margaret has never loved Signor Crispi, and for his wife she has long cherished a profound aversion, an incident which is supposed to have precipitated the crisis that occurred at the last ball given by Lord Dufferin at the British Embassy. The ball was attended by the King and Queen, and the latter set the greater part of the evening upon a gorgeous chair or throne, whence she watched the dancing. The royal couple left the ballroom at 1 o'clock, and immediately afterward Mme. Crispi seated herself in the chair, aped the ways of royalty, and generally behaved in a manner so outrageous that Queen Victoria's cousin, the old Duke of Cambridge, who was Lord Dufferin's guest, left the room in a great rage, and, it is believed, told Queen Margaret all about it the next day.

The Queen chose to regard the incident as a personal insult to herself, and wants to have an order issued ostracising Mme. Crispi from the royal circle, but Signor Crispi is not the man to desert his wife when in trouble, and he is apparently so indispensable in the Government of Italy, and enjoys such an immense popular influence that he will doubtless weather this storm, as he has weathered a dozen others before it.

FOUND HIS HEADLESS BODY.

A Roumanian Major Murdered by Vengeful Body Servants.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 26.—Dispatches received from Kustendji state that a headless corpse had been found in the bathroom of the Hotel Carol at that place. The bathroom, it appears, is situated in the basement of the hotel, and a major belonging to the Roumanian army, who resided in the building, was in the habit of using it. Suddenly the major's disappearance was noted, and upon the hotel being searched his headless body was found in the bath.

Two gipsies, who were detailed as the Major's body servants, were arrested on suspicion of having murdered that officer. Shortly after being taken into custody the orderlies confessed and said that they had buried the dead man's head in the sand not far from the hotel. Revenge for ill-treatment received by the orderlies at the Major's hands is supposed to be the cause of the murder.

Huntington and Duchess of Manchester.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—There is a good deal of fresh gossip about the Marquis of Huntington and the Duchess of Manchester. The pair have been guests of Baron Hirsch at Wretham Hall, Norfolk. The Prince of Wales and Lady Randolph Churchill, also being of the company. The Princess of Wales was not there. It was one of the jolliest parties of the season, and game was slaughtered by the cartload. The Marquis and Duchess showed each other marked attention, taking but little apparent interest in the pheasant shooting.

She Had a Craze for Forgery.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 26.—Miss Mamie Smith, who was arrested here three months ago for attempting to pass a forged check upon one of the local banks and subsequently released on bail, died here during the night after a brief illness of pneumonia. It has been learned that she was not compelled to attempt the crime from necessity, but was a monomaniac upon the subject of passing forged papers. She had an estate in Louisville valued at $75,000, from which she received a monthly income of $400.

Poisonous Wolves in France.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—In remote parts of France the rural postmen are refusing to go on their routes for fear of being attacked by wolves. Near Metz the wolves are very ravenous, and sixteen of the blood-thirsty animals have already been killed.

SMASH-UP ON THE CENTRAL.

Six Freight Cars Derailed and an Engine Wrecked.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Jan. 26.—The terrific storm caused a serious collision on the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad near Roa Hook. Fortunately no one was killed or hurt.

At 9 o'clock a freight train stopped on the south track and the red danger signal was hoisted on the tower to stop the Albany express, which was following close behind. The heavy fall of snow immediately covered the block signals and hid the red sign from view. The freight had stopped on a curve in the cut, without any warning the way train crashed into the freight.

The engineer and fireman were not aware of the danger until they were within a few feet of the freight train. They leaped for their lives and landed in a snow embankment beside the track. The express struck with great force, wrecking the engine and smashing six freight cars into kindling wood. The passengers had a lively shaking up and were badly frightened.

Word was sent to Croton for an extra train to take the passengers to New York. All the way trains and through express trains from the North arrived at the scene of the collision the passengers were transferred to local trains which were waiting to be conveyed to New York.

Floods in France and Belgium.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—The thaw is causing great damage everywhere in the Department of the North, and in Belgium vast numbers of cattle have perished in the floods. In the lower parts of Brussels and other places food is conveyed in boats.

Giving Work to Irish Laborers.

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Balfour's government is now employing 2,700 laborers on the relief works at Westport, Ireland, and claims to have paid them £1,500 for wages during the past week.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—Now bury the wires.

—A few sleighs were out to-day, but the sleighing was n't very great sport.

—The saints were saints indeed, yesterday, for they early cleared the snow and slush from their church sidewalks.

—Fortunately it was Sunday morning when the city found itself slushed under. What the discomfort would have been on a working day it is easier to imagine than to describe.

—The wreckage of huge telegraph poles and the net-work of broken wires with which the city was covered yesterday was a picturesque contribution to the facial condition of the town.

—Edward Bolan, an engineer at the electric light works, received a severe shock from a short circuit current yesterday. He had a hand severely burned, and was stunned.

—The sidewalk fronting a handsome residence owned by a Plainfield lawyer has been under snow and ice nearly all Winter—except when the neighbors have shoveled off the dangerous accumulation.

—The Wide-Awake Circle will meet in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union rooms to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock, when Mrs. Krom will give a lesson in darning and mending.

—A handful of industrious men with brooms and shovels could have cleared the crosswalks and made clear the gutters, yesterday—but they didn't. And now the easily-handled slush is immovable ice.

—Back-water from a choked up sewer pipe flooded the cellar under Roberts's stables yesterday morning, and caused lively hustling among the workmen. Considerable property stowed away in the cellar was damaged.

—The trees and shrubbery of the city, and even the streets and houses themselves, were extremely beautiful in their mantle of snow before the sun came out and melted it all, yesterday. The city seemed almost a vision of fairy-land.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Pierson entertained the choir of the Crescent Avenue church Saturday evening.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, of Broadway and Ninth street, gave an afternoon tea to a large number of friends Saturday.

The Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of the Church of the Holy Cross, preached at St. John's church, Elizabeth, Sunday evening.

Henry Kellogg, President of the Phœnix Insurance Company, and brother of the late Capt. John K. Hegg of this city, died in Hartford last Wednesday.

Horace E. Robinson will repeat at Hope chapel to-night the interesting church-building service which gave such satisfaction at Warren Mission chapel yesterday.

The death of Gertrude W. Schmidt daughter of the late John G. and Pauline Schmidt, occurred at 108 Richmond street yesterday. She was in her eighteenth year.

The Rev B. Fay Mills is now at Beloit Wis., where the Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists unite together with the college professors and students in holding union evangelical services under his charge. The usual spirit of revival prevails.

The Rev. Mr. Richards's powerful sermon of last night on city and county government in relation to saloons, race-track gambling, Sabbath breaking, etc., will appear in THE PRESS to-morrow. He calls a spade a spade, and is not a bit careful who he hits locally.

Among a series of text books just being published upon thought training and the mastery of memorizing, one is by Bishop John H. Vincent, entitled "Remarks on Bible Memorizing," and another is by G. F. Q. Smillie, of Central avenue, this city, entitled "Hints on General Study."

H. G. Runkle, of West Eighth street, President of the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, and one of the Directors of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, will leave for Havana, the last of this week. A firm of which he is the head, are building extensive water-works in that city. Mr. Runkle will go by rail to Florida and by steamer from there.

Col. and Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard have issued cards of invitation for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Maria Louisa Shepard, niece of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shepard of this city, to William Jay Schieffelin, on Thursday, Feb. 5, at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York. The ceremony will be followed by a breakfast at the house of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt.

The Boys Will Meet To-Night.

A special meeting of the Young Men's Auxiliary will be held to-night, instead of Tuesday evening as usual. Officers will be installed, and refreshments will be served. Book-keeping and penmanship classes will meet at the same hour.

There is one thing, the price of which is not affected by the McKinley Bill. High tariff or low tariff, free trade or any other trade, Hires' Cough Cure costs 25 cents the world over. Surely cheap enough.

SENT ALIVE TO A MORGUE.

But It Was Not Aaron Kline of This City.

Frank Kline, a salesman for a New York dry goods house, has had an experience in Chicago that he won't soon forget. He was laid out as a corpse in the City Morgue, and was restored by an electric battery. Kline has a large salary, and enjoys life. His first few days in Chicago on this trip were more than usually successful. He bought a large diamond with his surplus cash. He went out for a stroll on Thursday afternoon, and stepped into a saloon. The first glass of the concoction the bartender gave him made him forget all about his big sales and his diamond. A girl in the saloon, under the pretense of a caress, put her arm about his neck and removed $75 from his pocket-book, and a New York Central mileage ticket, and also took the big diamond.

When Kline showed signs of reviving he was thrown into the street, where he fell into a stupor. A few minutes later he was picked up for dead, and taken to the Morgue in a patrol wagon. Dr. McNamara of the County Hospital staff happened to be in the place, and something caused him to believe there was still life in the man. A stomach-pump and an electric battery did the work, and in half an hour Kline walked out. He is now on his way to New York.

The above story, in many shapes, but to the same effect, was published in all the New York papers of yesterday. Some, however, give the victim as Aaron V. Kline of this city, who is a traveler for Arnold, Constable & Co., of New York. The way this mistake occurred was that in searching among the dry goods firms for one who had a drummer by the name of Kline the reporters learned of Aaron Kline and that he was then in Chicago. Some of the papers, upon no other authority, changed the name of the victim to fit such slight circumstantial evidence.

The result was that the publication of such a story acted as a terrible shock on Mr. Kline's relatives here. His sister, Mrs. William Vandeventer, was terribly prostrated and his mother likewise. A wired message of inquiry, however, brought replies from the Palmer House, Chicago, that Aaron Kline was well and all right; also from John M. Crane, of this city, saying he was with Kline and there was no truth in the story; and the following from the reported "victim" himself: "Newspaper report does not refer to me. I am perfectly well."

They Made a Night of It.

A party of merry young people started from the home of Miss Ida Coles, on East Front street, the other evening, to enjoy a straw-ride and attend a euchre party as the guests of Mrs. Wynkoop, of Dunellen. After a frolicsome ride and the excitement of cards, supper was served at midnight and DANCING FOLLOWED.

The party consisted of Miss Madeline Beck, formerly of East Front street, Miss Ida Coles, Miss Ada Whitman, the Misses Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. Wynkoop, Mr. Mathewson of Jersey City, Messrs. Clark and Meeker.

The Jersey Central Sued.

A suit has been begun against the Central Railroad of New Jersey by Catharine Kramer, of Newark, to recover $5,000 damages for injuries received on a car of that company. Mrs. Kramer, who is sixty-three years of age, alleges that on April 13, 1890, she went on a visit to Elizabethport with her two daughters. They started for home that night, and while boarding a car at the Elizabethport station she received the injuries on account of which she brings suit.

The train was standing at the station, and Mrs. Kramer had got on the steps of one of the cars, when the engine backed up and gave the car such a sudden push that Mrs. Kramer was thrown completely over the car platform and fell on the track on the other side of the car. Her right arm and collar-bone were fractured, and she was confined to her home six weeks by her injuries.

New Jersey's Presidential Candidate.

[From The Atlantic City Journal.]

Senator McPherson is one of the most fluent orators and brainiest men in the United States Senate. He has for years been an active and tireless worker in committee, serving upon the Naval and Finance Committees, where his cool, dispassionate judgment and comprehensive mind have made him extremely influential.

He was one of ex-President Cleveland's warmest friends and most trusted advisers, and it was generally understood that if Mr. Cleveland had been successful in the last Presidential campaign Senator McPherson would have been a member of his cabinet, serving in the capacity of Secretary of the Treasury.

A Question.

[From The New Brunswick Home News.]

A blacksmith in Plainfield sued his physician for $10,000 damages for treating him for one thing when he should have been treated for another, and received $250. How much will that blacksmith get out of that $250?

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Catharine R. Laing.

Mrs. Catharine R. Laing, a much respected member of the Society of Friends, died on Wednesday of last week at the residence of her son, Henry M. Laing, 335 North Eleventh street, Philadelphia, at the advanced age of 94 years. She was closely related to the Laings of this city, and was present in Plainfield at the centennial of the Society of Friends, two years ago, when she was 92 years old.

"She was old in years, but in appearance, vitality, actions, feeling and general inclinations, she was fully a score of years younger," remarked her son, in referring to the deceased. Her health had always been remarkably good, and she exhibited none of the signs of decay incident to persons of her great age. About ten days ago she was attacked by dysentery, which was so severe that she was unable to rally from it; otherwise Mr. Laing thinks she would have have lived many years more. She retained her intellect unimpaired up to the hour of her death.

She took great interest in the passing events of the day, and on the night of the recent gubernatorial election in Pennsylvania she sat up until one o'clock to learn of the result. She was an excellent conversationalist, and took much delight in the company of young people, with whom she was a great favorite. She was remarkably active and was always averse to being cared for. She took much interest in lectures and instructive entertainments, and was a frequent visitor to the Home for Indigent Colored People, in West Philadelphia, in which her son takes a prominent interest. In the anti-slavery excitement many years ago Mrs. Laing was an ardent sympathizer with the colored race.

Mrs Laing was born in New Jersey, but the past thirty-five years she was a resident of Pennsylvania. She spent the winter months with her son in Philadelphia, and in the summer would live with another son at Bristol. Her husband died fifty years ago. Three of her six children survive her, as do also a number of grand and great-grand children.

STRANGE FATALITY.

Four Sudden Deaths in One Family Within a Few Days.

A double funeral took place at Netherwood Sunday afternoon, when Elizabeth Hewson, age ninety-three years, was buried beside her son, Gen. Michael Bull Hewson, age seventy. Services were held in the Church of Our Saviour. Mother and son died within two hours of each other—the mother in this city, at the home of C. J. Noel, the son in Washington, D. C. Yesterday came the news that two sons of Gen. Hewson who on Saturday had sent word that they would be present at the funeral were also dead. This makes four sudden deaths of very near relatives with but a small space of time between each.

Below are the individual scores made in the bowling match told of exclusively in Saturday's PRESS, between the Crescent League team of this city and the Newark Bay Boat Club of Bayonne, at the latter's alleys, last Friday evening. F. B Stevens of Plainfield, was umpire.

REDUCING THEIR CHURCH DEBT.

Yet Remembering the Relief Association and Muhlenberg Hospital, Better Than Many of the Protestant Churches.

The following financial statement of St. Mary's Catholic church, from Jan. 1, 1890, to Jan. 1, 1891, was distributed among the parishioners yesterday. It is a creditable showing for any church. Besides sums of money contributed for a score of benevolent purposes, and heavy church expenses, $2,000 of the debt has been paid. A glance at the disbursements shows that the Catholics gave more to Muhlenberg Hospital than did many of the Protestant churches, and gave twice as much to Plainfield charities as they did to the Pope.

Lunatics Have Rights.

Dr. Emily Kempin, law lecturer in the University of New York, lectured on the "Rights of the Insane" before the Woman's League Education Society at the Fifth avenue home of Miss Johnston, of this city, Saturday afternoon. Speaking of the snap judgments physicians are in danger of giving in insanity cases, she said that she herself would stand a poor chance if examined as to her sanity by a "medical expert." Her studying law, in the first place, her attempt to lecture in English, and her presumption in tackling American law so soon, would all be considered evidence that she was mentally unsound.

She urged that no alleged lunatic should be deprived of liberty without a trial by jury; that insane asylums should be inspected every fortnight, and that persons who ill-treat the insane or procure the incarceration of the sane should be severely punished. A person who detained a patient after cure, she thought, ought to be imprisoned for twenty years.

She was listened to by Mrs. Leonard Weber, President of the Women's Legal Education Society, who introduced her to Dr. Mary Putnam Jacobi, Dr. Emily Blackwell, Mrs. A. S. Hewitt, William Allen Butler, Vice Chancellor McCracken, Dr. Lucy Hall, Prof. Taylor, Mrs. G. B. McClellan, Mrs. Vincenzo Botta, and others.

—To-morrow the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association will announce a list of prices that "knock all others out".

A great benefit has been secured to the poor by the introduction of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup; for it now only takes 25 cents to cure a cough or cold.

Anybody troubled with rheumatism, neuralgia, stiff neck, or any pain or ache, should procure a bottle of Salvation Oil at once. Price 25 cents.

THE ELEMENTS IN CONTROL.

Snow and Slush Reign Supreme for a Time.

To the telegraph, telephone and electric light companies the storm of Saturday night and Sunday morning was more expensive and destructive in this locality than even the famous blizzard of three years ago. Never were the wires in more tangled condition than they were throughout Central New Jersey yesterday.

Early Saturday evening rain began to fall, but shortly before midnight the rain gave place to snow, and a blinding storm of great wet heavy flakes continued till after day-break. The wind blew a gale, and had the snow been light and dry impassable drifts must have resulted. The wet snow clung in great masses to everything; and, added to the force of the wind, soon caused serious damage. Trees were unable to stand the strain, and lost branch after branch, and in some cases were wholly upfooted. In this way some very fine shade trees were ruined. One big tree at the front of the new Union County Country Club-house was blown down, carrying with it a number of wires and tearing up a portion of the lawn and walk.

But to the poles and wires was done the greatest mischief. In every part of the city telegraph, telephone, fire-alarm and electric light wires were in a state of hopeless confusion. Some localities, especially in the business portion of the city, were almost impassable, because of the tangled net-work of wires strewn along the pavements. Big poles hung across the streets at an angle in many cases reaching 45 degrees, and some poles were utterly prostrate. One big pole that tottered nearly over but did not fall menaced the side of a dwelling-house at the corner of West Second street and Madison avenue, and must have caused great damage had its swaying bulk struck the house as was threatened. Another, in front of Judge Ulrich's new building on North avenue, was snapped off like a pipe-stem, and lay in shattered, jagged fragments amid a tangle of wires in the middle of the street. During Sunday morning this debris was cleared away, and the wires were cut and were coiled up in huge bunches in the yards of the Friends' meeting-house and the railway station. The big cable which was recently strung among the wires along this route was alone too much of an additional strain on this pole—let alone the added weight of heavy snow.

On Park avenue, opposite North, a giant pole sagged across the roadway as though it would like to crush in the roof of the Chautauqua Building, but it was one of the first poles righted by the linemen.

At Fifth and Liberty streets was another of the most conspicuous shaky, leaning poles.

Along the Central New Jersey Railroad all wires were down, and dozens of poles hung across the track, blockading traffic considerably, before they could be cleared away. The deep Fanwood cut was choked up with fallen poles and wires, and at the Greenbrook tanks beyond Dunellen the tracks were also badly blocked for a time. This condition of affairs caused a small wreck. A freight train crashed into the prostrate poles, damaging the front of the locomotive and wrecking some of the cars. The tracks were cleared, however, speedily.

Between Plainfield and Elizabeth fully one-fourth of the poles were reported down, and a similar condition of affairs existed all along the line toward Phillipsburg. The Postal Telegraph line, running over the mountains to Orange, and across the plain to New Brunswick, is likewise useless, but its tangle is not nearly as complex as the Western Union's, since it has comparatively only a few wires.

The general melee of poles and wires everywhere caused terror of possible dangers from electricity. For the timid the "death-dealing element" was omnipresent, dancing about in the countless wires swaying, fancy free, breast high over the sidewalks, or lurking in wriggling coils half hidden in the slush at crossings.

All through the day a wholesome distrust of these wires was shown, but at night it amounted almost to a positive terror. The city officials were alarmed at the prospect from the start. Mayor Gilbert and Chief Engineer Doane were very prompt to order the electric light people not to turn on a current until they were positive all the wires were clear. In spite of this, the current was turned on, and private dwellings and churches had their usual illumination, though no attempt was made to light the streets. The thoroughfares were not dark, however, for the moon, almost full, shone resplendent, and was a bright beacon all night. To-night, it is promised, all the electric light wires will be in perfect working order. Men have been busy constantly repairing the damage so that the service may be complete again this evening.

Before the current was turned off Sunday morning several early risers narrowly escaped contact with the deadly wires, and the night operator at the telephone exchange received severe shocks resulting from the crossing of the electric light with the telephone wires. Only four telephones were in working connection with "central." By noon to-day eight telephones were working. The long-distance telephone in THE PRESS office remained faithful through it all. No telephonic connection with out-of-town places, however, is possible.

The Plainfield citizen of to-day is accustomed to refer to the blizzard of March, 1888, very much as most persons do to the deluge, and it must indeed be a disturbance of nature worthy of notice that is permitted to be mentioned in the same breath with it. But the storm of Saturday night has succeeded in making a record that must be admitted by even the greatest stickler for New Jersey's weather reputation.

Beginning as a rainstorm, which did not at first appear to be very energetic, the weather showed its versatile temperament by suddenly changing at about quarter before midnight to a snowstorm, accompanied by a high wind. The result of this sudden change, thus precipitating upon every moist surface a damp and clinging substance which hung to it like feathers on soft tar, was to paralyze the whole electric system of Central New Jersey and New York.

The snow and rain at first had a hard fight for the supremacy, but the snow finally got the best of the battle—and of everything else. In large, soft flakes, sticky and tenacious as could well be imagined, it came whirling down.

Then the wind, turning more and more toward the northeast, increased in velocity, and swept the blinding, drifting snow before it in true blizzard fashion. The fantastic shapes of the snow fairies made their appearance. The damp flakes clung to the first object they touched, the limbs of trees grew into soft round outlines, and the lamp posts and wires were enlarged and exaggerated in the queerest fashion. It was no child's play to make one's way against the driving storm, for it fairly smothered one in its rushing strength. From hour to hour it increased in violence as daylight approached, and the weight on the sagging wires increased. Belated wanderers, or persons whose work kept them out until the early morning hours, by four o'clock hardly dared to face the wind. Its force seemed absolutely resistless, and the wet snow, soft as it was, cut like a knife. Then suddenly the wind changed to the northwest, and gradually lessened in fury. Before noon the sun was shining brightly, melting the slush, and drying up such sidewalks as had been cleared.

The result of the storm is to prejudice the people still more in favor of putting all wires underground. Many of the principal streets were incumbered with tangled wires, putting all of the public's electric services in a greatly crippled condition. It further transpired that the poles themselves, which, if they are to be allowed at all, it would seem only reasonable to expect should be sound and well constructed, were in many cases of rot en wood, in some places ready to fall to pieces almost at the touch, and certainly entirely unsafe to stand along the streets a single instant in fair weather or foul.

The question was asked in many quarters by persons who witnessed the alarming results of the storm, "If all this damage can be done by a storm which lasts only a few hours, what would have been the effect if a storm of two days and having the same characteristics should have come upon us?

"The most remarkable feature of the storm, meteorologically,"—said an observer—"was the fact that there was no apparent cause for the rain to change to snow, but that it suddenly began to come down in big flakes instead of drops, as before. This is the reason, too, for the damage that the snow did, for, coming into a warmer atmosphere, it at once began to thaw and increase in weight, while it clung to surfaces that it would otherwise have slid over harmlessly."

The telegraph lines along the Central New Jersey Railroad suffered far more than those along any other road. Reports as far west as Somerville are to the effect that fully 500 poles are down. Along one side of the Newark Bay bridge, between Elizabethport and Bergen Point, the telegraph poles were bowled over like a lot of tenpins. Between Somerville and Junction 300 poles are prostrate, and a similar condition of affairs prevails all along to Phillipsburg and beyond.

To-day Western Union line-men are establishing connection all along the broken lines by a single wire strung along the fences. The distance from New York had been covered as far as Westfield this morning. Line-men are busy everywhere getting the shattered electric systems in shape.

WATER FROM THE MOUNTAINS.

South Orange to Receive Its Supply From Feltville To-Day.

South Orange's water supply will be turned on to-day, unless all plans fail, nearly two months later than the time specified in the contract. The work was to have been done by December 1. The water will be supplied by the Commonwealth Company from a stand-pipe at Feltville, fed by artesian wells. Feltville is a deserted village back of Scotch Plains, but is better known now as Glenside Park. It is about six miles from Orange. The Holly system will be used, with a pressure of 375 feet above tide water at the village line. The village being 200 feet above tide water, there will be a throw of 175 feet.

The village has six miles of pipes, the mains ten and eight inches, the laterals six and four inches. The company will pay ten cents per 1,000 gallons, and guarantees to take 25,000 gallons a day. A number of the citizens of South Orange who are taking water from Orange have have sold their pipe to the South Orange village, and after February 1 will take water from the village.

The statement in another paper that the water was turned on last Friday was not true, proving again that if you don't see it in THE PRESS it isn't so. The two months' delay is attributed to the fault of Engineer Bassett, who, at the request of Plainfield's Common Council, made a "survey" of the water-works outlook here, several years ago, and reported, at considerable expense to the city, facts which had already been in City Clerk O. B. Leonard's possession some time.

The "Journalist" Can't Give Decent Treatment to Even a Poor Bronze Eagle.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I observe in another paper under the heading "The Monument Committee" the following statement:

"Objection has been made to the female figure at the top of the monument. Even if it was desirable to have a female figure there at all, the one in the design is not considered a good type."

Now the figure at the top of the monument is an eagle, and why Gen. Negley should have selected a hen eagle instead of one of the sterner variety, I am unable to state; he undoubtedly had some good reason for his choice; but what surprises me more than that is this: How did the reporter of the sheet make his remarkable discovery? It must be that the knowledge of this fact suggested the statement that this particular figure in the design is not considered a good type. I am also led to infer that the reporter must have spread this information broadcast, because he makes the further statement that some of the Crescent Avenue church people are credited with suggesting a change of this particular female figure for that of a sailor. But I am still at a loss to know what objection these good church people can possibly have to a fine looking bronze female eagle, of the American species, perched on the top of a granite monument. But if their objections are well founded, the committee will probably give due consideration to their wishes as suggested.

Can you give the public any light on this rather serious question? R.

[The item quoted from the sheet referred to is only another instance of that sheet's own betrayal of its ignorance. THE PRESS alone has recorded the facts about Plainfield's soldiers' monument. "If you don't see it in THE PRESS it isn't so." The ignorant blunder over which "R." grows so facetious is only a sample of what gross errors are daily committed by the "journalist" from over the brook.]

A Helpful, Modern Method Adopted Locally.

The Standard, a Baptist publication, remarks:

"There is hardly a church or a pastor but has been annoyed by the 'notices' which the patient preacher is expected to read Sunday from the pulpit. Various devices have been tried to remove the difficulty. 'Prohibition does not prohibit' them. Bulletin-boards are not scanned. The regular old fashioned way of reading the notices Sunday, which are frequently forgotten Monday, as a rule prevails. Of late years many churches have adopted the weekly distributed calendar, or printed bulletin, as all in all the best thing. It can say more than any pastor, and be more personal and more precise, and is not so easily put aside. It can be made spiritually helpful and, different from the common run of notices, may cultivate other graces than that of patience; for instance, those of beneficence, sociability, and church-going."

The first congregation in Plainfield to adopt this new and praiseworthy method was the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian. At that church the system of printed bulletins, fresh every week, is found to be the most satisfactory way of ridding the pastor of a nuisance and securing the desired impression on the people's minds.

Firemen on a Fraternal Visit.

Members of Lincoln Hose Company, No. 1, of Perth Amboy, paid a fraternal visit to Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, Saturday. Chief Doane and his assistants also were present at the gathering, which was a very merry one. Among the Amboyers were John Cheney, Secretary, Ira Coddington, William O'Hara, ex-foreman, Herbert Ford, Thomas Farroat, Jas. L. Tooker, Jr., ex-foreman and editor, and Wm. Mason. The Lincoln members presented the Plainfielders with two handsome engravings to adorn the parlor walls of the company—"April Showers" and "The Mountain Hunter of Algiers."

Both Wachenhusen and Collier, Like Other Successful Ones, Advertise in THE PRESS Exclusively.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I can cheerfully recommend your columns to advertisers. My advertisement has not only brought me numerous answers, but also paved the way when presenting my goods to the Plainfield merchants, who, I am pleased to say, know a good thing when they see it. Collier, the jeweler, himself a persistent advertiser, must be a believer in his own medicine, his being the first answer to reach me.

PAUL F. WACHENHUSEN.

An Opera Company Stranded.

Gertrude Norman's English Comedy Company is stranded in town. The company played in Amphion Hall during last week to poor houses, and the actors and actresses' trunks, costumes, and other impedimenta, have been seized by Landlord James Force of Force's Hotel till the $50 due on the board bill is forthcoming. The manager is reported as saying that he has paid what bills he could, and that there isn't money enough left in the company's treasury to pay a single car fare to New York.

THE NEW ORGANIZATION.

The Confederation of Labor Appoints an Executive Board.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The confederation of labor adjourned after appointing a general executive board, which is composed of Mr. Ben Terrell, president of the confederation, and the chairmen of the delegations of the organizations represented, namely: Dr. C. W. Macune of the Farmers' Alliance; T. V. Powderly of the K. of L.; C. A. Humphreys of Texas, of the Colored Farmers' Alliance, and Ralph Beaumont of the National Citizens' Alliance.

This board has plenary powers when the confederation is not in session, and is authorized to appoint such help in each State as they may think necessary from each of the organizations. The State committees are to appoint other committees in Congressional districts and counties so as to spread the organization and its doctrines thoroughly.

The committee will have power to receive other industrial organizations into the federation on a basis of representation similar to that enjoyed by the organizations at present in it. A resolution was passed instructing the board to invite all labor organizations in the country to send delegates to the confederation of February, 1892.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 26.—A New England syndicate has completed the purchase of 600 acres of the Lookout Mountain Company's property for $1,000,000. It includes the summit of Lookout Mountain and the railroad running from there to this city.

Charged with Forgery.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 26.—Charles M. Speelman, ex-Sheriff of Gates county and a shoe dealer in Penn Yan, who recently assigned his business, has been arrested upon a charge of forgery. The arrest was made upon complaint of L. P. Ross a Rochester shoe manufacturer.

He Struck an Oil Well.

HORNELLSVILLE, N. Y., Jan. 26.—While drilling for water Daniel Skinner, a farmer living near Corning, struck an oil well. There is but little petroleum in the well, but the indications are favorable to a new field and there is much excitement in consequence.

Mad Dogs Spread Hydrophobia.

READING, Pa., Jan. 26.—Dr. C. F. G. Bergen, of this city, has three patients under treatment who have been bitten by mad dogs. One is Ammon Stizer, aged 30 years, and the other two are young sons of Frank Hahn, all of this county.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The deadlock in the Colorado Legislature is ended.

Ex-Postmaster Elisha Johnson of Thompsonville, Conn., is dead in that village, aged 85 years.

David Emery, a well-known oil producer, is dead at Titusville, Pa. He was once a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

While it is true that many strikers on the Scotch railway have gone back to work, the majority are still out, and the fight is not yet ended.

A fire at Hulmerville, Bucks county, Pa., destroyed the postoffice, Schatt's restaurant and Johnson's building. The Bristol and Langhorne fire departments saved the village from destruction.

The lock-out of the Chicago stone-cutters is at an end. Mutual concessions brought about an understanding, the new rules of the Cut Stone Contractors' Association being accepted by the journeymen.

The promoters of the stove trust are making another effort to capture the Detroit stove factories. They have made a proposition to buy out the concerns there—the Michigan, the Detroit and the Peninsular stove works.

The Navy Department at Washington has been notified that the new gunboat Bennington, a sister ship of the Concord, which recently had a successful trial trip, will be ready for her trial trip in about two weeks. The detail for the trial board has been made out. The Bennington will be required to develop 3,400 collective indicated horse power.

A drug trust, with a proposed capital of $60,000,000, is a matter which has been submitted to some of the leading wholesale drug manufacturers of the country by a promoter from New York representing capitalists of both New York and London. It is said that such satisfactory terms were made with two of the largest manufacturing houses in Detroit that they were accepted.

SAVED THE MONEY.

Creditor Who Squared Accounts with His Vista.

Two pedestrians met on the street and one knocked the other down and hurried off.

"That's an outrage!" exclaimed a citizen, who helped the fallen man up.

"Call the police and have him arrested!" shouted a second.

"Run after him and get satisfaction!" advised a third.

"Gentlemen," said the victim, as he reached his feet, "it's all right—all right."

"How all right?"

"I owed him three dollars and refused to pay it. He therefore took it out of my hide."

"But, man, you have been knocked down!"

"I know it, but I've saved three dollars. If anybody's ahead I'm the one, and there's no need of raising a row over it."

And he got a brace on his jaw with his left hand and skated off into a side street.—Detroit Free Press.

ENGLISH AS SHE IS WRIT.

"The rain came down in bucketfuls."—Harper's Young People.

A Very Lovely Dress.

Henry Ward Beecher used often to quote a remark which he once overheard in the White mountains at a hotel where he was staying with his family. On the piazza one day a girl near to him said to her companion, a damsel of her own age:

"Oh, Marianne, I do think that gown of yours is just too lovely for any thing, and it is so appropriate to wear up here!"

The other smiled self-approvingly.

"Yes," she said, smoothing down the folds of the frock in question. "I do think this gown sets off the mountains better than any other I ever had on."—N. Y. Mercury.

Good Grounds.

"Do you think you will gain your lawsuit?" asked Gus Smith of Colonel Yerger, who had been run over by a fire engine, and was suing the city of Austin for damages.

"Yes, I think I'll come out ahead."

"Has your lawyer given you grounds to think so?"

"No, but I have given him grounds to think so. I've deeded him two lots on Austin avenue as a fee."—Texas Siftings.

For the Public Weal.

"My good girl," said an experienced amusement purveyor, "take my advice and don't go on the stage."

"I suppose," she said, sharply, "you are going to undertake to save me from a terrible fate, or something of that sort."

"No," he replied, solemnly, "I was thinking of the public."—Washington Post.

Homeopathy Applied to Finance.

"In the far West," said the tall man from Utah, "we don't have no bank failures. We cured them fancy financiers of that folly by the homeopathic method."

"You did?" asked Guiles, as he put down his glass. "How did you manage it?"

"Why, easy enough. Whenever a bank suspended we suspended the banker. Worked like a charm, that did."—Chicago Times.

WHY JOHNNIE WAS THANKFUL.

A Make-Weight.

At Vichy, our friend Gontrau got into conversation with a pater familias, who said among other things:

"I have a couple of marriageable daughters, I am giving the eldest 50,000 francs for her dowry and the second one 100,000 francs."

"She is your pet child, I suppose?"

"No; she squints."—Le Patriote.

Hints to a Reformer.

He presented himself at the editor's door, saying: "Sir, I am the great American reformer. Do you want an interview with me?"

"Yes; wipe your feet, take off your hat, stop chewing that tobacco and sit down."—Judge.

Identifying Him.

Maddox—Who is that dilapidated-looking individual?

Gazzam—That's a man named Hawkins. Graduated at the head of his class in college and delivered an eloquent valedictory on "The Secret of Success."—N. Y. Sun.

KEEP THIS FACT IN MIND.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

The "Ad" Was Read.

Through a typographical error Heavenrich & Co., the shoe dealers, have been brought to acknowledge that their advertisement in The Journal must be pretty generally read. On Wednesday they advertised in The Journal that they would sell on Thursday any pair of $5 shoes in the store for $3.50, provided the purchaser brought a copy of the advertisement to the store. In lifting the forms to the press the figure 3 dropped out of the $3.50, leaving it 50 cents for the $5 shoes. The accident was not noticed until the entire edition had been sent out. Now comes the fun. Heavenrich & Co. are a firm that do exactly as they agree, and the result was necessarily embarrassing.

A reporter of The Journal entered the store at 2:30 yesterday and found it crowded with people from the west side and South Saginaw, each with the little coupons cut from The Journal, while the ever genial Manager Flurry with a double handful of coupons and a flush on his handsome countenance was endeavoring to explain the mistake and showing the figures quoted in other papers. "There's the man that's responsible for all this," he said as he spied The Journal man; "he can explain how it happened." It was soon made clear to the people in the store how it happened, and then they saw that a discount of $1.50 on $5 was the biggest thing they had struck and they began buying, and each one when they left had a pair of regular $5 shoes that cost them only $3.50. Mr. Flurry has not yet said whether he would bring action against The Journal for damage to his nerves or not, but he is convinced that people read advertisements in The Journal. The fact is The Journal circulates largely among a class who study its advertising columns from motives of economy, and save by so doing many dollars every year.—Saginaw (Mich.) Journal.

Value of Newspaper Advertising.

Few people realize the great value of newspaper advertising. On Friday of last week a party residing in Port Jervis lost a valuable piece of jewelry. On Saturday he advertised the loss in The Union and Gazette, and on the following day (Sunday) the lost property, which had in the mean time been found, was restored to the owner. This is only one of numerous instances which are of constant occurrence where lost articles are restored through the medium of newspaper advertising. A single insertion is generally sufficient to accomplish the purpose. The incident above mentioned also proves that honesty is not as uncommon a virtue as some people suppose.—Port Jervis Union.

The merchant who would secure and hold a large custom should make it a point to always have some "leader"—something he can recommend as unusually good value for the money, or unusually desirable for some reason. Customers may come to buy the "leader," on which the margin of profit is apt to be quite narrow, but a good salesman can usually succeed in "broadening the horizon" of the average purchaser, if he once gets him in hand, and has honest goods and plenty of them in sufficient variety. Leave some advertising to be done after the customer enters the store.

Pay your readers the compliment of assuming that they will understand what you have to say to them, even if it be technical. If you make or sell first class dry goods tell where yours differ from any one else's, point out how to tell good cloth or lace or whatever you sell. Show the economy in buying the kind that you carry, or, if you carry more than one grade, of buying the best.—Polytechnic in the Office.

Live and Let Live.

The newspaper that takes advertising to fill up with cannot prosper. A newspaper that has its rates too high cannot sell its space. There is a normal rate; that is, a rate which the publisher can afford to accept and make a profit, and which the advertiser can afford to pay and also make a profit. The profit must be mutual, else one or the other will quit.—Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel.

Don't Leave It to Luck.

People sometimes talk about good or bad luck in advertising, just as though the use of printers' ink were a game of chance. Apropos of this an advertising philosopher hits the nail on the head when he says: "Leave nothing to what is called luck, and you will always be lucky."—Exchange.

One Man's Way.

If one were to stand in any fair sized audience in this country and exclaim, "No stranger should leave the city without a box of"— and ask his hearers to finish the sentence, it is a hundred to one that the audience would shout, "——'s candy!" giving the name of a well known Chicago confectioner. This gentleman started in business a few years ago with two leading ideas distinctly in mind: To make strictly first class goods, to tell the public that he had them and to keep telling the public that he had them. He has not used large advertisements—in his line and for his purpose that would not have been the best way; but he has persistently and continuously hammered out the statement that no stranger should leave the city without a box of his candy, until his name and personality are associated with the candy business in that city as no others are.

The illustration suggests three points: Advertising matter should be plain in composition, it should suggest the individuality of the advertiser, and it should be continued indefinitely in use. Of course the plan referred to in the foregoing is better adapted to paid matter in the form of "readers" than to displayed advertising.

In mercantile advertising where display is used it is well to make one advertisement have relation to another which is to follow. Having secured the attention of a reader for his announcement the advertiser can catch him for the next by a line inviting particular notice to the proclamation which will appear in the same paper the next day or the next week, as the case may be.

The study of methods is one which every advertiser can make very profitable. Newspaper advertising is a necessity for the good business man, and pays him well; but he can multiply its returns by using his space with energy and judgment.

Small Matters.

Advertisers cannot take too much care in the typographical setting of their announcements. Sometimes a trifling alteration, the substitution of a slightly different style of type, or the rearrangement of a headline, will tell perceptibly upon the general appearance of the advertisement and the results to the advertiser.

The Question, "Is Marriage a Failure," Settled at Last.

The Question,
"Is Marriage a Failure?"
Settled at Last.

In making this alteration the publisher writes: "It may be a small matter, but in my opinion the success or failure of an advertisement oftentimes depends upon just such small matters." And just here the question arises, Do advertisers in general bestow as much attention as they ought upon these "small matters?"

But They Must Be Good Ones.

It is the time now for merchants to take advantage of the demand for pictorial advertising. This demand is not new. On the contrary, it has always existed. Heretofore, however, merchants have chosen to satisfy the demand with pictures which, to say the least, were coarse and repulsive, and which did not properly reflect the taste of the age. It is now time for merchants to use art in advertising. It is no more expensive than the inartistic method, and gives a certain tone and character to a store which the blatant, boisterous and altogether preposterous cuts do not give.—American Storekeeper.

An Unworthy View.

It is well understood by fair minded business men that local enterprises are dependent on the newspaper, while the newspaper is, to a certain extent, dependent on local enterprises. When the enterprise ignores the newspaper the newspaper must retaliate in kind.—Lancaster (N. H.) Democrat.

Fulfill Every Promise.

The merchant who desires the confidence and custom of intelligent people should never make a promise that he does not fulfill, or hold out, either by express statement or inference, any inducements that are not fully substantiated by the facts. There is no enduring success where confidence is lacking on the part of customers. Any success not founded on square and liberal dealing is sure to be short lived.

Didn't Bother Him.

When Sam Jones was preaching in a Western town some time ago he was annoyed by a young man who was whispering to his girl. Finally the preacher could stand the interruption no longer, so he looked straight at the young man and said: "I will pause until the young man in the back of the room gets through talking." The silence was intense and every eye was on the young man, who was still whispering to his girl. He had been so busy that he had not caught the preacher's censure. Mr. Jones repeated his remarks, and this time the young man heard him. Not an instant did he hesitate, but he immediately tried to square himself. While every one was watching him, he looked squarely at the preacher and said: "Go right ahead, Mr. Jones, you are not bothering me."—Toledo Blade.

Easily Arranged.

Dashaway (to hostess after the evening party)—I want to ask you if I may have the privilege of escorting the two Curtis sisters home? They are, by far, the prettiest girls in the room.

Hostess—Certainly, my dear Mr. Dashaway; I was just about to ask you would you be so kind, for there is such a scarcity of gentlemen. But (archly) it is rather awkward for you that there are two of them.

Dashaway—Oh, that's all right (a moment later, to the elder Miss Curtis)—My dear Miss Curtis, I am going to escort your sister home; I will be back for you in half an hour.—N. Y. Sun.

THE RETURN FROM THE WEDDING.

"An' what are they doin' now?"

"Oh, Mariar! It's just too splendid for any think. She's a leanin' her head on his shoulder and is a mussin' his hair like every think!"—Life.

A Dire Revenge.

He had been bounced out of a West street saloon, and was much ruffled, when an observer took a step nearer and asked:

"Throw you out?"

"Yes, threw me right out!"

"Any particular reason?"

"I haven't any money."

"I see. Well?"

"Well, the blooming bloke didn't get any the best of me, and don't you forget it!"

"Did you hit him?"

"Hit him! Forty times worse than that! I told him right in the presence of five other blooming blokes that he was no gentleman!"—Detroit Free Press.

They Gave Him a Sky Parlor.

He was a good-tempered old gentleman and never suspects that there are any but well-disposed people in the world. He accosted the hotel clerk cordially as he arrived, somewhat breathless, at the foot of the stairs.

"I have often heard," he said, generally, "how hotel clerks got to be wonderfully sharp at reading human nature, but I'm blest if I can understand how you came to guess that I was fond of astronomy, and liked to get good and high where I could look at the stars nights."—Washington Post.

A Mean Slur.

"Look here, young man," said the lately resigned conductor to the railroad editor, "I've always treated you white, haven't I?"

"You have."

"And when I resigned the other day didn't I tell you I'd worked for the company twenty years?"

"I believe so."

"And yet this is the kind of a send-off you give me." And he laid the last issue of the paper on the table and pointed to the notice of his retirement, which stated that he "had worked the company for twenty years."—St. Joseph News.

An Apt Teacher.

Mr. Beauregard—I see your name on this painting. Why, you must have painted it!

Miss Dilly Taunt—Yes; I have been taking lessons of Mrs. Stillyfe for three weeks.

Mr. Beauregard—I had no idea you could paint so beautifully.

Miss Dilly Taunt—Oh, I only did the name.—Puck.

A Change Not Wrought by Time.

A Maine woman one hundred years old says that in her day children were taught to write by making impressions on birch bark. To-day birch bark closely infolding the parent bough is used to teach children by making impressions with it upon them.—Chicago Times.

Not So Bad After All.

Mrs. McFadden—I'm very queer again, doctor. My cough bothers me so; I'm afraid I'm going to die.

Genial Medical Person—Never mind, it's not a very difficult thing to do. The last year of our life is much easier than the first. You see, there's no teething—Jury.

Illustrated with Cuts.

"My barber told me a very funny story this morning," said Smithers.

"I judge from the condition of your face it was illustrated with cuts," put in Wiggles.—Brooklyn Life.

A Striking Likeness.

Damocles and Damocles were much alike—a hair cut meant ruin for both.—Puck.

"LIKE A FROST-BLIGHTED FLOWER."

The fair young sufferer, pershes, and often from causes unknown to the world, but superficial judgment, founded on appearances, takes this form of expression, "died of quick consumption," while in nine cases out of ten it should be, "died from carelessness." Mothers, look to your daughters. Daughters, look to yourselves.

CLOSURE SET ASIDE

Six Republicans Vote With the Democrats.

SENATOR WOLCOTT'S SURPRISE.

He Has the Reapportionment Bill Taken Up by a Close Vote.

Senator Cameron of Pennsylvania Recorded With the Opponents of the Measure—Great Excitement in the Senate—Various Opinions About the Fate of the Elections Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The fate of the closure rule was determined during the day by the vote in the Senate on calling up the Apportionment bill,

The vote by which the latter measure was called up for consideration was very close, standing 35 ayes to 34 nays.

Senator Wolcott of Colorado, who has openly declared himself against the closure rule and the Elections bill, counted noses during the morning and found enough Republican absentees to insure the laying aside of these measures. He then moved to take up the bill for reapportionment of the Congressional districts.

Senator Dolph, of Oregon, promptly moved to table this motion, and on his motion came the test.

Six Republicans voted to take up the Reapportionment bill, and were assisted by the solid Democratic vote.

The Republicans who voted for Wolcott's motion were Senators Cameron, Wolcott, Teller, Stewart, and Jones, of Nevada, and Washburne.

The action of the Senate has caused a great deal of comment, and the general opinion expressed among Senators and Representatives is that the Federal Election bill, and its accompaniment, the cloture rule, will not be brought up again.

Vice-President Morton's Views.

After the vote, Vice-President Morton said: "There is a chance that the bill may be taken up. The chance depends on the position of Senator Stanford. Personally I can't say what the Senator favors in regard to these measures. If he is for the Elections bill the Senate would stand a tie on the proposition to lay aside any pending measure and take up the closure resolution. I should then have the deciding vote. No one can say whether the end has come or not, but the chances appear to be against the Elections bill."

DELAY IN THE HOUSE.

The Journal Read in Full on an Appeal of the Democrats.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The reading of the journal in full was demanded by the Democrats in the House. Mr. McKinley demanded the previous question on the approval of the journal, which was accorded. On an an appeal by the Democrats the journal was ordered to be read in full.

During roll call information was received that the Elections bill was defeated in the Senate, and cheer after cheer arose from the Democratic side.

CAMERON ON THE STAND.

The Pennsylvania Senator Says He Speculated in Silver.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—In the silver-pool investigation Senator Cameron of Pennsylvania took the stand, and said that he had no concealment to make regarding his purchase of silver. The testimony of Mr. Littler was substantially correct.

He said he bought silver just as he would buy any other commodity. He had purchased it without much thought. He had bought through Mr. Littler early in June about 100,000 ounces on a margin of $8,000 before the bill passed the Senate and gave an order to him to sell in ten days or two weeks. He kept no memorandum of the transaction. So far as he recollected the silver was disposed of in June. His profits were about $1,100.

He had no knowledge of any other Senator, Representative or Government official having any interest in the purchase of silver. He never knew Owenby and knew nothing about the existence of the silver pool.

Work of the Present Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The record of the Fifty-first Congress when finally made up will show that the number of bills introduced has been greater than any other Congress and the number passed will be smaller than in several other Congresses.

Breweries Bought by Foreigners.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Frank Jones of Portsmouth, N. H., testified before the Joint Congressional Committee on Immigration that he knew of the sales of only two breweries in America to foreign capitalists.

The Raum Investigation Finished.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—After negative testimony before the committee investigating Commissioner Raum, the committee closed its investigation and adjourned.

Want Hanging Abolished.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—An order was introduced in the House relative to changing the time of the assessment of taxes from May 1 to February 1. A bill was also introduced relative to abolishing hanging as punishment for murder.

Voting for Senator Farwell's Successor.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 27.—On the 31st ballot Ten Broeck voted for Palmer, Rowan voting for Streeter. The vote stood Palmer, 101; Oglesby, 100; Streeter, 3.

Nineteen Killed by an Avalanche.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—An avalanche at Floresta, Italy, has killed 19 persons and destroyed a number of houses.

LEPROSY CAUSES ALARM.

A Belief that Emigrants to America Have Carried the Disease With Them.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—A dispatch from Odessa says that considerable alarm exists over the growing prevalence of leprosy among the poorer classes of Russians and Russian Jews.

The authorities instead of moving to stamp out the disease have done all they could to stifle information on the subject, and prevent the truth from reaching the public and abroad. Now, however, they have themselves taken alarm and steps are proposed to isolate the discovered cases.

It is believed that some of the emigrants to America have carried leprosy with them, as most of the emigrants belong to the poor and uncleanly class among whom the disease finds its victims. The weight of Russian medical opinion is than the disease is propagated only by contagion.

JONES IS A CANDIDATE.

New York's Lieutenant-Governor Says He Will Try for the Governorship.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Lieut-Governor Jones is formally out as a candidate for Governor, his organ, the Binghamton Democrat, having put him up.

There was some doubt in political circles here about the real intentions of the Lieutenant-Governor, for there have been rumors that Congressman Flower would be the choice of the Hill men.

"I am a candidate for Governor," Mr. Jones said to a correspondent, "and I feel confident that I have the backing of a large portion of the Democratic party. I am in to win, too."

Rumored Railroad Change.

WEST CHESTER, Pa., Jan. 27.—It was rumored that a change in the management of our lower road to Philadelphia will take place in a short time. It is said that the Pennsylvania Central Division will extend the junction down the road as far as Wawa, and that the Pennsylvania, Wilmington & Baltimore Road will reach out and take in the Delaware City and Pomeroy roads, and also the Baltimore Central. The men who claim to know about it say that the large bridge at Wawa is being built with the intention of running a double track out as far as Kennett or Avondale.

Clark Strikers Indignant.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 27.—The work on the boarding houses in the mill yard at Kearney for the accommodation of the new spinners whom the Clark Thread Company has indoced to take the places of the strikers, is progressing steadily. The strikers are much disgusted at the way in which the company outwitted them in bringing the new hands to the mills in cotton bales, and have redoubled their watchers and are using every means to checkmate the last move on the company's part.

THE BROKEN WIRES

An Army of Men at Work for the Telegraph Companies.

NEW YORK ALMOST ISOLATED.

Connections Made To-Day With the Metropolis and Nearby Cities.

New Jersey Still Tangled Up—The Situation Slightly Improved in Philadelphia—Only One Wire at Harrisburg. Communication With New England Points Maintained With Difficulty.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—New York's greatest telegraph blockade has been partially raised. Western Union officials were congratulating themselves this morning that they had fifteen wires in working order, with the prospects of having communication opened to-day to all principal points either directly or indirectly.

The fine weather meant a great deal to the different companies. A thousand men were at work in New York and the neighborhood putting telegraph, telephone, fire and light lines into shape again. The telephone service, which suffered more heavily by the storm than all the other lines together, had improved but little. Thirty-five hundred subscribers were still cut off. District messenger calls all over town were practically useless.

While New Yorkers may congratulate themselves that the storm has passed away, those who have relatives and friends on the ocean will dread when they learn that, so far as can be ascertained by the Signal Service Bureau, it has gone to sea by way of Northern New England and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. It will be met by the incoming steamships from Europe.

What the Telegraph Companies Lose.

The telegraph companies estimate their total damage from the storm at $500,000. Two weeks' unceasing effort will be required to get the wires back into the condition which existed before the storm broke and tore down the poles. Wherever the wires happened to be under ground there was no damage. The Western Union officers state that complete havoc only describes their condition just now. It is even worse than when they were burned out. The trouble did not exist further south than Trenton and no further east than New Haven.

JERSEY TANGLED UP.

Electric Lights Out and Telephones and Tickers Silent.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 27.—The effects of the recent storm are felt throughout Essex County. In Newark large gangs of linemen are at work in different parts of the city repairing the wires, but in spite of the work done communication between Newark and outside places by telegraph and telephone is cut off. The work of repairing the wires is necessarily slow, for the reason that many poles which were broken down will have to be re-erected.

The electric light, fire alarm telegraph and telephone service in Paterson are still seriously crippled on account of the wires being down. Not a telephone in the city is in working order, and last night the city was again in darkness. The amount of damages and losses to the different companies will be many thousands of dollars.

For the past two days Trenton has been cut off from communication by wire with the outside world. The telephone and telegraph companies could not handle any business yesterday.

WILL A FLOOD FOLLOW.

The Injured Birmingham Dam Undergoing a Severe Test.

BIRMINGHAM, Conn., Jan. 27.—There was great excitement here owing to another rise of the Housatonic river, caused by the storm and melting snow. Considerable apprehension was felt regarding the dam, fears prevailing that more of the wall would given away.

Last night none of the people residing in the vicinity of the dam remained in their houses, sleeping at the hotels or at the homes of friends. A number of men were appointed a guard to watch the dam and spread the alarm should the worst fears be realized.

At Colebrook river the ice gorge broke and flooded all the cellars in the town, swept away barns and drowned horses and hogs. Many farmers lose heavily. The damage to the bridges near Barkhamstead is very great, enough to bankrupt the town, the Selectmen say.

ALONG THE COAST.

All Sorts of Rumors Circulated About Wrecked Vessels.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Jan. 27.—The baby blizzard is supposed to have worked great damage on the New Jersey coast between Sandy Hook and Barnegat Bay Inlet, but all the telegraph and telephone wires are down, and it is impossible to tell in what condition the coast is.

A number of cottages have been blown down, trees have been uprooted, and hotels and cottages unroofed. All sorts of rumors are being circulated about wrecked vessels and demolished houses, and the newspaper correspondents have been scurrying up and down the coast all day.

News from New England Points.

BOSTON, Jan 27.—Communication with the principal New England points is maintained, but with difficulty. Not far from 100 poles in and about the city are gone, and the force of linemen is insufficient to promptly repair the damage. The fire alarm systems in Boston and suburban cities are utterly demoralized and the suburbs are without their electric lights. In the city, however, these companies have most of the wires underground.

The Situation at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—The telegraph situation here to-day was but little improved over that of last night. Communication was restored to some extent with the South, but none could be got with points west, the storm having been particularly destructive between here and Harrisburg.

Only One Wire to Harrisburg.

READING, Pa., Jan. 27.—A dispatch from Harrisburg says all the wires leading from the State capital are down, except one to Reading. Every effort is being made to get the wires in working order so as to secure the running of trains safely. Very few trains can be run without wires, and these at great risk.

Beheaded by a Train.

ATHOL, Mass., Jan. 27.—The headless body of a man, who had been run over by the cars, was found by Trackwalker Fay on the railroad tracks eight miles east of this station. The remains were removed to Undertaker H. C. Dunton's and were later identified as those of Frank Leonard, of this town. It is thought that Leonard was intoxicated and was lying across the track when struck by a train.

Dr. Blood is in Chicago.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—It is now said that Dr. Charles L. Blood is not in Denver, as recently announced, but for six months has been in Chicago, and likely to remain there. In answer to a telegram Saturday from the Chicago police asking if Blood was wanted for the Sawtelle murder, City Marshal Fogarty of Dover, N. H., replied that there was no evidence against him.

Spinners Expected to Strike.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Jan. 27.—A strike will probably be inaugurated to-day in Wamsutta Mills Nos. 2 and 3. The mill managers want to shut down next Saturday to repair the engine and notices have been posted in the mills requiring the operators this week to commence work at 12:35 p. m. and quit at 7 p. m. The spinners held a meeting and voted not to work overtime.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—Joe McAuliffe and his backer and manager, Billy Madden, called at the Police Gazette office and left a challenge for McAuliffe to fight Jim Corbett for a private wager and a purse of $3,000 offered by the Hudson County Athletic Club. McAuliffe will meet Corbett and his friends to-morrow to arrange the details of the match.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The tenth annual dinner given by the captains of police of this city was held at Delmonico's last night. Covers were laid for 300 persons. Among those at the speakers' table were Charles A. Dana, Calvin S. Brice, ex-Gov. Hoadley, Grover Cleveland, Thomas C. Platt, Chauncey M. Depew, Gov. Leon Abbett and Elbridge T. Gerry.

To Raid Gambling Dens.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 27.—A determined attempt will be made by the police this week to close every poker room and gambling joint in Newark. In view of the fact that poker rooms have never been molested, and have sprung up like mushrooms everywhere, it is believed the authorities will be kept busy in locating and rooting them out.

Deep Snow in New Hampshire.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 27.—The storm in this section lasted nine hours and over fifteen inches of snow fell, obstructing travel and prostrating wires. Nashua, in this State, reports the worst storm of the season, twelve inches of snow falling, obstructing horse-car travel and delaying trains.

A STARTLING RUMOR

Robert Ray Hamilton Reported Alive and Well.

A RANCHER BRINGS THE NEWS

He Says the Alleged Drowning Was a Carefully Planned Fraud.

The Corpse of a Man Resembling Hamilton Placed in the River—Several Prominent People in the Secret—He Is Said to Have Gone to Australia—New Yorkers Believe the Story.

LEWISTON, Idaho, Jan. 27.—A ranchman named Sanford has just brought in the startling rumor that Robert Ray Hamilton, of New York city, who was reported to have been drowned in the Snake river while hunting last June, is still alive and enjoying good health.

Sanford says he learned this from men who worked on the Hamilton-Sargent ranch.

Hamilton wanted it to appear to the world, Sanford says, that he was dead.

The corpse of a man who very much resembled Hamilton was obtained and placed on the river, where it was found, and information was given out that Hamilton was dead.

The laborers said that several people were in the secret that Hamilton was still living and that he had either gone to Australia or Alaska under an assumed name.

The News in New York.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The dispatch from Idaho strengthens the well defined belief which has existed for some time among the friends of Robert Ray Hamilton that he is not dead, but instead is alive and only waiting for the courts to finally release him of all legal responsibility for his marriage to Evangeline Mann.

This belief has been steadily growing, and was given new life last week when Surrogate Ransom declined to admit the will to probate until much more definite proof of Robert Ray Hamilton's death was furnished the court.

PRIESTS IN POLITICS.

The Question Brought Up in Parliament by a Conservative.

LONDON, Jan. 27.—In the House of Commons the Attorney-General for Ireland replied to a question by Mr. T. W. Russell, Conservative, as to the expediency of enacting a law to prohibit priests from acting as agents at polling booths.

The Attorney-General replied that, without pronouncing an opinion upon the facts alleged regarding Kilkenny, or the propriety of the enactment suggested, he was indisposed to add to the programme of the Government the controversy that the introduction of such a measure would entail.

Claim Everything for Parnell.

DUBLIN, Jan. 26.—The Freeman's Journal, in editorially referring to Mr. Parnell's Waterford speech, says: "Unless the people from Athlone to Dublin, Limerick, Tralee and Waterford go back on themselves and swallow their own words the whole country stands solid for Mr. Parnell. Mr. Parnell has a policy, the seceders have none. Like the dissentient Liberals, they have become the tail of an English party."

Where He Got His Tariff Ideas.

BERLIN, Jan. 27.—The evident earnestness of the semi-official Berlin press to deny that the Kaiser has any taint of cancer is prompted by the fact that cancer, as an incurable disease would, under the constitution, disable the Kaiser from reigning. Hence the refusal up to the last moment to admit of the late Emperor Frederick had cancer.

Died in the Street.

CARTHAGE, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Joseph N. Kenyon, who has been in the livery business eleven years in this place, died of heart disease in the street during the morning, while on his way to his office, aged 56 years.

TO PREVENT PANICS.

Senator Stanford Will Push His Land Hypothecation Scheme.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Senator Stanford says he will press his bill, at the proper time, for the Government to loan money on land in cultivation, or that is tillable, at the rate of 2 per cent.

The Senator says if the bill is passed it will prevent any more financial panics in this country. "The idea," he says, "that the failure of one firm, Baring Bros., in London, could cause a money panic in this great country is preposterous and absurd in the extreme. If my bill goes through the failure of many Baring Bros. would not affect the money market in the United States. The money would be so scattered among the people it would be impossible to have a panic.

"The idea that the passage of a free coinage bill or a bill like mine will drive gold out of this country is ridiculous. By the act of 1883 just $100,000,000 of gold was placed in the United States Treasury to be drawn out by legal tender notes if the owners so desired. Has anybody asked for any of that gold? No, it is in the Treasury yet and will remain there. No one uses gold hardly this side of the Rocky Mountains, but every one uses silver. It is the coin used by the baker, the grocer and their customers. Any money stamped by the government is worth 100 cents. The intrinsic value of a silver dollar is only 75 cents. As a commodity it is worth so much, but when the government puts its seal upon it it is worth 100 cents.

"Now the system I wish to see in vogue is the hypothecation of land to the government for money at the rate of 2 per cent. It will put plenty of paper money in circulation and bring about an era of lasting prosperity. If any borrower fails to pay the 2 per cent. to the government some one will step in and quickly assume the obligation by borrowing money from the government and buying the delinquent's land. We have the richest country on the face of the globe. Our land is far more valuable than that of England, France, Germany and Austria, and perhaps Italy, all combined. Why not let it assume a cash basis."

—The Plainfield lawyer who is exercised because THE PRESS mentioned the fact that he did not clean his sidewalk, need not feel so ver much ashamed. A couple of city officials, a doctor or two, and a Government appointee, all living in this city, might also be mentioned as being as culpable as he.

Who Will Succeed Assistant Engineer Martin?

James A. Martin, second assistant engineer of the Plainfield fire department, has positively declined to accept re-nomination. During Mr. Martin's two years of service he has been most faithful and energetic, and fully deserved the promotion that was promised him last year by Mayor Male. Somebody, however, at the last moment shifted the mayor's mind again, and Mr. Martin's reward was not forthcoming.

Although the salary of the assistant engineers, as THE PRESS has said before, is entirely insufficient for the work they do, yet as soon as the news of Mr. Martin's declination is read above, there will spring up a number of candidates for the position. A glance over the list of fit, competent and eligible ones that just now occur to THE PRESS, discloses the fact that the name of John W. Murray, Jr., stands forth pre-eminent.

CLEARING UP THE WRECKAGE.

The Public's Electric Services Gradually Getting in Shape Again.

The telegraph and telephone companies are gradually getting their wires out of the tangle into which they were thrown by Saturday night's storm, but the havoc wrought by the elements will crumple for many days the service of the Western Union Telegraph Company, the New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company, and the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. Not only are the smaller and cheaper side lines rendered useless, but the total annihilation of the main trunk service of these companies has been accomplished. The damage to the wires within the city limits of Plainfield is especially serious. Several cross-country circuits centre here, and the wrecking of these is complete. The line of great sixty-foot poles of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company had just been brought into Plainfield, and direct communication with Elizabeth and New York had thus been established virtually for the first time. The company thought that the height and strength of these poles, which bore the wires high above the tree tops, rendered the service impregnable against the elements, and the poles did withstand the onslaught of the storm longer than the ordinary ones; but even this stanch line suffered considerably, wires being dragged from the cross-beams, and some of the poles being tilted over.

Gangs of linemen are at work in every direction clearing up the telegraph, telephone, electric light, and fire-alarm wreckage. The electric light service is all right again, and last night the street-lighting current as well as the interior current was turned on in full blast. Some trouble was caused to the company by the crossing of electric light wires with fallen telephone wires, and in one instance a wire from which the insulation had been torn set fire to a tree on East Sixth street, near Broadway, but all such defects were speedily remedied.

Manager Moore reports that the electric light service is now perfectly safe, and that there are no stray wires afloat to cause terror or bring injury to any citizen. He says that the story published elsewhere that one of the electric light wires had killed a horse is untrue, and adds that the big coil of wire around the letter-box at Fifth street and Broadway was a harmless fire-alarm wire, not an electric light.

The telegraph lines crossing the long bridge of the Central Railroad over Newark Bay are a total wreck. Every pole, with the exception of one on each side of the drawbridge, is broken off.

Yesterday the Central New Jersey Railroad people succeeded in stretching a continuous wire along the main line from New York, through Plainfield, and as far as Somerville; but along came the Western Union and telephone gangs to untangle the mess at Elizabeth, and this threw the Central's wire out of circuit.

The new line out towards Somerville was a sight to behold. The workmen, in constructing it, utilized broken telegraph poles, stakes, trees, and even barbed wire fences. The block signal system which extends from Jersey City to Bergen Point worked perfectly, as the wires were covered.

The Reading Railroad has one wire as far East as Bound Brook. On the Jersey Central tracks everything is running on schedule time, even if every vestige of telegraphic communication is cut off.

MIZNER TELLS HIS STORY.

He Says His Course Was Approved by the Entire Diplomatic Corps.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—A dispatch from San Francisco says that Lansing B. Mizner, ex-Minister to Central America, has decided to make public his official defense in the Barrundia case. He justifies this on the ground that Mr. Blaine's letter dismissing him was given to the press three weeks before it reached him and two weeks before Congress met.

His defense, in brief, is that the Barrundia affair was a mere incident in comparison with the settlement of the war between Salvador and Guatemala, which he, as dean of the diplomatic corps, brought about on the very day Barrundia was killed, and which required his whole attention.

Aside from this, however, he claims that his course was strictly in accordance with international law, as Barrundia was guilty of non-political as well as political crimes, and cites in justification of his position the action of Secretary Bayard in the Gomez case.

He quotes President Harrison's message to the effect that diplomacy should be frank and free from intrigue, and says it would have been intrigue to have abetted the captain of the steamer Acapulco in evading international law by preventing Barrundia's arrest.

He points out that on July 5 last the authorities of Salvador were allowed to arrest Senor Delgado, Minister of Foreign Relations, on board the same vessel.

Mr. Mizner says his course was approved in writing by the entire diplomatic corps in Central America except the Mexican Minister, and concludes by submitting his case to his countrymen.

STILL A DEADLOCK.

Rumors of a Political Deal in Connecticut Denied.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 27.—The Legislature commenced the fourth week of its session to-day at noon.

Regarding a rumor that he would adjourn the General Assembly unless the deadlock was broken Gov. Bulkeley said he did not contemplate any such action.

A secret conference of Democratic leaders, including two of the Democratic State officials—Messrs. Phelan and Staub—gave rise to a story that the Republicans had proposed a deal by which all below the Governor would be given their places provided the Democratic party would agree to put the Republican Gubernatorial candidate into office.

After the conference adjourned those present were reticent as to the proceedings, but insisted that no such deal was contemplated.

A Fire Charged to Strikers.

GLASGOW, Jan. 27.—The depot at Caldercbank, an unimportant station on the Caledonian Railroad, has been destroyed by fire. The police and railroad officials possess to believe the fire to have been the work of an incendiary. It is intimated that strikers instigated the fire.

Use Common Sense.

That people should use the same practical common sense in advertising that is necessary to transact any other business would seem to be an indisputable proposition. Yet there are gentlemen who are extremely good business men in all other respects who will make grievous errors in this direction.—Knoxville Sentinel.

A Common Sense Opinion.

The newspaper without any advertisements, which Mrs. Julia Ward Howe wants to see, might suit the tastes of some people, but it would be without a very interesting feature. The idea that the advertisements in a newspaper only please the counting room unfortunately obtains in some quarters, but to the great mass of the people they are not only interesting but useful and instructive reading. They are the shoppers' constant companion, the business man's guide and everybody's instructor. A newspaper without advertising columns would fail to accomplish its mission. Besides, it would be about as poor as Job's turkey.—Boston Herald.

The Way to Attract.

Advertisements should be attractive. First captivate the eye. The eye is the sentinel of the will. Captivate the sentinel and you captivate the will. The feet follow the eyes. It is the untiring, unremitted, everlasting, never take-no-for-an-answer appeal to the eyes of the people that brings trade.—Exchange.

A "Psalm" of Business.

"Tell me not in mournful numbers"
Advertising doesn't pay,
For the man's non compos mentis
Who would such absurd things say.

"Life is real; Life is earnest;"
And the man who hopes to rise
To eminence in any calling
Must expect to advertise.

"In the world's broad field of battle,
In the conflict of real life,"
Advertising is the magnet
Of achievements in the strife.

Lives of rich men all remind us,
"We can make our names sublime,"
And by liberal advertising
To the highest summit climb.

"Let us, then, be up and doing,"
In this sheet your "ads" insert;
"Still achieving, still pursuing,"
Business then will be alert.

A Question of Returns.

"You might just as well set a hen on china eggs and expect to hatch a brood of chickens as to do successful business without advertising," is the way The Monson (Mass.) Mirror states a more or less obvious truth.

Make It Business Like.

An ingenious advertisement is not necessarily a good advertisement. A clear, plain newspaper announcement is worth many intricate though clever ones.

YOU SEE THIS!

So Do Several Thousand Other People.

Suppose YOUR "Ad." Was Here?

You Must Have the Staff.

Advertising alone—no matter how excellent—cannot build up a big trade or make a house great; yet vital importance hinges upon advertising, for very few concerns have ever reached colossal proportions without liberal and intelligent advertising. I have in my mind four words that mean much:

Variety, Style, Quality, Price!

The store that has these, and in its advertisements tells its story in a plain, fair, square way that's attractive and readable, is bound to prosper.—Henry Curtin in Clothing Gazette.

Don't Be Afraid.

Too little advertising is like sowing too little seed. A farmer in planting corn puts a number of grains into each hill, and is satisfied if one good healthy stalk comes from each planting. It's the constant advertiser that is bound to attract attention. It's the succession of bright, catchy advertisements that refuse to be ignored. That the proper time must be allowed for the fruit to grow, ripen and be gathered is as true as that wheat cannot be reaped the day after it is sown.—Printer's Ink.

There is one thing, the price of which is not affected by the McKinley Bill. High tariff or low tariff, free trade or any other trade, Hires' Cough Cure costs 25 cents the world over. Surely cheap enough.

CAN YOUR VOTE BE BOUGHT?

A PULPIT TALK TO THE "ELDERS" AT TRENTON.

And We People Too, the Rev. Mr. Richards Thinks, Should "House Ourselves" and "Throw Old Jezebel Out of the Window."

The following is a verbatim report of the sermon preached by the Rev. Wm. R. Richards, in the Crescent Avenue church, Sunday evening. It will well repay a perusal from beginning to end:

Text—1 Kings, xxi: 3. And Naboth said to Ahab, The lord forbid it me, that I should give the inheritance of my fathers unto thee."

Ahab was king in Israel; a powerful king, an unscrupulous king; all things must suit his will. But sometimes he ran against obstacles that he could not surmount; and here was one of them. Naboth, a private citizen owned a bit of land, a vineyard close by the king's palace; and the king wanted that particular bit of land for a garden; and the man would not sell it, not at any price. And this brought the whole transaction to a stop; for there were some remnants of law left yet in Israel; and if any man did not wish to sell his land, none had a right to make him.

"The Lord forbid," Naboth said. It appears that he felt it would be a sin against God for him to sell any part of his family inheritance to anyone. And he knew it would have been contrary to the ancient law of Moses; for the intent of the law was to prevent large single holdings of land, and to secure each inheritance forever to the descendants of the original possessor. So to Naboth it seemed an act of impiety to part with this vineyard for any financial consideration.

We may well take it as a lesson from that ancient Israelite that there are some things which we cannot afford to sell at any price. It might be a good thing for our American people if we had more of this attachment which an ancient Hebrew felt for the place inherited from his fathers—if we cared more for the old home, the old church, the hallowed graves. It might be a good thing for us if more of our country boys were willing to stay on the old farm that their fathers tilled, even if it did not promise them so large a fortune; if more of our city boys were willing to live in the old house even if it were not on quite so fashionable a street, or if they could get more money now by selling it for a store. Old friends, too, all the associations that bind your present life to your own childhood, or to the generation before you. If you let anything come in and break those old ties for you no matter what you seem to gain for the time, you may find some day that you have lost by the bargain. You have lost something that money does not buy, and which cannot be restored. Home too, none can afford to sell. To Naboth it seemed a personal disgrace to think of taking money for his father's vineyard; it was almost like putting a part of himself up for sale. I wish we could learn from him that it is a disgrace in any way to put any part of yourself up for sale.

Can your vote be bought? I do not mean by a money bribe. Ahab offered Naboth another better vineyard if he wished instead of money. There are more ways than one of buying a man. But whatever the method and whatever the price, the man who sells any part of himself is a loser by the bargain. You cannot afford on any terms to lose your own independence in judgment and work and action; to make a parrot of yourself and then go about speaking another man's words; voting another man's votes; no longer a self-respecting Israelite, but only a pensioner of the king. No longer an American freeman, but only the tool of a boss.

"Will such a man or town or State vote for the Silver-bill?" "Certainly," we say, "he owns a silver mine; or owes money." Will such a man or town or state vote against it?" "Certainly—foreign trade and a lender of money." "Will such a man vote for a pool selling bill?" "Certainly, he's a railroad director." In our political calculations we take it for granted that in almost every community, a working majority of voters have sold so large a part of themselves that they are no longer capable of judging any such question on its merits; but as a matter of course they think now that what will pay them most is the right decision of the question. You can pass laws against overt bribery; but what will you do with this more insidious enslavement of the people's judgment by such price of private interest? And we lose by the bargain on all sides. No matter what seems to be gained, it is an irreparable public loss to lose so many freemen.

Your religious faith, too. If any sort of worldly bribe is likely to deprive you of that, or diminish your enjoyment of it—speak out, friend, as Naboth did, "The Lord forbid it me that I should give up this inheritance of my fathers." It is not worth while to discuss the terms at all. Let king and peasant know that your religion is a thing you cannot be made to sell.

The Lord's day; your day, our day of sacred rest; a truly precious inheritance from our fathers. Are you willing to sell that, or imperil the sacredness of it for money? Will you keep up your own work on that day because you can command better wages then? Or will you make others work to suit your interest? Our newspapers, our railroads, and so forth; shall their servants be shut out from this divine benediction of rest because some of us find an advantage in keeping them at work? I do not think I am a fanatic on this subject of Sabbath keeping. I believe the Sabbath was made for man, and is to be used in a way to further his real interests. But I believe the Sabbath was made the most precious part of his inheritance, and that whoever wilfully and needlessly robs any man of his rights in it has taken from him something for which no money can pay.

Ahab was greatly displeased at Naboth's answer; and went home in a state of mind. If a wealthy man of our day had built himself a palace, surrounding it with beautiful lawns and gardens and trees, extending far on all sides but one, where a miserable little lot reached up almost to his palace walls, and which he could by no means coax or threaten its owner to sell to him, we would know how King Ahab felt about this vineyard. If a great corporation were proposing to run an underground railroad up Broadway and had bought the right of way almost from the Battery to Union Square; and had the capital in hand, and were already fingering the expected profits, and then the whole enterprise was stopped by some cantankerous owner of a single lot near Canal street who would take no price for his land, and who because of some legal complication could not be compelled to sell; they would know how Ahab felt. Or any powerful trust in any department of trade balked by the obstinacy of some insignificant private dealer.

Ahab had a certain amount of principle left in him, or of timidity—one hardly knows which it was. Some ancient lawhe did not dare attempt to break. If Naboth flatly refused to sell his vineyard, it seemed to the King that that ended it. But Ahab also had a wife, a sort of original Lady Macbeth, who knew none of his fine scruples; and when she learned what was troubling the King, she told him to give himself no uneasiness—he should have the vineyard. So far as appears she did not tell him how she proposed to get it and he did not ask. Ahab knew Jezebel; and I think for his own peace of conscience he preferred not to ask how she proposed to get that vineyard: but he made no objections to it. He wanted the vineyard, and he let her go ahead. So Jezebel wrote letters over the royal name and seal to the elders of Naboth's city, directing them with all proper solemnity to call a public meeting, and have him on the platform among the notables and then have two witnesses come in and accuse him there of blaspheming against God and the King. The penalty of blasphemy was death by stoning. And the elders of the city did just that thing. I do not suppose they liked it much. It was rather hard on their old neighbor Naboth, but they liked still less to offend the King and the Queen; and they had the royal word for it in writing that this Naboth was to be called a blasphemer. It must have seemed surprising to them. They had never taken him for that sort of a man before. But apparently they asked no questions. I fancy they preferred also to leave the whole responsibility with the Queen. She made the charge of blasphemy; they knew nothing about that. I do not know who the false witnesses were or what they said, but I suppose they based their testimony on fact so far as possible. It was generally known that Naboth had refused with an oath to do what the King asked him to do, and it would not take much invention to make that refusal appear like treason and blasphemy combined. At all events they got a verdict against him. Nothing is said about cross-examination, or witnesses for the defence. There is an air of awkward silence about the whole performance anyway. Apparently no one wanted to speak if he could help it, and soon the verdict was in, and the sentence carried out, and Naboth and his sons with him stoned to death. And then the Queen went in and told her husband to go down and get his vineyard that he would meet with no objections now.

What an abominable story it is. What indignation it would rouse in any modern country to hear of any parallel to it. The whole civilized world would be ringing with the horror of the crime. But thank God we have no Kings and Queens now; or if any are left anywhere their hands are now securely tied by law from the commission of such atrocities. They could not do it now in any part of the civilized world; they would not dare attempt it; the thing could not be done. If old Ahab and Jezebel should now venture to revisit these glimpses of the moon, we should not honor them with a palace but clap them into the nearest jail.

And yet do you know, friends, I have been asking myself seriously for some days past whether it is possible that this old firm of Ahab and Jezebel can have planted their stand in the goodly commonwealth of New Jersey. It happened a few days ago that the same mail brought me two circular-letter appeals. I thought at first that they were duplicate copies of the same appeal; but found on examination that they were not—they were quite different. One of them I read in this place last Sunday morning. It was signed by certain well known gentlemen of Elizabeth and was entitled, "A second appeal to the moral and religious people of the State of New Jersey." The appeal as you may remember, was that we all use what influence we can against any bill proposing any change in the existing law, in favor of legalizing gambling upon race tracks in New Jersey, or pool selling in connection with the same. The circular implied that such a law would probably be proposed at this next session of the Legislature; similar to the one which passed both houses last year.

I have since read an item in the New York Tribune, which confirms this part of the circular, representing that the present stringent prosecution of bookmakers in the different counties has induced the authorities of all the race courses to make common cause; and that they will probably unite to put such a bill through this Legislature. The article implied that it was only necessary for these race track people to make up their minds what they all wanted, and they could have it.

You understand the question is not whether men shall be allowed to race horses if they wish—nobody proposes to interfere with that. It is whether public, professional betting on the race shall be made legal. I do not understand that anybody presumes to argue that such a change of law would be in the interests of public morals. Judge Van Syckel, the other day, in sentencing men for doing just what this law would authorize them to do, said that their "practices were festering sores on the community, carrying contagion and corruption to all brought within their pernicious influence." And I have not noticed that anyone undertakes to answer that accusation. So at once the question occurs to us, what possible inducement can there be for anyone to vote for such a change in the law? Well, it is commonly understood that there are one or two powerful interests in the state, that would be furthered by the increased attendance at races which this new law might secure. Of these interests which might expect benefit financially, some are most respectable in every way. Others of them, the bookmakers themselves, not so respectable.

Now I do not wish to call names or make groundless charges; but in reading over this appeal I cannot help thinking of Ahab and Jezebel. They both wanted to get the vineyard from Naboth, and the latter, as it was generally understood, had no uncomfortable scruples. She was willing to do anything to get it, while the more respectable Ahab—he would ask no questions and himself break no law. And then the elders—the legal representation of the people; we should call them in these days a legislature. I do not know how it was brought about. The Bible records no offering of direct bribes to these elders, but somehow the queen knew very well that whatever she said she wanted done those elders would do. They listened to the evidence, and passed their verdict accordingly. No one could find any fault with that. And so legislators to-day listen to arguments, and pass a law.

Ah, what a tempest of rage there would be the world over if such a judicial crime as the murder of Naboth and his sons were committed by any modern government! But are you quite sure that such a law as this in favor of betting, if it be passed by the Legislature, will not prove a deadlier crime against the people of this State?

Well, I spoke of another circular or appeal which came to me by the same mail I must turn back to that. I found, on opening it, that it came from Newark, being signed by representative gentlemen of that city—representatives of churches of all denominations in that city—and that it was designed to interest us against another change of law, proposed for the next session of the legislature. To show the nature of this change let me quote a sentence or two. Some of you have read the whole of it in our daily papers. "Last September the Saloon Keeper's Association in annual convention adopted a series of resolutions embracing three essential points, viz: the lowering of the present license to a minimum of $.00, the opening of the saloons on Sunday, after 12 o'clock M. and the repeal of the statute which declares 'that the sale of liquor on Sunday constitutes a disorderly house.' An active lobby is already at work in Trenton, to effect the desired revolution." That is the circular. Everyone knows the signers and I assume that they speak from knowledge of the facts.

I spoke a little while ago of our Sunday as one of the things that we could not afford to sell; a peculiarly precious part of the inheritance which has come down to us from our fathers. It seems now that King Ahab, and Jezebel his partner, have their eye on this little vineyard also. In the ancient history, it appears, that the king had already got about all the other land that he could see from his palace window—all but this one little strip belonging to Naboth. And so among us, the saloons have got all the other six days of the week, and can do pretty much what they choose then. But this one little vineyard, this sacred day—all that is left to us now—they want this too, and cannot rest easy on their couch until they have it. One would think that with six sevenths of the week in the royal hand of the saloon and its friends, one-seventh was not too large a share for all the rest of the public. But they do not think so—they want the whole. And to get what they want they need some service from the elders of the State assembled at Trenton.

Ahab and Jezebel made up the firm. Jezebel, as we have seen, had no scruples of any sort. One conceives a sort of shrinking admiration for such unmitigated, thoroughgoing wickedness as hers. Perjury, murder, it made no difference what it was, she would do anything to carry out her purpose. There is a common impression that the saloon interest includes some such utterly unscrupulous persons. No one has any good word to say for them, they might hardly care to say a good word for themselves. They seem to have made evil their good. Even the average secular newspaper, when speaking of the keepers of these low rum holes, read almost like a Prohibition organ. But then Ahab, the more respectable man; the man who prefers to keep the law; who has a reputation and a conscience and some sort of bowels of compassion in him; who commits no crime, but asks no questions and takes his share of the vineyard; is there any sort of indissoluble tie in our day between this respectable Ahab, and that disreputable Jezebel? Well, if the contest comes up this year over this proposal to open saloons on Sunday, we can see for ourselves whether the keepers of the low rum holes, and the reputable brewers and wholesale dealers and hotel people, are or are not ranged on the same side. And if it proves that that old iniquitous partnership is still kept up, we may rest assured of one thing—the methods actually and effectually employed will be not those of respectable Ahab, but those of unprincipled Jezebel. Ahab's part of the performance is to ask no questions, and then take his share of the vineyard. "A chain," they say, "is never stronger than its weakest link." And in any such coalition of men comparatively honest and men altogether based against the public will and the public good, the conscience which really guides the conduct of the coalition will be of the weakest link, that of the man who has least conscience, who has no scruples, and who can walk straight ahead for what he wants. The others ask no questions.

But the elders, what will they do about it? I do not know; and I do not know what means that lobby at Trenton proposes to use to get what it wants from the Legislature. I fancy they will use whatever means their experience has taught them to be most effectual for that purpose. I cannot discover what means Jezebel used to induce the elders of that ancient city to vote an innocent man and his innocent sons to a shameful death. Some way or other they were persuaded to do it. But I do not hesitate to declare my own conviction on one point—that whatever guilt of the blood of innocent men fell on any one of those ancient elders, who in obedience to Jezebel's dictation voted for Naboth's death, no less guilty of the blood of innocent men will be any modern legislator who, in obedience to the dictations or the inducements of a saloon lobby, votes over to them our one day of rest and peace. If those elders after their vote had a right to look their fellow-citizens in the face, and then at night to lay their heads on an untroubled pillow, so may our modern legislator perhaps, after his vote. But if not they must carry evermore in their breasts an intolerable burden of guilt—like that later Jewish betrayer who brought again to the chief priests and elders the thirty pieces of silver, saying "I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood," and then went out and hanged himself. I wish before the lobby for any saloon or gambling bill proceeds much further with its work, every legislator at Trenton would take time to ponder that despairing remorseful cry.

Friends, we try not to judge our fellowmen, especially not to speak evil of the rulers of our people; but it seems as if the time had come for some plain talking or some diligent inquiry in this part of the World. One does not like to make charges without good evidence, against the elders of the city or of the county or State; but the fact forces itself upon every observer that some way or other Jezebel, or some similar personage, gets her measures through these various bodies with altogether too much facility.

When a man proposes to open a second saloon (I state the case as it has been publicly reported, without professing to know anything about its inner history) within a stone's throw of a union Mission Sunday school chapel; and when in protest against it appear as many names as there had been time to collect, representing virtually, the whole reputable population of the borough; if a judge or a bench of judges without even waiting for proof that the person signing the application or license had any legal right to sign, at once insists on granting it, no one expresses any suspicion of bribery, that I have heard—certainly I do not. But I say it is about time the public should inquire what the connection can be between Jezebel and the elders of the county, that these elders should use their power in such apparent disregard of the public will and of the public rights.

Some one has said recently, "There is throughout the country a profound and just feeling that there is a growing tendency to divert legislation and government from their true purpose, namely, a free and full expression of the people's will, and to surrender their control to selfish interests for selfish objects, rather than to use them for the common good." I think that we do feel that profoundly; and it may be that we shall have to find some way by which we can express our feelings openly and clearly. And for their own good name the honorable elders of all our communities in legislation in city council and on the bench, are as much interested as any of us to have this subject agitated and ventilated, and to have Jezebel's methods, whatever they be, thoroughly expressed and condemned.

I feel constrained to speak of one other matter here in our own city. It has come to me merely as newspaper rumor, and may be incorrect. But the rumor is that an application will soon be made to our city council for a license to open a saloon or a hotel bar, almost next door to the Trinity Reformed church on Second street. I believe the sentiment of most communities has decided that a drinking place so near either a church or a school is a nuisance. I suppose that is the common sentiment in Plainfield. If such application is to be made, and if there is any danger that a majority of our representation in the city council will vote to grant it, I do wish there might be some way of so dictating our adverse sentiment in advance that they will be constrained to heed it.

When Jezebel heard that Naboth was dead she told Ahab to go down and take possession of the vineyard, and he started to do it. But it seems he never finished, for on the road he met Elijah, the prophet of God, who foretold to him the awful doom of his house because he had sold himself to work evil. The doom was fully carried out in the days of his son, after Ahab himself had been slain in battle. A man named Jehu made a conspiracy for the throne, and came up with great speed and slew first the king, Ahab's son, and then made the servants throw old Jezebel out of a window, killing her; and then made the elders of the city behead all the rest of the descendants of Ahab. Very obedient, those elders. Whoever seemed strongest, they would carry out his wish. Now it is to kill Ahab's rival Naboth, and now it is to kill Ahab's sons. And then the history reads, after this account of the baseness of the elders, that "Jehu slew all that remained of the house of Ahab in Israel, and all his great men, and his kinsfolk, and his priests, until he left him none remaining." I do not know whether these same elders of the city were counted in under that title "great men" whom Jehu slew, but it may be so.

The moral of the story is clear, friends. Ahab and Jezebel make a very powerful coalition; one honest man like Naboth seems to stand very little chance against them, and if he oppose may easily fall a victim to their malice. Elders of the city seem obsequious and ask no questions. But there is a just God in heaven, and "they reckon ill who leave him out." Ahab may stain his soul with the blood of Naboth, and still never have a chance to enjoy that vineyard. Ahab, Jezebel, elders of the city—let them all take these lessons to heart.

But the people, what were they doing all this time? What we cannot easily understand is why the people should sit still so long and suffer such atrocities to be perpetrated before their eyes. Intelligent men the world over are wondering how it can be that the people of these United States should sit still so long, and bear all that they have borne at different times from those who have combined to thwart their will and deprive them of their rights.

Peaceable acquiescence is not always the highest type of Christian virtue. "Sell thy garment and buy a sword," was counsel from Christ's own lips, and it means something. I ask it in the name of God, is it not about time now that we citizens should rouse ourselves and use all lawful means to determine, especially in our State and city governments, whether Ahab and Jezebel shall reign despotically over us, or whether this is as it professes to be, a government by the people, through representatives elected by us to declare and enforce our will.

THE "LANDESVATER."

A Ceremony in Use Among the German Students' Brotherhood.

One of the most popular usages of the Burschenshaft—the German students' brotherhood—is the so-called Landesvater, a ceremony which is graphically described by Mr. H. H. Boyesen in the Cosmopolitan. The fellows, seated around a long table with their beer-jugs before them, rise at the command of the two presidents and place their hands upon each other's shoulders. Of the song which is always sung on this occasion Mr. Boyesen has translated a few specimen verses, preserving rhythm and meter:

"Brothers, brother, with each other
We will sing a festive song;
While the rapiers flash and glisten
To the solemn tones ye listen,
German brothers, true and strong.

"Let us loudly praise, and proudly
Sing our fatherland's renown;
To thy service dedicated
Are thy sons, the consecrated Guardians of thy stainless crown.

"Life and treasure at thy pleasure,
Lay me down, oh, fatherland!
Draw our swords and fight with valor,
Bleeding naught death's pain and pallor—
Sweet to die at thy command!

"Who aspiring and untiring
Honors not with free accord
German worth, let him not, daring,
By this hallowed rapier swearing,
Desecrate the German sword.

"Hear our singing, loudly ringing,
While in honest student wise,
On this blade that brightly flashes,
Merrily his cap each dashes,
And with one accord we rise."

Here two rapiers are handed to the two Burschen, standing vis-a-vis at the upper end of the table; they lift their colored caps from their heads and dash them on the points of the rapiers; they then mount with one foot on the chair and the other on the table and cross their swords while singing the next verse of the song, in which they swear always to remain honorable fellows (Burschen). The two chairmen thereupon take the swords and reach them to the next pair in order, and the ceremony is repeated until the bottom of the table is reached.

THE BEAUTIFUL SEYCHELLES.

Islands in the Pacific Which May Have Been the Biblical Paradise.

The Seychelles islands, which are supposed by many to be the site of the Eden of the Old Testament history, form an archipelago of 114 islands in the Indian Ocean, and are situated in 3 degrees 58 minutes south latitude, about 1,400 miles east of Aden and 1,000 miles from Zanzibar. They rise steeply out of the sea, culminating in the Isle of Mahe, which is about 3,000 feet above the level of the ocean, and is nearly the center of the group.

Only about thirty of the islands are inhabited, says the Chicago Mail, the last census giving them a population of 19,000 souls. All these islands are of coral growth. The beaches which surround the Seychelles are the most beautiful in the world. They are of glistening white calcareous sands, inclosed in coral reefs of the most subtle and varied structure. These coral reefs form a sort of wall around the islands, and when the sun's rays fall slanting on the sands the shore reflects here and there light-tinted rainbows of the most exquisite shades.

The waters, which are shallow and clear, abound in fish, most of them of rare colors, which can be plainly seen as they swim to and fro, varying their graceful movements by leaping out of the water. The houses are built of a species of massive coral hewn into square blocks, which glisten like white marble and show themselves to the utmost advantage in the various tinted green of the thick tropical palms, whose immense fern-like leaves give pleasant and much needed shade.

These palms grow as high as 100 feet, and sometimes more. They overtop the houses and even the coral built church—a novel sight and one of the curios of Mahe. They line the seashore and cover the mountains, forming in many places extensive forests. Many trees display simultaneously buds, blossoms, unripe and ripe fruit.

Modest and Unknown.

While all the world is talking about Henry M. Stanley, says the London News, a man who has done as great an exploring feat is, owing to his natural modesty, unnoticed an unknown. In 1874 John F. Ingram, of Durban, Natal, then a beardless youth of nineteen, was sent by a syndicate of traders into Swaziland for the purpose of opening up the country and bringing to light its resources. Not content with being the first man to cross the country alive, he kept on through Amatongaland, through the Portuguese territory far beyond the Zambesi, until Egypt was reached and his self-instituted task completed. This stupendous achievement was accomplished in eighteen months, during which time Mr. Ingram was entirely alone, having dispensed with even an escort of native servants and carriers. In person Mr. Ingram is not unlike Emin Pasha, being small and wiry and looking a veritable Turk. He is very well educated, speaking English, French and fourteen African dialects, besides possessing no mean ability as an artist. At present he is editing a paper in South Africa.

Expensive Dinners.

New York has become a city of extravagance in dinner-giving, says a writer in Ladies' Home Journal, and many of these entertainments, with all the delicacies of the season and rare wines, cost from twenty to one hundred dollars per cover. Of course the latter is the outside figure; but reckoning that one gives a dinner once a week to a party of, say fifteen, at the first-named figure it will prove a snug sum at the end of the year. In order to render these dinners complete and perfect, the hostess must possess a dinner service more or less elaborate, and it is rarely, if ever, that the majority of outsiders stop to consider what these consist of and how much money is spent in this direction. In the old Roman days no greater magnificence could have existed in the way of table decoration, wines and service than a millionaire New Yorker displays when his wife gives a large dinner.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS.

The "Ad" Was Read.

Through a typographical error Heavenrich & Co., the shoe dealers, have been brought to acknowledge that their advertisement in The Journal must be pretty generally read. On Wednesday they advertised in The Journal that they would sell on Thursday any pair of $5 shoes in the store for $3.50, provided the purchaser brought a copy of the advertisement to the store. In lifting the forms to the press the figure 3 dropped out of the $3.50, leaving it 50 cents for the $5 shoes. The accident was not noticed until the entire edition had been sent out. Now comes the fun. Heavenrich & Co. are a firm that do exactly as they agree, and the result was necessarily embarrassing.

A reporter of The Journal entered the store at 2:30 yesterday and found it crowded with people from the west side and South Saginaw, each with the little coupons cut from The Journal, while the ever genial Manager Flurry with a double handful of coupons and a flush on his handsome countenance was endeavoring to explain the mistake and showing the figures quoted in other papers. "There's the man that's responsible for all this," he said as he spied The Journal man; "he can explain how it happened." It was soon made clear to the people in the store how it happened, and then they saw that a discount of $1.50 on $5 was the biggest thing they had struck and they began buying, and each one when they left had a pair of regular $5 shoes that cost them only $3.50. Mr. Flurry has not yet said whether he would bring action against The Journal for damage to his nerves or not, but he is convinced that people read advertisements in The Journal. The fact is The Journal circulates largely among a class who study its advertising columns from motives of economy, and save by so doing many dollars every year.—Saginaw (Mich.) Journal.

Value of Newspaper Advertising.

Few people realize the great value of newspaper advertising. On Friday of last week a party residing in Port Jervis lost a valuable piece of jewelry. On Saturday he advertised the loss in The Union and Gazette, and on the following day (Sunday) the lost property, which had in the mean time been found, was restored to the owner. This is only one of numerous instances which are of constant occurrence where lost articles are restored through the medium of newspaper advertising. A single insertion is generally sufficient to accomplish the purpose. The incident above mentioned also proves that honesty is not as uncommon a virtue as some people suppose.—Port Jervis Union.

The merchant who would secure and hold a large custom should make it a point to always have some "leader"—something he can recommend as unusually good value for the money, or unusually desirable for some reason. Customers may come to buy the "leader," on which the margin of profit is apt to be quite narrow, but a good salesman can usually succeed in "broadening the horizon" of the average purchaser, if he once gets him in hand, and has honest goods and plenty of them in sufficient variety. Leave some advertising to be done after the customer enters the store.

A Point for the Advertiser.

Pay your readers the compliment of assuming that they will understand what you have to say to them, even if it be technical. If you make or sell first class dry goods tell where yours differ from any one else's, point out how to tell good cloth or lace or whatever you sell. Show the economy in buying the kind that you carry, or, if you carry more than one grade, of buying the best.—Polytechnic in the Office.

Live and Let Live.

The newspaper that takes advertising to fill up with cannot prosper. A newspaper that has its rates too high cannot sell its space. There is a normal rate; that is, a rate which the publisher can afford to accept and make a profit, and which the advertiser can afford to pay and also make a profit. The profit must be mutual, else one or the other will quit.—Ansonia (Conn.) Sentinel.

Don't Leave It to Luck.

People sometimes talk about good or bad luck in advertising, just as though the use of printers' ink were a game of chance. Apropos of this an advertising philosopher hits the nail on the head when he says: "Leave nothing to what is called luck, and you will always be lucky."—Exchange.

One Man's Way.

If one were to stand in any fair sized audience in this country and exclaim, "No stranger should leave the city without a box of"— and ask his hearers to finish the sentence, it is a hundred to one that the audience would shout, "——'s candy!" giving the name of a well known Chicago confectioner. This gentleman started in business a few years ago with two leading ideas distinctly in mind: To make strictly first class goods, to tell the public that he had them and to keep telling the public that he had them. He has not used large advertisements—in his line and for his purpose that would not have been the best way; but he has persistently and continuously hammered out the statement that no stranger should leave the city without a box of his candy, until his name and personality are associated with the candy business in that city as no others are.

The illustration suggests three points: Advertising matter should be plain in composition, it should suggest the individuality of the advertiser, and it should be continued indefinitely in use. Of course the plan referred to in the foregoing is better adapted to paid matter in the form of "readers" than to displayed advertising.

In mercantile advertising where display is used it is well to make one advertisement have relation to another which is to follow. Having secured the attention of a reader for his announcement the advertiser can catch him for the next by a line inviting particular notice to the proclamation which will appear in the same paper the next day or the next week, as the case may be.

The study of methods is one which every advertiser can make very profitable. Newspaper advertising is a necessity for the good business man, and pays him well; but he can multiply its returns by using his space with energy and judgment.

Small Matters.

Advertisers cannot take too much care in the typographical setting of their announcements. Sometimes a trifling alteration, the substitution of a slightly different style of type, or the rearrangement of a headline, will tell perceptibly upon the general appearance of the advertisement and the results to the advertiser.

The Question, "Is Marriage a Failure," Settled at Last.

The Question,
"Is Marriage a Failure?"
Settled at Last.

In making this alteration the publisher writes: "It may be a small matter, but in my opinion the success or failure of an advertisement oftentimes depends upon just such small matters." And just here the question arises, Do advertisers in general bestow as much attention as they ought upon these "small matters?"

But They Must Be Good Ones.

It is the time now for merchants to take advantage of the demand for pictorial advertising. This demand is not new. On the contrary, it has always existed. Heretofore, however, merchants have chosen to satisfy the demand with pictures which, to say the least, were coarse and repulsive, and which did not properly reflect the taste of the age. It is now time for merchants to use art in advertising. It is no more expensive than the inartistic method, and gives a certain tone and character to a store which the blatant, boisterous and altogether preposterous cuts do not give.—American Storekeeper.

An Unworthy View.

It is well understood by fair minded business men that local enterprises are dependent on the newspaper, while the newspaper is, to a certain extent, dependent on local enterprises. When the enterprise ignores the newspaper the newspaper must retaliate in kind.—Lancaster (N. H.) Democrat.

Fulfill Every Promise.

The merchant who desires the confidence and custom of intelligent people should never make a promise that he does not fulfill, or hold out, either by express statement or inference, any inducements that are not fully substantiated by the facts. There is no enduring success where confidence is lacking on the part of customers. Any success not founded on square and liberal dealing is sure to be short lived.

AMERICA'S OLDEST CHURCH.

It Was Built a Hundred Years Before George Washington Was Born.

About two hundred miles south of the city of Washington and a few miles south of the mouth of the James river in the ancient county of the Isle of Wight, in the State of Virginia, stands the oldest building erected on this continent by English-speaking people, says the Washington Star. It is a church built entirely of oak and called "St. Luke's" and "Old Smithfield Church," while its historic name is "The Brick Church."

For two hundred years the house of worship from time to time of the six generations that sleep around it under the fine grove of oaks, sycamores, walnuts and cedars, it resounds with no voice of praise or prayer, it having been abandoned in the year 1836 as a church on account of most of the members having died or moved from the parish.

This venerable church was built in the year 1632, one hundred years before Washington was born and only twelve years after the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. The antiquity of the church is proven by two deeply-marked date bricks that came down with the east wall in 1887, when the original top fell in.

The church was erected under the superintendency of Captain Joseph Bridges, a "man of affairs" in the shire of Isle of Wight at that time, and finished after that substantial fashion intended to last for ages, so that to-day the massive walls are as strong as when first put up.

The chancel was the east end of the nave walled off, eighteen by nine feet in size. The pulpit, wine-glass in shape, with its handsome sounding-board above, was set against the sink-wall about the middle, and the rest of the nave was given up to pews. Two aisles admitted the people, one from the tower door, five or six feet wide, and the other from a wide, square door in the south wall, the two forming a T.

On the other side of the chancel were two pews—one for the warden and the other for the parson's family. Immediately over the entrance from the tower there stretched across the church a gallery, approached by steps from the church and through which the parson made his way from the vestry-room in the second story of the tower.

The chancel (east) window is eighteen by twelve feet in size, square at the bottom and a quarter circle in shape at the top. It is composed of seventeen small windows, ranging in size from five by two feet to two by one feet.

The orientation is perfect, the rising sun shooting his first rays directly through it. Each side of the church contains four double-lancet windows, eight by six feet in size, and the second story of the tower (vestry-room) is lighted by three like-shaped windows about six by four feet. The vestibule in the tower has an elliptical window in each side about thirty by twenty-four inches in dimensions, and the third story has four windows shaped much like the chancel window. The dividing mullions are all of ornamental brick.

The church having been abandoned as a house of worship in 1836 in the year 1885 Rev. David Barr, then rector of the church at Smithville, Va., and now assistant rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., undertook the work of having the old church put in perfect and complete order. Since then he has devoted much time to his labor of love and with great success. At this time there is lacking only about one thousand dollars to finish the work.

In the restoration of twelve of the small windows composing the east window the nave windows and vestry-room windows are to be memorials. In the east window will be one each to Washington (the only memorial window to him in the United States); Lee Bridges, the builder of the church; Rev. Mr. Hubbard, the last colonial parson of the church (up to 1802, when he died); Bishops Madison, Moore, Meade and Johns, Virginia's four deceased chief pastors; Sir Walter Raleigh, Captain John Smith, John Rolfe, husband of Pocahontas, and Rev. Dr. Blair, founder of William and Mary College.

The southeast corner window in the nave will be a memorial of Pocahontas, provided principally by her descendants, and the two opposite ones are memorials of Parsons Hunt and Whitaker, first and second chaplains with Captain John Smith in the Virginia colony. Whitaker baptized Pocahontas and married her to Rolfe.

The first roof was put on the church in 1633, the second in 1737, the third about 1821 and the present one in 1887.

The contributions for the work, more than four hundred in number, have come in sums from one cent (the first by a little Virginia girl) up to two hundred dollars by a Californian, and have been made by rich and poor, the eminent and the lowly, white and colored, Episcopalians, Roman Catholics, Presbyterians, Methodists, Baptists and Unitarians. At an early day it is expected that the work will be completed and the "Old Brick Church" again open for the service of God as in days past.

A Tempest in a Teapot.

The true origin of the phrase "A tempest in a teapot" is probably very ancient, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. Cicero quotes a similar phrase, as though well known in his time: "He raised a tempest in a ladle, as the saying is." An author of the third century makes one famous musician ridicule another who had attempted to imitate a storm at sea in one of his musical compositions with the expression: "I have seen a greater tempest in a boiling pot." The French form of the phrase (a tempest in a glass of water) was applied to the famous insurrectionary movement in the republic of Geneva in the seventeenth century. Historians generally ascribe this application of the phrase to Paul, then Grand Duke of Russia; others say that the Austrian Duke Leopold originated it. The English phrase is evidently taken from the French, the word "teapot" being used for the sake of alliteration.

I was suffering for 18 years from a nervous disease more or less; tried everything I heard of, spared neither time nor money for get medicine, but none had the desired effect, until Rev. 110 MINERS KILLED

Wholesale Death in a Pennsylvania Coke Mine.

OVER SIXTY BODIES RECOVERED.

Only One Person Who Saw the Accident Alive to Tell the Tale.

CROWDS AROUND THE FIERY TOMB.

Those Who Were Not Killed by the Explosion Died from Poisonous Gas—Bodies Mutilated and Blackened by the Flame—An Army of Rescuers at Work—One Order for Eighty Coffins—An Appeal for Help Issued.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., Jan. 28.—Fully 110 miners were suffocated by the gas which exploded during the morning in the Mammoth shaft of the H. C. Frick Coke Company. Sixty bodies have been recovered, but last night the mine caught fire, and the horrors of cremation may be added to those of suffocation. The frightful loss of life in the Dunbar disaster has been more than overshadowed by the destruction wrought by this accident.

Sixty Bodies Recovered.

The explosion occurred shortly after 9 o'clock, and it is supposed was the result of the ignition of a miner's oil lamp. The afterdamp which followed the firedamp explosion suffocated nearly every workman. The persons not killed are in such a critical condition that their deaths are momentarily expected. The fire which broke out after the explosion was soon extinguished by the immense fans which were put in operation. As soon as the gas had been driven from the pit the work of rescuing the entombed miners was begun and 59 bodies have been recovered.

Think All Were Killed.

One hundred and ten men were employed in that part of the mine in which the explosion occurred, and not one was left to tell the story of the disaster. Not more than 50 men were killed by the explosion. The others were killed by the after damp, and, while some of the bodies are horribly torn, burned and mutilated, others were found with their teeth clinched on the iron.

Mine Boss Eaton, who escaped about one minute before the fatal explosion, is the only individual remaining to relate the story.

Only One Man Escaped.

John Boles, who has a brother in the fatal shaft, relates the following story: "About 9 o'clock we heard a loud report in the direction of the shaft. We immediately started for the opening, only to find a suffocating volume of smoke and gas gushing therefrom, and at once knew what was wrong. We began the work of subduing the flames and clearing the shaft of gas. This we accomplished by starting the large fans. I am fully convinced that every man who was in the shaft at the time was killed, either by falling timbers or by the afterdamp."

Women Rush to the Mine.

When the news of the explosion was carried to the miners' families in the little houses dotted on the hillsides, mothers, wives, sisters, daughters and sweethearts rushed to the shaft. But the story was soon told. "All the men in flats Nos. 2, 3 and 4 are dead. As fast as we we get their bodies and they are identified and fixed for burial we will send them home." A sob could be heard here and there, and many walked away with bowed heads. The women bore the news heroically.

Everybody Awe-Stricken.

Language is too weak to describe the scenes at the mines. The news spread throughout the entire coke region with great rapidity, and everybody was awe-stricken. The coffins have already been ordered for 80 persons from Mount Pleasant undertakers, and it is understood that the Frick Company, the owners of the plant, will bear the expenses of the same.

Rescuers at Work.

As soon as the mine experts had arrived a systematic plan for the recovery bodies was agreed upon. The first party went down the shaft to flat No. 4. Three hundred feet from the shaft they found a pile of earth and human bodies which blocked further progress. This was tunnelled through, and the party turned off at right angles along the haulage road, at the extremity of this there was a man with his head blown off.

Overcome by Gas.

At this point several of the party, among them Superintendents Ramsey and Laird, were overcome by the afterdamp and had to be carried back to purer air. In the haulage roads of flat No. 4, 35 bodies were found, and 15 were counted in one heap in flat No. 2.

Fighting Fire.

Once or twice fires were discovered where the explosion had ignited small heaps of dry coal dust. Large quantities of water were turned on the flames, and after several hours of hard work they were extinguished. Then a bucket brigade was organized. Every little spark was suppressed before it could spring into a flame.

An Appeal for Aid

Master Workman Wise has issued the following to the workmen of the coke region: "The sad news of a disastrous explosion at the Mammoth mines has just reached me, and I fear many families have been left destitute. I therefore appeal to you to promptly render what aid you can to assist the families of your brethren who have been killed."

Mr. Frick Filled With Consternation.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 28.—The news of the explosion was received by Chas. C. Frick in this city. He was filled with consternation at the extent of the disaster, and said: "We have never had an accident like this in any of our mines. The mammoth plant was thought to be in the safest of hands, when we gave it in charge of Mine Inspector Fred Keighley. No expense has been spared to make our mines as safe as possible."

Connecticut's Political Trouble.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 28.—From present indications the controversy over the State officers will reach some sort of a settlement this week or next.

ATTACKED BY FOOTPADS.

A Young New Jersey Woman's Escort Clubbed and Robbed.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 28.—James Hanse and Miss Millard, of Bayonne, while on their way to the Elizabethport station at 4 a. m., after spending the night at the ball of the Parnell Drum Corps, were attacked by footpads, who knocked Hanse down with a blow of a club, which stunned him, and rifled his pockets of $16.75, and also took a gold ring from his finger and a gold scarfpin out of his necktie. Another of the gang plundered Miss Millard of whatever valuables he saw on her person.

The young woman was terribly frightened, but was afraid to scream, as the man who had hold of her threatened to choke her if she did. The men disappeared across the fields in the darkness.

"Robert Ray Hamilton is alive and is now living in Sydney, N. S. W., where he has begun life over again under an assumed name.

"This statement was made yesterday to a Times reporter by an intimate friend of Mr. Hamilton and the truth of it was vouched for by several letters which he had received from the latter since his alleged death."

A Long Strike Settled.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 28.—The long and hotly contested strike of the employes of the P. Cox Shoe Company, which has been on since May, 1890, has come to an end. By the terms of the settlement the company is to retain all the non-union employes at present in its service, but agrees to give the preference to the ex-strikers in filling all vacancies that may occur. None of the old hands have as yet returned to work, but all present vacancies will be filled from their numbers.

It is estimated that there are 90,000,000 tons of marketable coal in the tract.

THE SEAL QUESTION

Attorney-General Miller's Answer to Canada's Petition.

IT IS A POLITICAL PROBLEM.

The United States Supreme Court Has No Power in the Matter.

Lawyer Choate Arguing for Great Britain To-Day—An Order of Business Arranged by the Senate Committee—A Committee Appointed to Decide Tammany's Claim. Will Send a Man-of-War to Chili.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Attorney-General Miller has presented his answer in the Supreme Court to the motion for leave to file a petition for a writ of prohibition to annul the proceedings of the Sitka, Alaska, court in the case of schooner Sayward, seized by the Rush in the summer of 1897, for catching seals in Alaskan waters.

The Attorney-General in his argument held that, conceding all the facts averred in the petition, the question of the jurisdiction of the Alaskan court depends upon the extent of the Dominion of the United States in Behring Sea. This, he maintained, is a political question to be decided by the political department of the government—the executive and Congress, both of which have decided against petitioners' contention, and this decision, he held, must be conclusive upon the judiciary.

No consideration whatever, the Attorney-General said, had been given in his answer to the question of international law which is now and has been for the past six years the subject of diplomatic correspondence between Great Britain and the United States, with reference to the right of this country to assert a territorial jurisdiction in Behring Sea to the extent of protecting its seal fisheries beyond the three-mile limit ordinarily fixed as the boundary of territorial jurisdiction of countries bordering on the sea. Such a question the Attorney-General respectfully insisted is not within the cognisance of the Supreme Court, and he therefore did not discuss it.

Mr. Calderon Carlisle, defender of Great Britain's claims, insisted that the real question was not whether the judiciary will assume to overrule the Executive and Congress in a position which they have taken against Great Britain, but whether the judiciary can avoid construing, in a case involving private rights, acts of Congress and a treaty, which are all parts of the supreme law of the land, and which leave to its construction the true meaning of the words, "Dominion of the United States in Bearing Sea."

Mr. Choate followed in an elaborate argument, and is still talking.

THE SENATE PROGRAMME.

An Order of Business Laid Out by the Republican Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The Republican Senatorial Caucus Committee on Order of Business has agreed to recommend to their colleagues that after the Apportionment bill is acted upon, the Eight-hour bills and the Copyright bill be taken up in order. This arrangement is subject to possible disturbance by the Appropriations Committee, which has already given notice, through Chairman Allison, to call up an Appropriation bill this week.

The Caucus Committee also disposed of other pending measures of public interest in this order:

After the Copyright bill is to follow the Indian Depredation bill, the Paddock Pure Food bill and the Nicaragua Canal bill, reported by the Committee on Foreign Relations, in the order above stated. As the Senate will meet hereafter at 11 o'clock, instead of noon, as at present, and the morning business will be limited to one hour, it is the expectation of the committee that rapid progress will be made in the consideration of the measures selected by them. Meanwhile, individual Senators are to be allowed to call up measures not included in the above list in the morning hour, and it is believed that some advancement of business will result from the use of this privilege.

LAWMAKING AT ALBANY.

The New York Alliance Asks for an Excise Commission of Two.

ALBANY, Jan. 28.—Senator Roesch introduced a new excise bill at the request of the New York Alliance. It provides that ten commissioners shall be appointed by the Governor by and with the advice of the Senate. Five are not to be connected with any liquor interest, two are to be Republicans, two Democrats and one a Prohibitionist. The committee is to have power to sit any where in the State, giving notice to the people through the papers. The existing excise laws are to be entirely abolished and the commission's expenses are limited to $35,000.

The Senate passed the following bills: Regulating the work of the new Normal School at New Paltz; providing for electing town inspectors on general ticket, and providing for only three inspectors instead of five; reapportioning unexpended balance for building berme wall along Erie canal at Herkimer.

The Assembly Committee of Judiciary will report favorably the McManus bill exempting bank officers from jury duty.

Senator Saxton's bill extending time of ballot reform law in villages, towns, etc., was reported adversely.

WANTED TO RIDE FREE.

A Woman Argues Her Case Before the Supreme Court.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—A novel question of law, presented by the fair client in person to the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts, was the central figure in the court house during the day.

In 1853, the Boston & Providence Railroad Company took land of John C. Dodge, of Attleboro, the directors in 1837 voting to accept the deed on the condition of a free ticket to John C. Dodge and his family.

Dodge left the State in 1880, dying in Brooklyn in 1866. Caroline C. Dodge is a granddaughter of John C. Dodge, and claims the right to ride free on the railroad. She argued the case in person, and the judges took the matter under consideration.

Convention of Press Clubs.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 28.—The first international convention of press clubs is now in session here. The meeting is held in the Select Council Chamber, and prominent journalists from all over the country are present. The mayor delivered an address of welcome. The following were elected permanent officers: President, Foster S. Coates, New York; first vice-president, J. Anderson Boyd, Toronto; second vice-president, W. B. Western, Grand Rapids, Mich.; secretary, Mrs. Peake, Cleveland, Ohio. It is probable that an international association of press clubs will be the outcome of the convention.

The King Wants a Guillotine.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The King of Dahomey has applied to the French authorities at Kotonou for a guillotine, which he proposes to set up in his capital, Abomey, for the more expeditious slaughter of those who fall under his displeasure. It appears that the king, who was educated in France, was personally impressed while there with what he heard of the guillotine, and has since concluded to introduce it in his dominions. The French hesitate to comply with the request, on the ground of the uses to which the instrument would be put in the slaughter of innocent victims.

Battle Reported With Chilian Rebels.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 28.—The rebellion in Chili is having so disastrous an effect upon the property of foreign residents that the various diplomatic representatives of foreign nations at Santiago de Chili have threatened to immediately leave the capital and embark on the war vessels of different nationalities now lying off the coast of Chili, unless the conflict is brought to a speedy termination. The latest news from the seat of war is that the insurgents have blockaded the port of Tongoy and a battle has been fought near that place.

Ex-Senator Wadleigh's Funeral.

STOPPED THE PLAY

Sardou's "Thermidor" Creates Trouble in Paris.

THE GOVERNMENT INTERFERES.

Republicans Condemned the Play on Account of Its Politics.

Masked Strikers in Scotland Create a Riot—Justice Rendered to Bradlaugh by the House of Commons—Rumors of Gladstone's Resignation—No More Sunday Meetings in Ireland.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—The disturbances at the performance of "Thermidor" were renewed last evening. Despite the disappointment caused by change of programme a large crowd packed the theatre, and with the rising of the curtain loud shouts arose: "Thermidor! Bas Thermidor!"

The tumult increasing the younger Coquelin announced that the performance would not proceed, and the money would be returned. The audience then dispersed in much excitement, and the police prevented a gathering outside.

"Thermidor" possesses strong dramatic interest, centering on the refusal of Fabienne to take the advice of her lover, Martial, and declare herself a mother, in order to escape being guillotined, whereupon Martial commits suicide by shooting himself.

The riotous auditors were students, headed by the Editor of the Socialist newspaper, Bataille. The Republican newspapers unite in a chorus of condemnation of the play.

M. Pichon will ask the Chamber of Deputies to suppress "Thermidor," on the ground that it is liable to lead to rioting. M. Reinach will oppose the motion, on the ground that the suppression of the play would be a blow at the liberty of the drama, as well as an attack upon art.

A later dispatch says Sardou's "Thermidor" was stopped by the Ministry. The management of the theatre intended to make liberal excisions in order to avert this, but the radical demand for its total suppression prevailed and prevented this.

BRADLAUGH'S VICTORY.

The House of Commons Rescinds a Vote Passed Several Years Ago.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—In the House of Commons, Mr. William Alexander Hunter, M. P. for Aberdeen, Scotland, moved that the resolution passed in the House in June, 1880, forbidding Charles Bradlaugh, M. P. for Northampton, to take the oath or to affirm, be expunged from the records of Parliament, as subversive of the rights of electors.

The Solicitor-General, Sir Edward Clarke, opposed the motion, saying that the record was historical, and could not be effaced.

Mr. Gladstone arose amid cheers to support the motion. The resolution forbidding Mr. Bradlaugh to swear or affirm was, he said, in excess of the jurisdiction of the House, and it was one of the highest and most sacred of duties to see that a measure of such a character on the rights of a constituency should be recalled and the wrong undone. (Cheers.) He would suggest, as acceptable to everybody, that the motion be adopted, with the omission of the words, "subversive to the rights of the electors."

Sir Stafford Northcote said that the motion, as amended in accordance with Mr. Gladstone's suggestion, had his cordial support. He desired also to express his regret for Mr. Bradlaugh's serious illness.

Mr. Hunter accepted the amendment, and the motion was adopted, amid hearty cheers.

RIOTING IN SCOTLAND.

Masked Strikers Attack a Gang of Non-Union Workmen.

GLASGOW, Jan. 28.—A mob of masked strikers, armed with sticks and stones, attacked and severely beat a gang of men who were at work in and near the locomotive shed of the Caledonian Railroad at Strathaven. The rioters broke a number of windows, drove the non-union workmen away, and then ran one of the engines into a turntable pit and derailed another locomotive.

At Wemyss Bay the strikers have gathered in the neighborhood of the railroad bridges over the Firth of Forth, from which points of vantage they bombard with stones the engineers and firemen of the passenger trains, some of whom have been injured.

Below Greenock the railroad tracks were found to have been smeared over with soft soap, rendering impossible the passage of trains until the rails had been washed.

The Kaiser's Happy Birthday.

BERLIN, Jan. 28.—The Kaiser passed an unhappy birthday, notwithstanding the brilliant court reception. Prince William, the heir to the throne, is confined to his bed by a severe cold incurred by going out rather carelessly during the cold weather. The Kaiser has been driving him around with him on his surprise visits to the various garrisons, and, while the boy has been edified in a military way, he is in a bad way physically, and the Kaiser spent a good part of the day at the little fellow's bedside. The court is in mourning for Prince Baudoin, so that altogether affairs at the palace were gloomy, presenting a marked contrast to the grand and costly spectacular display of a year ago.

Rumor that Gladstone Will Resign.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—The Chester Courant claims that it has authority for stating that Mr. Gladstone is about to resign the leadership of the Liberal party. This statement was shown to Mr. Gladstone, while he was dining with Sir William Harcourt and other colleagues. He declined either to confirm or deny the rumor.

THE GREAT WORK BEGUN.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—At last real work on the World's Fair has begun, and from this time on the labor of construction will proceed with increased energy.

That the people of Chicago are fully awake to the importance of the work they have undertaken, and are in deep sympathy with everything pertaining to it, was amply demonstrated when the first sod of earth was turned.

Long before 7 a. m. crowds of people among whom there were many ladies began moving in the direction of Michigan avenue. They congregated at a spot just one block below the Auditorium. Fully 5,000 people were on the spot, and about as many more witnessed the animated scene from the windows of the Auditorium, the Richilieu and other hotels and apartment houses in the neighborhood.

Promptly at 7 o'clock one of the workmen, amid a hearty cheer from the crowd, plunged a shining new spade into the ground and turned up a spadeful of earth. And thus began the first practical work of the World's Fair.

A big crowd of workmen then went to work with a will, and in a short time a hole of considerable size made its appearance. People on the incoming trains stood on the car platforms or crowded to the windows to witness the sight.

The ground on which operations were commenced is the site for the headquarters of the chief of construction. It will be an unpretentious structure and will cost $10,000.

A dispatch from Rome to a Paris paper states that the Pope has created Cardinal Lavigerie, a patriarch of the highest rank, a position in the church which stands next to the Papacy.

The creditors of the defunct banking firm of Delamater & Co., of Meadville, Pa., have agreed to accept the firm's offer to settle at 50 cents on the dollar. Better security was demanded and secured.

A private cablegram received in Philadelphia announces the death at Cologne yesterday of Dr. Nicholas August Otto, the inventor of the Otto gas engine. Death resulted from heart failure.

Evan Lewis threw Hugh Leonard three times in forty minutes at the Gaiety Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., catch-as-catch-can, straight hold barred. The agreement was to throw Leonard three times in an hour or forfeit $200.

The Spinners' Union of New Bedford, Mass., decided by a vote of 58 to 1 that the spinners of the Wamsutta mills, Nos. 4, 5 and 6, should go out with the spinners of Nos. 1, 2 and 3, who were locked out Monday for refusing to work overtime. There will now be 110 spinners and half as many doffers and back-boys on strike.

Another claimant for a large share in the $6,000,000 left by the New York city leather merchant, D. B. Fayerweather, chiefly to his executors and colleges, has appeared in the person of Mary W. Achter. She is a niece of decedent and was to receive $20,000. When she signed the consent she said she did not have a proper understanding of her rights.

THE DAILY PRESS.

W. L. & A. L. FORCE, Publishers and Proprietors.

J. A. DEMAREST, Managing Editor.

BY THE WAY.

—How many of the telegraph poles still standing are sound at the core?

—Lizzie Melvin was fined $10 last night for intoxication and disorderly conduct on Cottage place.

—No need to tell about the "old-fashioned winters;" the new kind has all the emphasis necessary.

—Several hackmen have been fined again for leaving their horses' heads in order to solicit custom

—The annual meeting of the Grocers Protective Association of this city, will be held to-morrow evening.

—2,139 copies of THE PRESS of yesterday, containing the Rev. Mr. Richards sermon on Jezebel, were printed and sold.

—As to-morrow is the Day of Prayer for Colleges, a meeting led by W. D. Murray will be held at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, at 8 P. M.

—There will be a business meeting of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society, to-morrow afternoon, at three o'clock in the parlor of Reform Hall.

—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Congregational church, will hold its monthly meeting to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock in the church parlors.

—There will be a meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms to-morrow afternoon as usual, at 3:30 o'clock. Mrs. A. M. Powell will deliver an address on Social Purity.

—Street Commissioner Meeker made a gang of sections hands leave their work on the railroad, yesterday, and dig a trench under the sidewalk East of the Park avenue bridge so that the water from the embankment would run under instead of over the flagging.

—Mr. Stanley's popularity as a lecturer is decidedly on the wane. In Brooklyn recently he talked to a small audience in a large hall. In Paterson the management lost money. Plainfield refused him altogether. But why should he draw crowded houses when he simply repeats what has been said in print?

—More people pass under the dilapidated wooden awning at the corner of Park and North avenue, than pass anywhere else in the whole city. And all day long for two days now, that awning has dripped streams of dirty water over the bonnets and wraps of scores of women and down the necks of hundreds of men.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Wm. F. Conroy, of LaGrande avenue, is seriously ill and much anxiety is felt by his family and physicians.

A young son of George T. Rogers, of Rock View avenue, was so unfortunate as to suffer a compound fracture of the leg while coasting last Monday morning.

Ex-Councilman Wm. H. Voorhees, now Vice President and Manager of the Frazer Tablet Triturate M'f'g Co., of New York, was visiting old friends in Plainfield, last evening.

Ex-Mayor Male is very ill. Inflammation of the bowels has set in and his condition is dangerous. His only near relative, a nephew, was sent for and arrived from Canada yesterday.

Letters received from E. P. Thorn to friends in this city, state that he is delighted with the orange groves of Florida, and is enjoying himself immensely. He expects to return by Feb. 1.

John L. Duckworth, one of the best known machinists in town, and an employe at the Potter Press Works, died of pneumonia yesterday. He was taken ill on Sunday. He leaves two orphaned children. His wife died about two years ago.

The marriage of Miss Clara Walton Corlies and Henry Coolidge Adams, will take place at the home of the bride's mother, "Roadending," Saturday afternoon of next week at one o'clock. Because of the prominence of all parties in Plainfield society, this event is the main matter of expectation in higher circles, just now.

Clarence W. Bowen, brother of Henry E. Bowen of this city, and Secretary of the Committee on the Centennial of Washington's Inauguration, 251 Broadway, New York, desires information regarding the portraits of Jonathan Elmer and Thomas Sinnickson, members of congress from New Jersey. These portraits, for the Memorial Volume, are particularly desired, to complete the list of portraits of the New Jersey delegation in Congress at the time of Washington's Inauguration.

Plainfield Spurs on Elizabeth.

A number of Plainfielders attended a meeting at Elizabeth Monday evening to perfect plans for the organization of a Young Men's Christian Association in that city. W. D. Murray, President of the Plainfield Association, in an earnest speech told of the great work the institution was doing in various places, showed the necessity for having a branch of the society at the county seat, and depicted the advantages that would accrue. Other able speeches were made by representatives from Newark and New Brunswick. One hundred and thirty young men have already expressed a desire to join the proposed Association.

A CHARMING SOCIAL EVENT.

Everything Ready for the Glee Club Concert at The Casino.

At The Casino, next week Tuesday, at 8:15 P. M., will be given a most delightful concert by the Elizabeth Glee Club, under the patronage of the following Plainfield ladies:

LIST OF PATRONESSES:

Mrs. O. T. Waring.

The Club will be assisted by Mrs. Gerrit Smith, soprano, Miss Lillian Parsloe, violinist, and George G. Dalsnd, accompanist. Tickets, $1 each, may be procured only from the Patronesses. Charles J. Fisk, of West Seventh street, has kindly consented to act as Treasurer for the occasion.

From the musical critic of the New York World the Club has already been accorded the following highly complimentary notice:

"The second subscription concert of the Elizabeth Glee Club took place at the Armory last evening, and brought out the best society people of Elizabeth, besides a number of musicians from the neighboring cities and New York. The work of the club was very highly commended. The most noteworthy numbers on the programme were the Pilgrim's chorus from "Tanphauser" which was rendered with admirable breadth of phrasing and solidity of attack. Siderberg's song "The Bird" included a delightful solo by James F. Fisher, which the full chorus imbellished with a humming accompaniment following him with orchestral precision. The flowing measures of Schultz's "Forrest Harps" which abounds in abrupt changes of rhythm, were rendered with remarkable fidelity to the aeolian effects with which it is replete, and was most especially noticeable for the gliding from one tone to another by the ensemble in a pianissimo passage with a perfect portamento di voce effect, which many theoretical musicians have declared to be a impossible achievement in choral work. Ernest Felix Potter wielded the baton in an effective manner, and the result of his leadership was conspicuously apparent throughout."

That the Plainfield concert will merit fully as much praise no one doubts. It will be made a charming social event.

A Special Committee on the Keys Case.

Mr. Lane, the new member from Union, has introduced a bill in the New Jersey House which increases the salaries of the law judges throughout the State. In the first-class counties, which are Hudson and Essex, the increase is $500 a year, and in the second-class counties $1,000. It is thought likely that this is preliminary to abolishing the expense of the lay-judge system.

The Election Committee of the Senate, which is the huge joke perpetrated by President Adrain, held its first meeting yesterday morning for the purpose of organization. Mr. Keys whose seat is contested, said he would have to resign from the Committee if his case was to be considered. The Committee agreed that they would ask the Senate to relieve them of the consideration of Mr. Key's case, for they desired him to retain his position. The Keys case will be referred to a special committee.

Despoiling Their Best Friend.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Sunday, Feb. 1, is the date fixed for a general meeting, at Trenton, of the Industrial Senate of this State. This Industrial Senate is intended to secure the unification of the single tax clubs, farmers' political leagues and alliances; in short, all kinds of men and clubs that need legislation. There may be, and probably are, many good things proposed by different organizations in the State, but if they can't choose any other day than Sunday to organize and unify and transact their business, they would much better let it all alone. Liquor dealers' associations and anarchist clubs meet on Sunday, but the best friend of the workingmen and farmer is the quiet, undisturbed Sunday. And any political movement organized on that day ought to be frowned down at once.

A Band of Brave Fellows.

The sad accident that occurred at the fire in Jersey City last Saturday, by which the chief of the fire department and another man were crushed to death under falling walls, recalls the perils that firemen risk whenever they answer a call to duty. Plainfield's firemen are frequently called on to hazard their lives for the property and lives of others, and right nobly do they fulfill all the heroic duties that are expected of them.

There is one thing, the price of which is not affected by the McKinley Bill. High tariff or low tariff, free trade or any other trade, Hires' Cough Cure costs 25 cents the world over. Surely cheap enough.

THE HOSPITAL SURGEON'S EVIDENCE.

He says it Was Not Aaron Kline but Fernand Kline.

COOK COUNTY HOSPITAL, CHICAGO.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—I have seen the report relating to Frank Kline in the Chicago Evening News of Jan. 24, under the heading "Alive but in the Morgue," in which I am represented as making certain statements to a reporter of that paper. The interview published is not true. A reporter called on me and in reference to a report of a man who had been brought to this hospital unconscious, and I made the statement that the man's name was Ferdinand Kline and not Frank Kline and that he was a solicitor of advertisements for the New York Trade Journal. The man after he recovered consciousness told that he had been drugged. I have to-day seen Mr. Aaron V. Kline and he is not the man nor does he in any way resemble him.

I publish this in justice to Mr. Kline to whom I think a gross injustice has been done.

Do Not Miss Seeing This Charming Little Actress.

The announcement that little Elsie Leslie will appear at Music Hall, next Monday night, naturally gives rise to the question as to whether the prevailing child actress is capable of expressing emotion. It may be answered emphatically in the negative when the child only repeats, parrot-like, the words that have been drilled into her; but "yes" when she is capable of repeating those words with a knowledge of their meaning, and even of suggesting accompanying business to further accentuate the value of the lines as is the case with little Elsie. One cannot see her in "Prince and Pauper" without recognizing that she has, in a surprisingly perfect degree, considering her tender years, the quality of emotion. It will become commanding in time, but that it reaches the heart now is evidence that it is there.

While the child-drama is getting to be somewhat of a nuisance and is certainly being overdone, yet there comes an oasis in the desert of mediocrity now and then, and Elsie Leslie being such it is only fair to give her a place in the list of emotional actors in embryo. Although it is undoubtedly true that the drift of the stage is and has been in the direction of farce, comedy and extravaganza, it is equally true that the emotional drama must for many years retain its hold upon the popular heart. This cannot fail to be so, because by its very nature it appeals to the sentiments of which that heart is capable. And so the little child at whom you gaze in wonder and admiration as a present phenomenon, may easily be the talented actress who will sway you with her depiction of life's joys and sorrows in the future. Has her astute manager, Daniel Frohman, ever thought of her as a probable emotional lead for his New York Lyceum Theatre in about ten years from now?

A Hall to be Proud of.

Anything that has been published in THE PRESS because of misplaced confidence in our Scotch Plains correspondent, to the effect that Excelsior Hall of that place is not a well heated, well ventilated and altogether desirable and comfortable place of entertainment, is certainly more than a misstatement—it is an untruth. The members of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company besides being brave firemen are the representative citizens and business men of the town, and they keep their Hall in the best of order and condition.

Saturday Half-Holidays.

A movement is on foot in various New Jersey cities to urge the State Legislature to pass this Winter a Saturday Half-Holiday bill. Many bank and insurance clerks and hundreds of employes of mercantile houses have began the agitation. Bills of a similar character were introduced into the Legislatures of previous years, but they failed to become laws. The agitators believe that this is the year and now the time to secure such a law as they desire.

They Still Love to Flock to the Crescent.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

It looks just now as if the old craze for roller skating is to be revived. Elizabeth's two rinks are no more; that is, one of them has been remodeled into a cosy little opera house, while the other has been used for various purposes. Many from this city go to Plainfield and skate at The Crescent, where a glide over the well-waxed floor is much enjoyed.

Eight Hours Work Saturdays.

At a regular meeting of Local Union No. 155, of the Carpenters and Joiners of America, held Jan. 27, it was decided to have eight hours for a full day's work on Saturday, beginning the first Saturday in May.

A Vacant Pulpit.

The Rev. Dr. Mason preached at the Dunellen Presbyterian church, Sunday morning and evening. The Rev. W. C. Stinson, the former pastor, having accepted a call to take charge of a church in the West, the Dunellen pulpit was declared vacant by Dr. Mason.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

Only a French Canard.

The Elizabeth Herald remarks: "Plainfield ducks are hard to kill. One was found the other day frozen fast in the ice of a pond hole. It was alive when discovered. Such a canard is worth newspaper attention." The story of the duck was a fact—another illustration of the old adage that truth is stranger than fiction.

A Plainfield Workman Hurt.

R. F. Hazard, a carpenter well known in Plainfield, where he has been employed at various times, had a bad fall from a building in Orange, a few days ago. Besides fracturing a collar-bone he received severe internal injuries. He is one of the workmen who helped to build the new Crescent Avenue chapel.

Not the Same.

The Con. Connolly who was killed by an explosion at Carmel, N. Y., fortunately proves not to have been Plainfield's Con. Connolly as was first reported. The Plainfield Connolly is now at work on the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

—All the standard brands of bleached and unbleached muslins and sheetings, are now selling at special low prices at Edsall's for this week.

—There will be a different programme of entertainment for each evening during the progress of the big fair the Crescent League is to hold in its new clubhouse next week. On Saturday evening the New York banjo club of 7th Regiment boys, will be there.

To Send a Man-of-War to Chili.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—State Department officials say they have received no news for several days of the revolution now in progress in Chili. The Navy Department, however, in view of the unsettled condition of affairs, has decided to send a man-of-war to the South Pacific coast, but the vessel is not determined upon. It will probably be the Swatara.

To Decide Tammany's Claim.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—The House Census Committee has referred the papers in the arguments in Tammany's demand for a recount of New York city to a subcommittee consisting of Messrs. Sherman of New York, Frank of Missouri and Washington of Tennessee.

Rewarded for Bravery.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Secretary Windom sent a gold medal to Mr. Daniel J. Reagan, of Boston, in recognition of his bravery in saving Mr. Theodore Wuestman from drowning in Boston harbor July 4, 1890.

Gen. Miles and His Indians.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28.—The special train bearing Gen. Miles and staff, with two coaches full of Indians and a detachment of the 6th Cavalry, reached here from Rushville, Neb., at a late hour last night. The three chiefs who inaugurated the ghost dancing craze among the Sioux, Kicking Bear, Short Bull and Scatter Brain, with 22 young warriors, will be confined at Fort Sheridan. The Indians who are to pay a visit to the President will go direct to Washington.

Ingalls Defeated by a Farmer.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 28.—The separate ballot in the Legislature for United States Senator to succeed Mr. Ingalls resulted: House—Pfeffer, 96; Ingalls, 23; C. W. Blair, 5. Senate—Ingalls, 25; Pfeffer, 2. On joint ballot 85 votes are necessary to elect. Pfeffer is the Farmers' Alliance candidate.

No More Sunday Meetings.

DUBLIN, Jan. 28.—Mr. Parnell has intimated that Mr. McCarthy has agreed, upon the advice of Mr. O'Brien, that the two sections of the Irish party shall, for the present, hold no more Sunday meetings in Ireland.

Mrs. O'Shea Very Ill.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—Mrs. O'Shea is very ill, in consequence of which the order of the court giving the custody of the children to Capt. O'Shea has not been carried out.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

To My Friends and People of Plainfield.

I have this day accepted very favorable terms from my present employer, Mr. J. F. MacDonald, grocer, and wish to notify my friends of the fact, and to solicit a share of their patronage, to which I will give my personal attention.

Yours truly,
E. H. BIRD.

CHAUNCEY B. RIPLEY'S LATEST.

TWO STATE ROADS TO COST $3,000,000.

They Will Be Continuous Boulevards From Newark to Camden and From Cape May to Sussex County, at a Cost of Only Two Dollars a Head.

At the annual meeting of the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, at the State House, Trenton, to-day, Chauncey B. Ripley, LL. D., delivered the following address in which is set forth a project of interest to every resident of New Jersey. Mr. Ripley speaks for himself as below, so THE PRESS is only called upon to say in this connection that it is heartily in favor of the scheme and will do all in its power to bring success. Is there one of our contemporaries who will not?

Mr. President and Members of the Board:

A good road is a road available for all sorts of travel and at every season of the year. Such roads, our best citizens are demanding; not only in this and adjoining States, but in nearly every other State within our national domain. This is no wonder; for, it is an adage of ancient origin, and general in its application, that the civilization of a country is indicated by the character and condition of its public roads. If this be so, if the above proposition is sound, then the reverse of it ought to be, true also; that is to say: the character and condition of the public roads of a country or locality indicate the degree of its civilization.

* * * * *

Mr. President: These are indeed, Pentecostal times, in the interest of our public thoroughfares. The day of Pentecost has fully come to us, and we are all of one accord in the cause of improved public roads. The rushing mighty wind so pervades the entire country, that the conversion of 3,000 in one day almost anywhere, would not amaze us, especially in the State of New Jersey.

Referring again to the excellent message of Governor Abbett, (I call it His Excellency's Bible, because, it is all there, and because, it is all so orthodox) we find this passage:

"I recommend the legislature to provide for the building and maintaining of good roads, under a thorough and efficient system. Public highways are for the benefit, not only of local communities, but of the entire public, and the State might reasonably assist localities, which, by their action, show a desire to secure such advantages."

This recommendation and declaration of the Governor of our State, is so in harmony with the spirit of the times, so completely in accord with my own views and the lessons I have learned from a service of a quarter of a century in the study and practice of roadmaking, that I submit the passage taken from his message and also the passages quoted from the messages of the Governor of the State of New York (ante pp. 6 & 7) as the text and compend of that which I advocate and urge upon the State Board of Agriculture, today.

I need not remind you, Gentlemen of the Board, that the Agricultural interests of a state, of a nation and of the world, are its greatest interests. Nor yet, need I urge before you, that the interests of this great industry are in peril, here, in New Jersey, as well as in every other state of the Union. That these interests need some new impetus, some revival, much and immediate encouragement, is far better known to you, who have official supervision of all the farming interests of the state, than to me, necessarily interested only in what I cultivate myself. That there is a crisis upon us; that it is well nigh at its height; that we farmers in New Jersey must, as is now so common with farmers in the New England States, utterly abandon our farms, or speedily avail ourselves of some resuscitating remedy, is manifest to every one who has practical knowledge of the subject.

That remedy, Mr. President, is to be found in the improvement of our public roads; and the time for us to avail ourselves of it, is now.

There is a tide in the affairs of men,
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.

The necessity exists—and it is a desperate necessity. The people of our State are now inspired by the mighty Pentecostal wave; it has already reached both houses of our legislature; and that the Governor himself has also inhaled it, appears from the extract just read from his annual message.

Let the State then, build or put in order, two good carriage roads: one extending from the most southerly point of Cape May county to the most northerly point of Sussex county; the other, crossing the State, say from Newark to Camden. Thus opening up the State, centrally, from North to South and from East to West, its entire length and width. These roads should follow the line of roads already laid as public highways. No new roads should be permitted. We have roads enough. The roads selected should pass through as many counties as practicable, having reference to directness, to touching the most important towns, and to otherwise serving public convenience and other public interests. Such roads could be run so as to pass through, or make contact, with fully three quarters of the twenty-one counties in the State.

A commission should be created, and a competent engineer employed, with whose aid the commission should designate existing roads, as portions of the proposed State roads, and provision should be made for their construction and care at the expense of the State. The State Roads should be constructed in the most scientific and substantial manner, so as to serve the chief purposes of such public improvements, the purposes of travel and transportation, and also as object lessons for the construction of tributaries all over the State. It is wonderful, we have all observed, how improvements of every kind multiply, if there is opportunity for the people to see their advantages; to study and spell them out for themselves. It involves pride of opinion, a characteristic of all men. Tributaries would surely and rapidly follow, and multiply as one of the results of the improved roads.

Two such roads would extend over from 200 to 300 miles, (the length of the State being 167 miles and the average breadth 50 miles) and the roads would cost from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

Can we build these two State roads? I inquire from a financial standpoint. The answer:

We have no State debt of any account and our population is not far from 1,500,000, in round numbers.

The Brooklyn Bridge was commenced in 1870 when the city of Brooklyn had not one-third the population we have now in this State. The Bridge cost $15,000,000 and Brooklyn paid, if I am correctly informed, about two-thirds of the entire cost, or $10,000,000. Union County in this State, with a population of less than 67,000 has built county roads within the last two years, at a cost of from $325,000 to $350,000. The number of miles built from 30 to 40.

The cost of the Union County Roads is just about $5 for each individual in the county, including men, women and children. It is a fair statement, and I believe it quite true, that the people who pay for these roads would not have them taken up for $1,000,000, or three times the cost. The statement was made to me within two weeks by one well acquainted in the county, and familiar with the whole history of the county roads. Our real property in Union County has increased in value already, by reason of these roads, all that they cost us, and the roads are not yet completed.

The Brooklyn Bridge, one mile long, cost the people of that city, including men, women and children, $20 each. Did not the value of real estate in Brooklyn advance $10,000,000 by reason of that one mile thoroughfare? They not only would not, but they could not, take it up. On the contrary, they need another bridge by reason of increased and increasing population.

Ten millions for Brooklyn, on the score of population, is as much as fifteen millions would be for the State of New Jersey.

What we ask of New Jersey, at this time, is from $3,000,000 to $5,000,000 for State roads, 200 miles to 300 miles in extent, passing through the State from North to South and from East to West, opening up and improving, for the immediate benefit of our citizens, for all our citizens, for the whole State; an improvement in extent and benefit, not to be found in kind elsewhere in the United States.

What will this cost us, per capita, including men, women and children? If three million dollars only, is needed, and that is an estimate on the basis of the cost of our country roads in Union, then $2 a head, or one-tenth the cost per head to Brooklyn, of its one mile road. Can we afford the State roads? We could afford them, it is submitted, were the cost ten times as great. The reasons are plain. Our present citizens will not have $2 per head to pay. The cost should become a State debt, to run at least twenty years If not on the completion of the roads, certainly within the period of twenty years, the increase of taxes on property which does not now exist, but which will develope in improvements by reason of the roads, pay the debt; and the number of persons to pay it will be 2,000,000 instead of 1,500,000.

If the foregoing scheme is to be developed as proposed, or a similar scheme, or if the general recommendation of Governor Abbett is to materialize in any modified form, there is work to be done, and promp action is essential. The County Road Act is a good one. Union county, where it originated, has availed itself of its provisions, and the benefits that will flow from it to that locality, are beyond calculation. They are assured already beyond our original expectations. It is contemplated by the people of Westfield, to roast an ox and procure a brass band on the completion of the County Roads, thus making public demonstration of joy.

But life is too short to realize benefits from this act in many of the counties of the State remote from large cities and where farming communities prevail, burdened already by loads they despair of supporting longer. The State must act; and what more fit agency to carry out the execution of the plan than your Board. It seems to me that it is your special province to follow up the recommendations of Governor Abbett. It should receive your prompt action. Everything is favorable to your success. It has been well said by a leading journal, the Philadelphia Press, in commenting on Gov. Hill's message:

> No country districts in the world have ever had thoroughly good roads except when aided by some central authority. Every European State follows the plan of building State roads in its rural districts. France, which has the best country roads in the world, has three systems—National, Departmental and Communal; the first the great arteries, the second the leading roads radiating from them in departments, and the third the lesser roads in each township. Our country roads, aside from bad management, are bad in general because the overtaxed farming districts are too poor too pay for them and under Gov. Hill's plan the richer portions of the State would pay for the roads in the poorer, to the general profit of all.

Gentlemen of the Board: Inaugurate the move that shall result in placing your State in possession of the improved roads that are now possible under Governor Abbett's recommendation, by immediate action on your part, and your grateful fellow-citizens will canonize you while yet alive, and adorn the stained glass windows of this public temple with the images of their blessed benefactors.

To Detain Cars Hereafter Will Cost You Money.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey, with other railway companies organized into the New Jersey Car Service Association, has issued the following important notice to consignors and consignees of freight throughout the State:

The detention of cars in loading and unloading of freight has been the cause of serious loss and great inconvenience to both shippers and carriers. It is an evil which the railroad companies find necessary to correct.

The New Jersey Car Service Association hereby gives notice that on and after Monday, the second day of February, 1891, at 12:01 A. M., there will be a minimum charge for the detention of cars of one dollar per car per day, or any fraction thereof, if not loaded within forty-eight hours after being placed in position for loading, or unloaded within forty-eight hours after arrival.

The amount thus charged is not sufficient to recompense the companies for the use of their cars and tracks for warehouse purposes, and is not collected as a source of revenue, but to prevent the unnecessary detention of cars, and to promote their active use in the service.

This system has been established and in force at a number of important points for some time with advantageous results, both to shippers and railroad companies.

The territory covered by this Association is hereby defined as follows: To include all stations in New Jersey and on Staten Island, on all the railroads parties to this agreement, except stations on the line of and the territory south of Camden & Burlington County Railroad and the Philadelphia & Long Branch Railroad, which extends from Camden to Seaside Park. The Toms River and Barnegat Branch of the Central Railroad of New Jersey is to be included in this Association.

The rules of the Association will be impartially enforced, alike in the interest of all and without discrimination.

Worse than an Indian, and in Jersey.

The fiendish rage of the savage Indian is capable of any atrocity, but what of the fiendish rage of the civilized white man? Here is a farmer—a New Jersey farmer at that—living in Ocean county near Toms River, who became angry at his little four-year-old son, and with diabolic cruelty held the screaming child against a hot stove for some slight offense, until its tender flesh was so terribly burned that its condition is critical. If an Indian had done this, shooting or hanging would have been considered none too good for him.

I have suffered with rheumatism for quite a number of years, and after trying Salvation Oil pronounce it the best remedy I have ever used. Mrs. J. ZIMMERMAN, Wetheredville, Md.

A GREEDY CORMORANT.

How a Big House Absorbs Income, Comfort and Happiness.

There was a story in the newspapers the other day about a Massachusetts minister who resigned his charge because some one had given his parish a fine house and his parishioners wanted him to live in it. His salary was too small, he said, to admit of his living in a big house, and he would not do it. He was even deaf to the proposal that he should share the proposed tenement with the sewing societies and clubs of his church, and when the matter came to a serious issue, he relinquished his charge and sought a new field of usefulness. The situation was an amusing instance of the embarrassment of riches. Let no one to whom restricted quarters may have grown irksome, and who covets larger dimensions of shelter, be too hasty in deciding that the minister was wrong. Did you ever see the house that Hawthorne lived in at Lenox? Did you ever see Emerson's house at Concord? They are good houses for Americans to know and remember. They permitted thought.

A big house is one of the greediest cormorants which can light upon a little income. Backs may go threadbare and stomachs may worry along on indifferent fillings, but a house will have things, though its occupants go without. It is rarely complete, and constantly tempts the imagination to flights in brick and dreams in lath and plaster. It develops annual thirsts for paint and wall-paper; the plumbing in it must be kept in order on pain of death. Whatever price is put on coal it has to be heated in winter; and if it is rural or suburban, the grass about it must be cut even though funerals in the family have to be put off for the mowing. If the tenants are not rich enough to hire people to keep their house clean they must do it themselves, for there is no excuse that will pass among housekeepers for a dirty house. The master of a house too big for him may expect to spend the leisure which might be made intellectually or spiritually profitable in acquiring and putting into practice fag ends of the arts of the plumber, the bell-hanger, the locksmith, the gasfitter, and the carpenter. Presently he will know how to do everything that can be done in the house except enjoy himself. He will learn about taxes, too, and water rates, and how such abominations as sewers or new pavements are always liable to accrue at his expense. As for the mistress, she will be a slave to carpets and curtains, wallpaper, painters, and women who come in by the day to clean. She will be lucky if she gets a chance to say her prayers, and thrice and four times happy when she can read a book or visit with her friends. To live in a big house may be a luxury, provided that one has a full set of money and an enthusiastic housekeeper in one's family, but to scrimp in a big house is a miserable business. Yet such is human folly, that for a man to refuse to live in a house because it is too big for him is such an exceptional exhibition of sense that it becomes the favorite paragraph of a day in the newspapers.—Scribner's Magazine.

PRODUCE TRADE SECRETS.

Philadelphia Dealer Throws Some Light on Inside Manipulations.

"We deal in eggs, butter and lard, and I am an expert in testing and grading all three," said a merchant to a Philadelphia Inquirer reporter. "There is much fraud in the butter business. We print a great deal of tub butter. The contents of five or ten tubs are dumped out on a big table. The outside has become strong and dirty. This we scrape off and sell to the fancy cake bakers at from five to eleven cents a pound, according to its condition. The balance is reworked, resalted, made into pound prints and sold as the best print butter.

"Quite a quantity of what is known as mill or paddle worked butter comes from the West. Small farmers there, who have no ice, get ten or fifteen pounds of butter on hand in rolls, and after awhile it becomes strong. There are firms in Chicago that have men out all the time buying up this rancid butter. It is put into a machine something like an old-fashioned paint mill and ground up, after which it is worked, colored with Danish butter coloring, made into prints and sold as 'fresh creamery butter.' There is not a dairyman in the State of Pennsylvania that does not use butter coloring of some sort. We sell thousands of pounds of the coloring every year. Some large dairies buy it by the barrel.

"A great many farmers in Bucks and Chester Counties buy ten, fifteen and some of them as high as one hundred tubs of our old strong butter, for which they pay about fifteen cents. They take it home, rework and resalt it, mix in fresh butter in the proportion of about one-third, color it, make it into prints and sell it in the markets for thirty-five cents a pound, doubling their money by the transaction. Farmers frequently come to us on Friday night, buy tub butter at twenty-five cents a pound, print it up and sell it the next day for dairy butter at thirty-five cents.

"There is not much adulteration in lard, but one pound of the country article is worth two of the refined, from which all of the oil has been extracted. You can distinguish between the two by a simple test. In warm weather country lard will become soft and run to oil. That which has been refined always remains hard."

Gloomy Times Ahead.

"Maria," said the capitalist, hoarsely, "do you think you could give up this beautiful home and go to live in a cheap flat?"

"Why, John," exclaimed his wife, trembling with apprehension, "what is the matter?"

The broken man laid a document before her bowed head, and groaned aloud.

Affairs in the Dominion.

OTTAWA, Jan. 28.—It is learned from reliable sources that Sir Hector Langevin will make his fight with Sir A. P. Caron, and that the latter is being forced out of the Cabinet. President of the Council Colby's cabinet seat will be given, it is stated, to Mr. Ives. It is regretted that Sir John Macdonald and Premier Mercier of Quebec have formed a friendly alliance, and that the latter will not actively oppose the election of the former's followers in that province.

Astrologer George Acquitted.

BROCKTON, Mass., Jan. 28.—George H. George, alias M. George, astrologer and natural seer, was acquitted of the charge of being an accessory to the suicide of Mrs. Hedwig Anderson and the death of her child Edith. Her dying statement charged that George's statement that her husband loved another woman caused the poisoning. There was no corroborative evidence.

Cattle Dealers Excited.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 28.—Cattle dealers in this city are greatly excited over a recent ruling of the Treasury Department in reference to the inspection of cattle, which if persisted in, they say, will seriously and disastrously affect the trade at East Buffalo, both of cattle men and the railroad companies.

An Agent's Mysterious Disappearance.

BOSTON, Jan. 28.—Edmund Pitt Capron, aged 55, selling agent of the Pneumatic Alarm Company, of good standing and reputation, disappeared Saturday, leaving a note informing his wife that he intended to commit suicide. There is no clue to the motive for his disappearance or his present whereabouts.

A REDWOOD GROVE.

Plan For a Public Park That Will Be Unlike Those of Others.

The newspapers have got hold of a story that our townsman, Colonel Armstrong, is to present the State with a tract of redwood land in Sonoma County for a park. We made inquiry of the donor and found the rumor correct, only that he does not intend to give it to the State or to any particular municipality or society, but to trustees, for the use of the people, for posterity and for all time. This magnificent gift of 600 acres lies in Big Bottom, near the extremity of the branch of the San Francisco & North Pacific railway, about one mile from the river at Guerneville in Sonoma County, and accessible by rail from San Francisco, which is seventy miles distant.

It is the last considerable tract of these big trees in this region or so near the city. Of course there are other scopes of scattered timber in the hills, scrubby in growth and out of the way. But this is a grand forest of monstrous trees, much on level land, bordered by the side of the Mount Jackson range, with tree trunks from five to fifteen feet in diameter and more than three hundred feet high, intermingled with various other sorts of growth, occasional firs, laurel and other woods adding to the beauty of the spot.

The donor says the gift will not be fully appreciated for the next fifty years. Then, when no other spot like it can be found in reach, his motive will be understood. The trustees will be selected about as follows: Perhaps the chairman of the Golden Gate park trustees, of San Francisco; the landscape gardener of Central park, New York City; the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of California, and a local trustee in this county. These gentlemen and their successors forever will have control, under but few restrictions in the deed of trust. One will be that no timber shall ever be cut or trimmed, unless it be blown down. Another condition will be that the park shall not be a place for encampment for fear of fire, and shall only be visited in daylight.

There will be drives, paths and the like, as well as many ornamental structures, and a gateway and fountains in keeping with its purpose, for which a sufficient endowment is to be placed in the hands of the trustees. The details can not be given for publication, nor, in fact, are they completed. But it is understood that some of the work will be done in the time of the owner, and that he will retain control for the present and as long as he lives. Out of the 600 acres about 200, with valuable improvements, orchards, buildings, etc., are being put into condition for yielding a considerable income, and much of it is as fine land as lies in Russian river bottom.

After its income may no longer be required by the family it is provided that it shall become part of the park, and the trustees will be directed to use such portion as may be convenient to erect glass houses for propagating strange plants, flowers, trees and shrubs, to be used in bordering the drives and ornamenting the ground. It will be seen from the sketch that the plan is for posterity, and it will take a long while to work it out, though in the main the natural features of a wild forest are intended to predominate always.—Cloverdale Reveille.

CULTIVATING THOUGHT.

How to Become Superior to Adverse Circumstances and Hardship.

It has been said that it requires more art to be a good listener than a conversationalist. What an incentive to eloquence is an attentive listener! What triumphs have come before the footlights through an enthusiastic audience! What symphonic poems have been sung upon instruments whose swaying bows were guided by sympathetic, silent listeners!

How beautiful, indeed, is thought! However hard and mean one's toil, fancies can rise, such as might have had their birth midst woods and flowers. How many brilliant writers have been utter failures as talkers; and, alas! how many talkers would have been considered wise, but for the expose their conversation makes! Men can not all be authors, but they can be thinkers. On the street, in the car, we can pursue our silent thought, till time and space become oblivion—till, as Lowell has said:

"What we long for, that we are,
For one transcendent moment;
Until the Present, poor and bare,
Can make its sneering comment."

Ever superior to adverse circumstances, oblivious to pain and hardship, can we become by cultivating thought. We all know how subtle is its influence, though a silent worker. The sudden impulse to speak of previously forgotten subjects has often been traced to the effect of some contiguous mind. The presage of some event is often felt by persons given to "presentiments."

It is only through persistent, untiring thought that grand results are born. All are prone to look upon inventions as spontaneous creations; but there is no class of men so absorbed in one idea as inventors—making every thing and every body subservient to their moods, till at last, the result is given to the wondering world; and the inventor again plunges into seclusion, and the world and its surprise are lost to him as he thinks out another so-called "discovery." Then, in the literary world there have been many inspirations of the moment, but earnest, deep thought has preceded, and, at least, indirectly brought the great production.

The supremacy of the mind has become an absorbing movement toward treatment of disease. And every conscientious physician knows how great is the subjection of the body to the mind. Through our thoughts we make for ourselves a sphere, from which emanates unconsciously a power for good or evil.

"Life's more than breath and the quick round of blood.
We live in thoughts, not breaths. He most lives who thinks most—lives in one hour more than in years do some."

Then, let us think, then speak; think, then act; and life will round itself to higher meanings—nobler ends!—N. Y. Ledger.

His Rise.

He bought a brand new pair of shoes,
He thought he'd get some spats;
He then discovered that he lacked
The latest thing in hats.

He bought one. Then his trousers bagged;
He ordered two new pair,
And then, strange fact! he noticed that
His coat was quite threadbare.

He bought another. Then he saw
Some waistcoats. Just the thing!
He had to get some ties to match;
He bought a diamond ring.

He joined three clubs. He bought a horse,
Then changed it for a team;
He bought a sailing yacht at first,
And then moved up to steam.

He bought these things, and many more,
This man so great and wise;
For during his career he had
The sense to advertise.

Value of Changing Advertisements.

Picking up an old journal the other day I found a statement to the effect that a certain patent medicine firm had not (at that time) changed the wording of its advertisements for thirteen years. While I am a thorough believer in judicious advertising I doubt if such advertising as that would accomplish any good after a few months of publication. No doubt ninety-nine readers out of a hundred would throw aside the paper at sight of the familiar heading with the exclamation, "The same old story." Though publishers may save considerably in composition bills by permitting advertisements to "stand" in their columns for a year or more, they must lose considerable in the ill effect upon other would be advertisers.

It is to the interest of publishers that their patrons should find that "it pays to advertise," and those advertising columns are most attentively perused which are most frequently changed. A publisher who allows an advertisement to stand without change in his columns for over three months is doing his own business an absolute harm. Advertisements are being looked upon as news, and as such they should be fresh and interesting. Invite your patrons to make frequent changes in their announcements. It will pay them, and this will have a reflex action upon your own receipts.—National Publisher and Printer.

A New Profession.

The writing of advertisements is assuming the dignity of a profession. Much of the style of writing is charmingly seductive, and withal contains no little information of a scholarly nature, as many a reader has discovered after perusing a half column with quickening interest to find in the end how he may become a Hercules in strength or a beauty by the use of certain elixirs! There is more money in the writing of advertisements than in legitimate literature. Agencies solicit the writing of advertisements and guarantee appropriate illustrations, and the insertion of same in whatever newspaper or periodical the advertiser may desire. Most of the celebrated advertisers write their own notices. "It is only needful to repeat a thing often enough," says Goethe, "and everybody will end by believing it."—L. R. McCabe in Chicago Herald.

Woman's Influence.

What is so good an advertisement as the confidential advice of a woman of influence? I know nothing which approaches it. You can remember a dozen books which have been made by this sort of feminine recommendation. It sold a hundred thousand copies of Marion Harland's "Common Sense Cook Book," and more copies of "Little Lord Fauntleroy;" it made The Ladies' Home Journal, and it makes the fortunes of baby food people every year. Suppose your child is ill, and Mrs. Smith tells your wife that Canteloupe's food saved her baby's life, a hundred dollar bill would not be too much to pay for a box or bottle of the food, and so it goes.—Art in Advertising.

Pussy's Long Fast.

On Feb. 19 a live cat was dug out of a ruined building in Lynn, Mass. It is now known beyond a doubt that this animal had been confined in the ash pit of an old fashioned brick oven ever since the fire, Nov. 26, 1889. Instances of cats living without food or drink have been chronicled, but this one seems to have distanced all others. The old oven has not been used for over forty years, consequently nothing remains there for fodder. It may have been that mice and rats were confined with kitty and she made herself comfortable while they lasted. The place where the cat was confined is such that, when the smoking debris fell at the time of the fire, the hottest of the ruins were only a few feet distant. The animal, when released, could only walk a few steps at a time without falling over on her side.—New York World.

How to Advertise.

The question of method in advertising is one having infinite range. The matter is one of the very first importance, and cannot be too carefully studied. One thing about it that may be set down as true is that every man's advertising, in its language and style, should be characteristic—characteristic of the man, characteristic of his stock, characteristic of his commercial position. For every man has his peculiarities of development. When he speaks we know it is he, though we may not be looking at him, and his advertisement should represent him like his voice. He should put his experience, his industry, his enterprise, into his advertising. It is astonishing to see how merchants who are tireless in their industry—at the store early and late, close buyers, eager seekers after business, quick to embrace opportunities for enlargement of lines and extension of trade—it is surprising to see how such business men continue their advertising in the language of the old rut, and announce in the same words and the same type that did duty for them years ago that "B. Franklin (or any other man, the name doesn't matter) is still to be found at the old stand, with a choice stock of dry goods, notions, etc., etc." (The two etc.'s are indispensable in an "ad" of this kind.)

There is another and a better way to do: If a merchant has any snap, any energy, in himself, let him show it in his advertising. If he has any bargains in his store, let him say so. If he has connections which enable him to sell better goods, or the same goods at lower prices, than anybody else, let him say that; say it plainly, strongly and in a way that will carry conviction of truthfulness; and on the same principle that leads him to treat visitors to his store so that they will call again, let him write his advertisement so that his next advertisement will be looked for; if you get a person's attention once try to hold it. The whole thing is summed up in this: One should study advertising as he does every other department of his business. Advertising is a science, simple, it is true, as to its main elements, but requiring more thought and system than many of our business men have been accustomed to give it.

The Art of Advertising.

Advertising seems to be an art yet to be discovered by some people. That is, the practical part of it. A constant stream of water from one or more fire engines will soon extinguish or get under control a very large fire, while a few buckets of water, dashed on here and there, have little or no effect. The modern fire department is practical, and has outgrown the old bucket system; and so with modern advertising—plenty of it, used in a practical, common sense and judicious manner, pays.

If you want to catch a certain kind of fish you use a certain kind of bait; not all fish bite at all kinds of bait. Not all people respond to every advertisement. The newspaper is a medium indispensable to the majority of advertisers, because of its wide and repeating circulation. As a promoter of trade and profit newspaper advertising is no longer an open question; that is, when done in a practical and intelligent manner, and pays because of its effectiveness and cheapness.—Beatrice (Neb.) Democrat.

Spasmodic Advertising.

We all recognize that as between the fellow who works "by fits and starts" and the chap who plods along and keeps at it steadily, the plodder gets there every time. The spasmodic fellow may create an occasional impression, but the results of his fitful labors are dissipated in the intervals.

The occasional display of fireworks only serves the purpose of preventing his being forgotten altogether; while the man who works, and keeps working, constantly improves his position and prospects.

So it is with advertising. It is the repeated "ad" and the sustained effort that tell. We don't mean the "ad" that is never changed, but the one that is ever changing, but never omitted! The wise advertiser keeps always before the people to whom he desires to sell his wares. When you want to quit doing business stop advertising, or advertise only "once in a while."

Not a Charity.

In any just view of a quarter of a century of journalistic work the most prominent feature, and one giving great satisfaction to respectable publishers, is that printing a newspaper has become recognized as a business and not a charity.—Owen Scott.

STOCKINET CLOTH.

The Difference Between Knit and Woven Goods.

Strictly speaking, stockinet is not a cloth, for it is not woven fabric, but a knitted texture. "By a process of knitting, and not by weaving, the individual threads of which a stockinet fabric is composed, are, says the Dry-Goods Chronicle, interlaced into one regular texture. The work is performed in a kind of a frame or loom, in which the yarns are arranged in parallel order, at uniform distances apart, as in ordinary weaving. Of course, the machine is automatic in its movements and capable of producing a great length of cloth in a very short time. The fabric thus formed is ornamented with a fine ribbed pattern, similar in character to that seen in common knit goods. This article generally handles soft, fall and elastic, but lacks those valuable characteristics of strength and firmness of texture or make which obtain in a woven cloth proper."

The difference between the structure of this fabric and that resulting from weaving warp and weft yarns together may be illustrated as follows: Take a sample of stockinet cloth and try to withdraw a thread and what is the result? The whole construction is unraveled. Next submit a loom product to a similar examination and it will be found that if a longitudinal or warp thread is removed the transverse or weft thread will remain, while, on the other hand, if the latter are withdrawn the warp threads will, although the texture may be partly destroyed, still remain, to a certain extent, undisturbed. Again, the manner in which a knitted fabric is constructed limits the designer to one class of weave effects—these being of a stockinet character—whereas the principles of weaving are of such a description as to admit of unlimited change or variation in design.

AN EXPENSIVE MISS.

What It Costs to Keep One Little New York Girl.

Here are some figures regarding the cost of a little girl of fourteen for the past year, says the New York World. She is the only daughter of a teller in a New York bank. The family lives in a private boarding-house, and the ambition of her parents is to make the child a bright, sweet, sensible woman. Her wardrobe costs $315 a year, including laundry.

She attends school up-town where she pays $350 a year. Last season she was sent to dancing school at an expense of $90. For this accomplishment she needed a special supply of slippers, four little dancing frocks, a long, quilted ulster and fifteen yards of sash ribbon, for which a bill of $71 was presented.

During the summer she learned to swim, and the cost of her bathing suits and the services of the bathing master amounted to $13. Her board for the entire year cost $850. Here are some trifles, as the mother calls them, copied from the little girl's expense account:

One pug dog, $5; eight silver bracelets, $15; one doll, $3; one doll's carriage, $9.60; to mender, three days' service, $4.50; hospital attendance for dog, $7; burial of same, $1.75; one gold ring, $3.50; rent of tricycle, $2.85; medical treatment, $35; gifts for relatives, $7; monkey muff and cape, $27; gum, ice-cream, soda-water tripod, $94; tennis racket, $2.50; opera glass, $8; silver watch, $6; treatment for stuttering, $60.

Making the annual cost of this sweet little tyrant, $1,311.70.

MARBLE CANYON.

A River Whose Bed Is Three Thousand Feet Below the Plain.

We took up our march for the Colorado river at Lee's Ferry, so named from John D. Lee, one of the destroying angels executed by the United States for complicity in the Mountain Meadow massacre. Here we saw the most remarkable river in the world, writes a correspondent in the Indianapolis Sentinel. Imagine yourself upon a broad, white plain; you can hear a dull, distant roar; you can see nothing save the mountains and the waving grass; you go on and the noise gets more distinct, until you can hear it apparently beneath your feet.

All at once you see a few feet from you a fissure, which at first glance looks to be scarcely twenty feet wide. You cautiously crawl up and look down, down for three thousand feet. There is the river, a white torrent, surging against its perpendicular marble sides. You wonder, having walked to within fifty feet of that chasm without seeing it. You look at it flowing, and trace its course directly towards those mountains, yet they do not stop it; it goes through them, separating the Budskin from the San Francisco range, and the small dividing line looks like the cut of a knife from the top to the bottom. Here is where the canyon reaches its greatest depth, being a little over a mile from the top to the water.

THE ONLY ONE LIVING.

A Man Who Once Struck the Prince of Wales.

Pittsburgh boasts of a man who slapped the Prince of Wales in the face, says the South Side News. He lives on the South side, and for many years has worked for the Monongahela Water Company as a laboring boss. The circumstances of the adventure, as told by himself, are as follows:

"In my early life I was a soldier in the British army, and once my regiment was reviewed by Queen Victoria, who held by the hand the youthful Prince of Wales. When the mother's back was turned the boy playfully expectorated on my red-coat, and I resented the insult to the British flag by slapping him in the face with my open palm. He told his mother, and every soon the Colonel heard of it and came dancing, along to wreak vengeance on the man who dare lift his hand to a son of the Queen.

"The Queen sought me out and graciously inquired what my name was. 'William Dickson, sergeant, your Majesty,' said I, and she commended my sense of propriety in administering a timely rebuke to the heir apparent of the English throne, and recommended me for the promotion which never came."

"LIKE A FROST-BLIGHTED FLOWER,"

The fair young sufferer perishes, and often from causes unknown to the world, but superficial judgment, founded on appearances, takes this form of expression, "died of quick consumption," while in nine cases out of ten it should be, "died from carelessness." Mothers, look to your daughters. Daughters, look to yourselves.

THE MINE'S VICTIMS

Darkest Day in the History of the Coke Region.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY DEAD.

Many of the Corpses Are Mangled Beyond Recognition.

The Ill-Fated Pit Gives Up 110 Bodies. Pathetic Scenes at the Shaft's Mouth When the Dead Were Brought Up—Accounting for the Fearful Explosion. Names of the Identified Victims.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Pa., Jan. 29.—A village of sorrow aptly describes this place to-day. Hourly since the terrible explosion in Frick's Mammoth No. 1 mine the agony has been piled up.

"Forty," "sixty," "eighty," "one hundred and ten"—these were the respective estimates of the miners killed. Now the owner of the coke works, Mr. H. C. Frick, supported by an influx of widows and orphans, adds to the terrifying list. He has been notified that 110 bodies were discovered up to 12 o'clock, and that there were in all 160 men working in the mine at the time of the accident. Nine of these escaped with their lives; some of them badly injured, the rest, or 151 men, were either killed outright or suffocated by the terrible afterdamp.

Agonizing indeed was it to watch the efforts of the bereaved in their endeavors to identify their beloved husbands, sons and fathers.

List of Identified Dead.

Following is the list of identified dead:

Unmarried—Mike Tribuls, Jacob Myers, Steve Connor, Mike Stanick, Steve Moran, Martin Adam, Steve Schwartz, Billy Bowman, Mike Corcora, Frank Cerne, Lewis Lewis and William Lewis.

Bringing Up the Bodies.

Heartrending scenes were witnessed by the spectators about the mouth of the shaft. Dead bodies were brought up every few minutes, and the crowd simply fell back to allow the men carrying stretchers room to pass. Every corpse was covered, and no one even ventured to inquire which body it was, for they knew every one in that part of the mine at the time of the explosion was dead.

A Weird Scene.

A young foreign-born woman came and gazed in the face of each body as it lay on the porch. She finally stopped, and, with a heartrending wail, began shaking the face and body of a fine-looking young man, who was her husband. She patted his face and smoothed his hair, all the time speaking in her own language, and her tears streaming down on his face.

It was a weird scene, all the dead lying there, a crowd surrounding them, all under the flickering light of an oil lamp. An old man came along and said: "That is my boy, my poor boy; let me take him home to his mother," and he helped to place the body in a coffin.

WAS THE MINE UNSAFE?

A Thorough Examination to be Made of the Cause of the Disaster.

MT. PLEASANT, Pa., Jan. 29.—While the recovery of the dead and the distress of the living engrossed nearly all thought for the past 24 hours, steps have been taken for a thorough examination of the cause of the disaster. The coroner empanelled a jury, and a preliminary examination or the mine is being made. Not one of the witnesses of the explosion survives, and in this respect the disaster is one of the most remarkable in history.

The questions now uppermost are, was the explosion the result of carelessness, or was the mine unsafe? The officials of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, the owners of the mine, profess to be positive that the mine was safe, and do not charge carelessness upon any of the men who are dead.

The workmen around here seeem to feel that the explosion was an unavoidable accident, and attach no blame to the company. Supt. Keighley could not offer any explanation of the explosion. He said it was caused by fire damp, but where it originated or how it accumulated he could not understand. The Mammoth mine had always been free from gas, he said. It was remarkable in that respect. The mine is not injured to any extent. The damage is limited to a terrible and irreparable loss of life.

The Legislature Will Investigate.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 29.—A concurrent resolution was adopted by both branches of the Legislature authorizing the appointment of three members of the House and two Senators versed in mining to proceed at once to the scene of the mine explosion at Mammoth, investigate it, and report to the Legislature in what respect the present law is defective, and wherein it may be improved. The committee is also instructed to report as to what action the Legislature should take to give relief to such as are injured or in need.

Cannot Accept Miners' Demands.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 29.—At a large meeting of coal operators in Columbus, O., to consider the demands which have been published in the papers as to the action of the miners' meeting held last week, it was the unanimous sense of the meeting that the demands of the miners, if correctly reported in the papers, cannot possibly be accepted by Ohio operators.

BOTH SIDES REPORT.

The House Committees of Connecticut Only Add Fuel to the Flame.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 29.—The report to the House by the House Committee on the vote for State officers states that 1,289 general ballots were rejected in the late election, many for no given cause or reason, or for insufficient cause in many towns. On the other hand, the votes returned in many towns exceeded the number of votes cast.

Therefore, the report says, the committee is unable to determine that any person was legally chosen to any office, except that of Controller, to which the returns indicate that Nicholas Staub, Democrat, was elected.

The committee points out that a Democratic resolution for a general opening of ballot boxes is pending in the House, and expresses a readiness to join in such an investigation, if both branches of the General Assembly will take it up.

The minority of the committee state that upon examination of the returns they find the whole Democratic State ticket elected. They say further, that the returns are a true statement of the votes legally cast and counted at the various elective meetings. They were made by the legally constituted officers at said meetings, and that the ballots are shown to have been rejected by the legally constituted officers.

They charge that, in violation of the constitution, the majority of the committee proceeded to take intrinsic evidence for the purpose of changing the result. This the minority refused to take part in.

They charged that the majority have, on hearsay evidence, undertaken to cast doubt upon the result of the votes. All this, they declare, to be in subversion of law. They finally recommend the passage of the Senate resolution and declare the Democrats elected.

DEVOURED BY WOLVES.

Indian Camps Attacked by the Ravenous Beasts.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 29.—The Rev. J. Sattee, missionary among the Indian tribes around Lakes Winnipeg and Manitoba, states that camps of Indians hunting on the east side of Lake Winnipeg, not very far from Blood Vein River, were visited by a band of wolves, about 100 in number. They attacked the camps and killed many Indians and devoured them.

One Indian cudgelled and killed 20 of the wolves; another Indian climbed up a tree with his gun and shot down 20. One got upon a stage, which was not very high, and the wolves got him down and devoured him.

There is a great panic among the Indians in that quarter. The Indians say that there are no deer, consequently the wolves are mad with hunger.

MR. INGALLS' SUCCESSOR.

The Farmers' Alliance Candidate Elected United States Senator.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 29.—The joint session of the Legislature voted as follows for United States Senator: Pfeffer, 101; Ingalls, 58; Blair, 3; Baker, 1; Morrill, 1; Kelly, 1. The successful candidate, William Alfred Pfeffer, was born in Cumberland county, Pa., Sept. 10, 1831. He is of Dutch descent. He is a self-made man.

Senator Ingalls will remain here until to-morrow, then join his family at Atchison and return to Washington at the end of next week. After the adjournment of Congress he will go to Europe for rest.

Connecticut's Labor Congress.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 29.—The annual meeting of the State Labor Congress was held here and the following officers were elected: President, George A. Gowdy, of Bristol; vice-president, Thomas J. Meehan, of Danbury; secretary, E. R. Clymo, of Naugatuck; treasurer, W. H. Fenton, of Bridgeport. The report of the secretary shows that pledges to support the measures of the congress have been received from two-thirds of the Senators and from many of the Representatives. The platform adopted last August was revived.

The Hinsdale Fratricide Case.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Jan. 29.—Frederick A. Hale of Hinsdale, who killed his brother Henry in a family quarrel, May 4, 1890, was arraigned for trial in the Superior Court, charged with manslaughter. He pleaded guilty of assault and battery, and the plea was accepted by the District Attorney. This is the Hinsdale fratricide case in which the killing was followed by the suicide of the father of the boys. Sentence was deferred.

Reports of Albany Committees.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 29.—The Senate Committee on General Laws will report favorably the bill of Senator McNaughton adopting the Myers voting machine for State elections. The Assembly Committee on Public Institutions will report the $454,000 appropriation bill for State care of the insane.

In a Receiver's Hands.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 29.—The Bradford, Bordell & Kinzua Railroad, a small road connecting with the Philadelphia & Erie, is in difficulties, and has gone into the hands of a receiver.

MR. QUAY TO SPEAK

Pennsylvania's Senator to Answer All Charges.

HE WILL STARTLE THE SENATE.

To Read the Most Remarkable Document in Recent Political History.

Senators Hiscock and Gorman Exchange Compliments on the Census Question—Awaiting the Court's Decision in the Behring Sea Case—The Increased Representation in the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Senator Quay is going to speak. For many months he has been under charges from many sources of corrupt and criminal acts in office, and he has steadily refused to say a syllable as to whether the accusations were true or false. The long silence he has kept, which has been accepted by many persons as conclusive evidence of his guilt, he is about to break.

He has prepared to every charge that has been publicly made against him a specific and, in some cases, an elaborate reply, the whole of which is pronounced by a friend of Mr. Quay's, who has seen it, to be one of the most remarkable documents in recent political history. It is now compiled, copied and ready to be published whenever Mr. Quay thinks fit.

The medium through which Mr. Quay will give his version to the world is the United States Senate, and within a day or two, perhaps to-morrow, if the occasion is favorable, Mr. Quay will rise in the Senate to a question of personal privilege, and startle the Senators with a full statement of the facts as he views them.

Although Mr. Quay has never publicly referred in any way to the charges that have been made against him, it is said by his personal and political friends, who gave this information, that he has carefully noted and preserved all these charges as they have appeared, and always intended at the proper time and place, to reply to them.

He has declined to discuss them through the newspapers, because he couldn't reach all the public through any one or a dozen papers, and for other reasons, which the friend says, are good and sufficient.

SENATORS HAVE A TILT.

Messrs. Hiscock and Gorman Talk About New York's Census.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—There was a lively debate in the Senate between Senators Hiscock and Gorman over the census enumeration of New York. The old story of the census enumeration was gone over and Senator Hiscock said: "I have some interest in New York city, on this floor, though I do not claim to represent it like the Senator from Maryland."

Mr. Gorman replied: "The Senator has no right to use such a remark; it is babyish."

Mr. Gorman believed that the Superintendent of the Census had done his duty fairly and well, but nevertheless was convinced that the enumeration of New York city was defective to the extent of 200,000, and that no sufficient reason had been given why the request of the State and municipal authorities for a recount had not been complied with.

Mr. Hiscock said: "The New York census was taken under a law enacted by a Democratic Congress and approved by a Democratic President. The Superintendent of the Census was in no way responsible for this law, but he followed it out faithfully, and in the opinion of all fair-minded citizens of the State the enumeration of New York city, taken in June last, was a correct census of the inhabitants then resident there."

Millionaire Mackay Tells Why He Whipped Capitalist Bonynge.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 29.—John W. Mackay makes the following statement in regard to the encounter which occurred yesterday in the Nevada Bank between himself and C. W. Bonynge, a capitalist, formerly a member of the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and in late years a resident of London:

"Long ago I suspected that Bonynge was the instigator of certain attacks on Mrs. Mackay, which appeared in certain papers in New York and London. Having secured proof that this was true, I determined to punish him the first time I met him.

"Yesterday, when entering the president's room in the Nevada Bank by the back door, of which I, as a director, have a key, I saw Bonynge sitting at a desk with Mr. Hellman. As I entered, Bonynge turned and saw me. He had a malignant look on his face, and made a threatening movement.

"I struck out with my right and hit him in the left eye. I hit him again and called upon him to put up his fists and fight like a man. Instead of doing so he fell and clasped me about the knees like a coward. Blood, which was flowing freely from his nose, poured all over my pantaloons and upon the floor. My clerks then rushed in and removed him.

"The sound thrashing he received he well deserved for circulating those stories about Mrs. Mackay. I'm not so handy with my fists as I used to be 25 years ago, but I have a little fight left in me yet and will allow no man to malign me or mine."

Mr. Mackay is around as usual, none the worse for the affray, while Bonynge is confined to his room nursing his black and swollen eyes and several contusions elsewhere on his face.

The child is a legatee under the will of his uncle, Robert Ray Hamilton and the petition alleges that his title to the property bequeathed to him is affected by the marriage contract which existed between his uncle and Eva L. Mann. It is proposed to bring an action against Mrs. Mann in order to establish a clear title to the property in question, and the suit will be brought in the child's guardian's name. The judge granted the petition.

COMING DISSOLUTION

Canadians on the Verge of a General Election.

RECIPROCITY TO BE THE ISSUE.

Dominion Liberals Looking for Assistance from Washington.

Lively Meeting of the Irish Factions at Belfast—Vote of Confidence in Sexton. Michael Davitt Very Ill—Parnell to Speak at Leeds on Sunday—Talk About Gladstone—End of the Long Strike.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Mr. Hitt, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, has received a telegram from Ottawa telling him that Sir John Macdonald is about to dissolve the Canadian Parliament and to go the country in an election on February 28 next. The issue of the coming campaign will be reciprocity, and the Liberals of the Dominion are particularly anxious that Mr. Hitt should get through his reciprocity resolution in time to let it aid them in their contest.

If they are able to show to the Canadian people that the Hitt resolution or reciprocity has been passed by both houses of Congress, and is in the nature of a tender of more cordial relations with Canada, they expect to be able to carry the election and displace Sir John Macdonald.

Mr. Hitt is not pushing his resolution on the floor, as there is a disposition among his Republican colleagues to call it a free trade move, but he is quietly seeing the members, and he hopes to have sufficient assurance to secure the passage of the resolution during the latter days of the session. He had it passed once before on the last day of the session, but it failed to get through the Senate. If it can slip in the same way this year it will serve a valuable purpose to the Liberals of Canada, in dislodging Sir John Macdonald, who has long been the convinced enemy of kindly relations with the United States.

SEXTON SUSTAINED.

Police Prevent an Encounter Between the Irish Factions at Belfast.

BELFAST, Jan. 29.—A meeting of anti-Parnellites was held here to discuss the attitude of Mr. Sexton in the existing controversy, and to sustain him in his position.

Several members of the Healy-McCarthy faction were present and spoke, but Mr. Sexton was absent.

The Parnellites attended in considerable numbers, and the opposing factions indulged in long and loud howls of defiance, which completely drowned the voices of the speakers, who could not be heard a dozen steps from the platform. A vote of confidence in Mr. Sexton was offered and passed by a large majority.

The police prevented an encounter between the factions.

IMPORTANT STATE BILL.

The Civil Service System of the United States Wanted in Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 29.—The Civil Service Reform bill which was introduced by Mr. Wherry in the House is likely to become one of the measures of this session.

The idea is to transplant to Pennsylvania the Civil Service system of the United States. The bill takes in a wide sweep, only excluding elective officers, school teachers and the private secretaries of the Governor and the mayors of cities. All municipalities which may boast of six subordinate employes are included, and, of course, policemen are in the Civil Service list.

Miller's bail was fixed at $2,000; that of Rich and the Chinamen at $500.

It is believed that Miller has been working the Canadian end of the "underground" with headquarters at Toronto.

—Mr. Wachenhusen is delivering the ink set of which he has sold, assisted by an adv. in THE PRESS, so many about the city.

—The Baptists of New Jersey are the first this year to present a strong memorial to the Legislature, asking that no race track legislation be enacted.

—Peach trees have been broken by the heavy fall of snow and ice. Some people claim that abundant fruit follows when ice forms upon the trees in Winter.

—Seats for "The Prince and The Pauper" are now on sale at Williams' pharmacy, Park avenue and Fourth street, and at Miller's, 10 East Front street.

—The value of telegraph service under existing circumstances is shown by the fact that a dispatch filed at Trenton early yesterday, for THE PRESS, did not reach this city till 11 P. M.

—There is something new under the sun, even in tooth powders. You may think that they are all alike, or that you have tried all that are different. But until you use Thiers's you know nothing about it. It is clensing, clarifying and cooling.

—Railroad companies are beginning to paint their cars white, after the style of the "white squadron" of the United States Navy. The Pullmans are the first to start the fashion. It remains to be seen how this color will wash and wear. The innovation is yet to be seen on the Jersey Central.

—Twenty-nine States, including New Jersey, have laws restricting or prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors. In fifteen States no such laws exist. But no one can tell, except by examining the statutes, which States have these laws and which have not. Here is an excellent chance for Plainfield to set an example of law-enforcement.

—The public is deeply interested in Dr. Chauncey B. Ripley's new State roads plan, as outlined in his address before the State Board of Agriculture at Trenton yesterday. This address, by the way, was published promptly in THE PRESS, where the people saw it, as usual, for the first time. A vote of thanks was extended to Dr. Ripley by the State Board for his able speech.

David S. Terrill, father of Moses N. Terrill of this city, died at Irvington at twenty minutes past six o'clock last evening. He was 55 years old. He leaves a wife and two sons.

Charles W. Kellogg, who for the past three years has been choir master of the Church of the Holy Cross, resigned his position last Sunday in spite of the sincere desire of everybody that he should remain. To him alone is due the credit for the remarkably fine work the choir boys are accomplishing. They have attained a high standard of musical excellence under his training and tuition. At his home, Tuesday evening, he entertained the boys with games etc., and a supper.

The Elopement Denied.

Relatives of the bride denied to a PRESS reporter to-day that she ran away to be married. Still her parents did not know anything of it until it was all over.

BARELY ESCAPED WITH THEIR LIVES.

A Family Awakened at Dead of Night by Suffocating Smoke and Roaring Flames—An Inhuman Stranger Turns a Deaf Ear to Appeals for Help.

The family of William J. Ford narrowly escaped burning to death in their beds at an early hour this morning.

Mr. Ford himself was at Trenton, attending a meeting of the Masonic Grand Lodge of the State.

At about four o'clock Mrs. Ford and her children were awakened by suffocating heat and smoke, and by the crackling of flames.

The smoke was so dense that the flame of the lamp that had been burning in one of the bed-rooms could not find enough oxygen to support its combustion, and went out.

Through this asphyxiating cloud Mrs. Ford's eldest son, whose age is about eleven years, managed to creep, till he reached a window and found breathing space on the roof of the piazza.

Sliding down one of the pillars of the porch, and finding himself in safety, his first thought was of his mother.

Painters had left a ladder in the yard, and the lad sought to raise this against the side of the burning building.

He hailed a man who was passing, and cried for assistance, but the fellow was too intent on his own selfish pursuits either to lend a helping hand himself or to arouse the neighbors.

Instead of heeding the boy's appeals, he walked on.

But the stranger's inhumanity did not daunt the plucky young son of the shoemaker.

By a noble effort he succeeded in raising the ladder to the piazza roof, and a moment later he had conducted his mother and her two younger children safely to the ground.

By this time a policeman happened along, burst in the front door, and was driven back by the smoke. He then ran to give an alarm, and after much difficulty the old alarm-tower was mounted and the bell was struck in the old-fashioned way.

Had the new fire-alarm telegraph system been working the location of the fire would have been known instantly, and many more firemen would have heard the alarm and turned out.

Considerable time was lost in idle running about from point to point, searching for the spot where the burning house was situated.

When the firemen found the place, however, they did excellent work. Under the direction of Second Assistant Engineer Martin they soon had the flames under control, and the fire out.

The roof and interior of the upper story were burned, causing a loss of $1,500 to the house. The furniture and clothing of the Fords, on which there is an insurance of $700, was all damaged—partly by fire and partly by water. The house is owned by a woman in Albany.

The Fords saved nothing but the night clothes in which they escaped.

Mrs. Ford told a reporter that she desired to thank the firemen and the neighbors, through THE PRESS, for the kind offices performed on their behalf.

The location of the house is at 78 West Second street, midway between New and Liberty streets.

Amphion Hall's Close Call.

When Fritz Frazee, janitor at Amphion Hall, heard the fire-alarm, at about half-past four o'clock, he was just getting ready to close up the Hall after an all-night dance. Eager to run to the fire, he hurried closing arrangements and, going to the rear of the stage, found that a brisk blaze had been started by a defect in the electric lighting apparatus. Had he been a moment later a serious fire must have developed, as the flames were creeping up the interior of the partitions when the fire was discovered and extinguished. The Hall had a narrow escape from destruction.

Plainfield's New Fire-Alarm All Right.

Those ill-advisers who have been carping at the fire-alarm chime-gong and telegraph innovation in Plainfield, and who have been clamoring for a return to the old hap-hazard bell system, had their wish gratified this morning, when the inadequacy of the old method and the desirability of the new were fully demonstrated.

And those who have been crying that the new fire-alarm wires are weak and worthless don't know what they are talking about. A committee of electrical experts chosen by the city passed on the quality of the wire weeks ago, and declared it to be the best and strongest in the market. The fire-alarm wires stood the strain of the recent storm better than any other, and were broken only by the falling of telegraph poles across them.

To Pray for The Volunteer Missions.

Meetings for prayer for colleges to be led by W. D. Murray, will be held at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms this evening at 8 o'clock. A special subject for prayer will be the international convention of the student volunteer missionary movement for foreign missions to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, from February 26 to March 1. Each one of the seventy missionary societies on the continent will be invited to send a representative. Many of the representatives of these societies have already signified their purpose to attend.

There is one thing, the price of which is not affected by the McKinley Bill. High tariff or low tariff, free trade or any other trade, Hires' Cough Cure costs 25 cents the world over. Surely cheap enough.

HYMENEAL.

Bristol—Lowrie.

A wedding that was both notable and novel took place at Grace church, Wednesday evening, when Miss Caroline Elizabeth Lowrie, daughter of Dr. Henry H. Lowrie, was married to the Rev. Cornelius Gardner, rector of St. Alban's Episcopal church at Danielsonville, Conn. The wedding was a notable one because of the social prominence of the interested parties, and the brilliant celebration of the event; and novel because of the fact that eight clergymen participated.

The hour of the marriage service was seven o'clock, when the church was filled with invited witnesses. The Rev. Dr. Erskine M. Rodman performed the ceremony. The head usher—who also fulfilled the office of "best man"—was the Rev. Morris Kemp of New York. The other ushers were the Rev. E. M. Jeffrys of Philadelphia, the Rev. Wm. Beardsley of New Haven, the Rev. B. J. Davis of West Philadelphia, the Rev. E. N. Morris of New Haven, and the Rev. William Downey of Merrick, L. I. All of these clergymen were university classmates of the groom. The Misses Myra Rose and Maud Lowrie, sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids.

The bride wore a gown of white regence silk and satin brocade, and carried a prayer-book. The bridal party proceeded to the front of the chancel steps, where the betrothal was given. Then, as the surpliced boy choir sang a gloria, the group slowly moved to the chancel rail, where the father gave away the bride.

From half-past seven to nine o'clock a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 96 Park avenue. The house was thronged with guests; and, as at the church, full evening dress was the rule. The toilets of the ladies were very elaborate and beautiful, and the costumes grouped together made as fine a picture as at any similar event Plainfield has ever seen. The house was thronged with guests, who were royally entertained, and who continuously showered congratulatory greetings and good wishes on the bride and groom.

The display of wedding gifts was large and of unusual beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Bristol will reside at Danielsonville, after a wedding trip in the South.

A Plainfielder Bettered by the Lymph.

Dr. John T. Fritts, of this city, is conducting a series of experiments with Prof. Koch's lymph on a well-known young man of Plainfield who dislikes to have his name published. The doctor secured the lymph through a friend connected with one of the New York hospitals and has made five injections, the first on Jan. 13. The results have been very flattering.

The patient is a young man nineteen years old. He had consumption in its primary stages. He comes from a consumptive family and his mother's six sisters died of it. He gave every symptom of the disease and an examination of the sputum betrayed indications of broken down lung tissue and the presence of numberless tubercle bacilli. These have almost entirely disappeared, the patient is stronger, coughs very little and raises less than he did before. In every way there are evidences of a successful result.

The Mayor Orders the Wires Cut.

Chief Engineer Doane and Street Commissioner Meeker, by order of Mayor Gilbert, this afternoon began clearing away the broken wires of the local district messenger service, the efforts of the Postal Telegraph Company not being speedy or effective enough to rid the city of the nuisance of electric wires dangling in the air. The other companies whose service suffered from the storm were very prompt to get the dangerous wires out of the people's way.

He Is Welcome Who Has the Price.

Salvation may be free, but it costs from ten to fifteen cents—according to the situation of the seat one chooses—to gain admittance to the Salvation Army meetings in town—an on Sunday, too. Suppose the churches were to compel payment from all witnessing their service! Does the Army hope to reach the fallen class by establishing a price of admission and thus putting their meetings on the same plane as entertainments and shows? This is the question thoughtful Plainfielders are asking.

Incorporating The Albion.

The Albion Hotel Company of Plainfield filed articles of incorporation with the Union County Clerk at Elizabeth yesterday. The company will begin business at the reconstructed Park House with a capital of $10,000, divided into one hundred shares whose par value is $100 each. The incorporators are Frank E. Miller, Charles W. Morse, Nelson Runyon and John J. H. Pollion.

Need Plainfield's Help.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

The ministers of Plainfield have taken up anew the crusade against the unholy partnership of pool selling and liquor selling. And, what is equally good, the newspapers in that city are giving their sermons the fullest publicity possible. Union county and the city of Elizabeth need Plainfield's help in this fight against these vicious influences.

Reached Plainfield First.

The New Jersey Postal Telegraph Company now have a wire working between this city and New Brunswick. The connection with Plainfield was the first New Brunswick obtained from the outside world since the storm.

The Woman's Union Recitest.

The parlor meeting held at the home of Mrs. P. Minton Smith, under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, yesterday afternoon, was a highly enjoyable social gathering. Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. John McNaughton and Mrs. E. J. Waring assisted in receiving. The piano selections were rendered by Miss Vinie French and Mrs. Waring, after which Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, the President of the W. C. T. U., presented as the speaker of the afternoon Mrs. Mary Grant Cramer of Orange, a sister of the late Gen. U. S. Grant. A member who was present says: "Her helpful, encouraging words will not be forgotten. She pictured the prohibition story of the Garden of Eden—when the command went forth 'Thou shalt not'—a shorter but no less important sentence in the government of the present day, and a reminder of the growing need of more zealous effort in stemming the tide which is creeping up slowly but surely over even the fourth commandment, and a tide which will all too soon undermine entirely the crumbling homes of our country—a country loyally fought for, and which our patriotic hearts would gladly keep untarnished by the awful abomination of intemperance."

Special programmes have been arranged for the Thursday afternoon meetings held in the W. C. T. U. rooms, and Mrs. Fernald, one of the earnest workers in the Union, urges the friends of the cause to go and see for themselves what plans and methods of work are followed.

Will Pedestrianize No More.

William Kellihan died recently at Rock Rapids, Ia., at the age of 82 years. When he was 70 years old he walked from Central New Jersey to Rock Rapids, and the next year walked back to Ohio, from there back to Illinois, and then to Central New Jersey again. The next Summer he walked back to Rock Rapids.

But It Won't Be.

(From The New Brunswick Home News.)

Plainfield people propose to unveil their soldiers monument on Decoration Day, 1892. New Brunswick's monument should be unveiled at least one year ahead of that proposed by our neighbors in Union county.

An Executive Meeting To-Night.

AN APOLOGY TO AARON KLINE.

A Chicago Paper Puts Itself Out to Express Regret Over the Unwitting Injury It Did.

(From the Chicago Evening Post.)

The story printed in Saturday's papers, including THE EVENING POST, reflecting upon the character of Frank Kline, of Arnold, Constable & Co., of New York, a portion of which represented that gentleman as having been taken to Klaner's morgue under the influence of a drug administered by a woman, turns out to have been wholly untrue. It is calculated to do irreparable damage to the character of a gentleman who is very widely known in Chicago, and who has stood at the very top of business circles here and in New York for many years.

Undoubtedly the story was malicious in its origin, and THE EVENING POST was made the unwilling medium of some one's venom. The gentleman referred to in the article is A. V. Kline, first assistant in the rug department of Arnold, Constable & Co., and the alleged incident fixed at once upon him, as he is the only man named Kline employed by that house. Mr. Kline has been with his present employers for seven years. He has always occupied a high position with his firm and has a custom in Chicago and the West that has always remained loyal to him and to his house. At Plainfield, N. J., where Mr. Kline lives, he occupies a high social position, and has been and is considered one of the sterling, upright men of the town. It is always to be regretted when an injustice is done anyone by a newspaper, but THE EVENING POST doubly regrets the unwitting injury done to a man of Mr. Kline's standing in this community and at his home. The injustice was done, however, and cannot be recalled, but THE EVENING POST takes pleasure in denying the outrageous story and in so far as it has power, in placing Mr. Kline innocent of even a shadow of the reflection cast upon him.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR THE CRESCENTS.

Elizabeth, Somerville, Fanwood, Bayonne and Westfield Have All Fallen Before the Plainfield Bowlers.

The Union League, a newly organized club of Westfield athletes and bowlers, sent its team of ten picked men to Plainfield, last evening, to roll against the Crescent Leagues. Like all who have bowled up against the Plainfielders, this season, the Westfielders went down.

Ex-Captain Davis rolled with the Crescents in place of Ditts who did not want to bowl against his old Westfield companions. Stitt was high man, followed by Thiers, Rogers and Pelletreau. The Westfielders were much disappointed at not being able to get a lead, but the Crescents started off with 168 in the first frame which is more than has been rolled before in one frame by themselves or any team they have bowled against this season.

In their fifth frame the Westfielders made a gallant spurt. Of the last seven men six made strikes, and they pulled their score up to within eighteen of the Plainfielders. But in their next frame only Vail of the Crescents broke and Plainfield's lead advanced again. F. R. Stevens was umpire. The score was:

No Wonder Mr. Daft's Barometer Was Low Spirited.

Leo Daft noticed the other day, that his barometer was lower than he had known it to be in many years. He was of course very apprehensive about the weather, as the instrument was one of the finest made and had proved its thorough accuracy a thousand times.

He expected either a destructive storm ashore or a fierce gale at sea, and anxiously watched the sky all day. But no unusual atmospheric disturbance occurred, nor was the weather anything but seasonable. Mr. Daft was puzzled that his costly and true barometer should suddenly bear false witness. He decided, however, that he would have to part with it.

But he has since changed his mind and is thinking, instead, of buying that same barometer a new coat of nickle plate. A few days ago Mr. Daft learned that during the afternoon before the morning when he noticed the unprecedented depression in the spirits of the barometer, his boys playing in the hall had thrown a ball against the instrument with such force as to knock a pint or less of its mercurial insides out. That would be enough to make anybody low spirited.

A Big Bridge Over the Central.

The abutments of the Lehigh Valley railroad, where the proposed road is to cross the New Jersey Central at Greenville, are completed, and everything is now in readiness for the construction of the massive iron bridge that is to span the place. The trestle is completed on each side of the Central tracks.

I HAVE been troubled with chronic catarrh for years. Ely's Cream Balm is the only remedy among the many that I have used that affords me relief.—E. W. Willard, Druggist, Joliett, Ill.

I HAVE been troubled with catarrh for ten years and have tried a number of remedies, but found no relief until I purchased a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. I consider it the most reliable preparation for catarrh and cold in the head. —Geo. E. Crandall, P. M., Quonochawntaug, R. I.

A Plainfield Composer Suffers as Has Many Others.

T. W. King, of Bay street, this city, a well-known newspaper man, playwright and musical composer, makes to a New York paper a very common complaint, as follows:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 22, 1891.

Editor of The Dramatic News:

Do you know of any other business in the world in which such slack methods and such slight courtesy prevail as in that of dramatic affairs? Letters written to managers, to agents, to actors remain unanswered, even when stamps are enclosed for replies. Sometime ago—in October—at a manager's request I left with him the manuscript score of a comic opera, in which I am interested. In January—this month—I wrote him, care of the Broadway Theatre where his company was, requesting his opinion of the work, or a return of the score, or both. To this he paid not the slightest attention, and still has my property in his possession. Were I in the furniture business and had I sent him, say an onyx table on approval and he acted thus, what would his retention of the article be called? There is altogether too much of this sort of thing in the profession. It does not take long to answer a letter, but managers and others are either without courtesy, or that knowledge of les convenances that demands recognition. I wrote a well-known dramatic critic a letter several years ago, requesting some information, and enclosed a stamp for a reply. The gentleman in question ignored the communication entirely—and kept the stamp. As my opinion of him is worth about two cents, I consider that I am entitled to keep it, as I have made him full payment for it. I may add that I have had an identical experience with a prominent New York manager. Won't you treat this subject editorially? I am sure you can recall some such occurrences in your career as author and journalist.

Wishing you all honor and success, I am, sir, very truly yours,

T. W. KING.

Compulsory Voting.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

The duties of the citizen to the State are all morally compulsory, and most of them are legally compulsory. A man is compelled by law to serve as a petit juror and grand juror, he is compelled to pay his taxes, compelled to allow his diseased cattle to be slaughtered, compelled to have his children educated—all for the good, safety and perpetuity of the State. But the highest moral function of all, that of exercising his judgment at the ballot box, the function upon which the whole fabric of the government rests,—that he is not required to perform. He can do as he likes about that. He can let others govern. He is not required to take any part in the affairs of State.

And the result is, he doesn't. Fifty thousand didn't in the State of New Jersey last year, the very fifty thousand whose judgments were good but whose patriotism was an abomination because it was dead. The law to compel citizens to vote is a law demanded by the State and the Nation. The highest interests of the commonwealth will never be subserved, under a republican form of government, until every man qualified to cast a ballot shall yield the State the benefit of his judgment at each and every election.

She is Really an Actress.

Elsie Leslie, who was the original Little Lord Fauntleroy, and who appears at Music Hall Monday evening, (first time here) as the Prince and the Pauper in Mark Twain's story of that name, is a wonderful child. She is really an actress—a natural and cultivated artist, although scarcely eleven years old. There is nothing of the juvenile amateur or mere reciter about her. Her memory is phenomenal, and she fits into the parts she assumes with such naturalness and skill that her audiences are charmed and astonished. The play is exceedingly interesting and admirably adapted from Mark Twain's well-known story. The company, like all Daniel Frohman ever sends out, is strong and well-balanced.

The Fanwoods Doing Worse and Worse.

The bowling contest between the second team of the Elizabeth Athletic Club and the Fanwoods, at Fanwood, Monday evening, resulted as follows:

Canned Fruits Never Lower.

On account of the scarcity of fruits in this part of the country, people are laboring under the false impression that canned fruits are high, but it is a mistake. Most of the Plainfield merchants are selling them as low as last year's prices. The reason assigned for this is that the demand is so light owing to the scare of high prices that they are able to buy them at reasonable prices and are giving the people the benefit. On this subject, in a new advertisement to-day, J. F. MacDonald has something to say.

Love thy neighbor as thyself, and when you see one with a bad cough advise him to buy a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. Price 25 cents a bottle.

There is nothing in the world which will give prompter relief to all sufferers from neuralgia than Salvation Oil. Price only 25 cents a bottle.

Things at the Theatres.

"Guido Ferranti" is the title of a new play of Italian life which Lawrence Barrett has just given New Yorkers. Nat Goodwin and Jimmy Powers also opened in the Metropolis in new plays, on Monday night, the former in "The Nominee" and the latter in "A Straight Tip."

"Claudius Nero" and the lions have been resurrected and are once more an attraction of New York's theatricals. This is the piece which enjoyed a sensational run at Niblo's some months ago and collapsed through the peculiar business methods of one of its projectors.

No character, perhaps, could afford a playwright more interesting possibilities than that of the man whose business is conducted within a store over the doors of which hang the puzzling yet perfectly expressive three golden balls. Strange to say, though, until a few months since this peculiar gentleman of a more peculiar commerce escaped the prolific pens of the writers of plays. The principal character of "Noah's Ark," the new local melodrama to be seen at Niblo's, New York, after the run of "Babes in the Wood" a fortnight hence, will be that of a Hebrew pawnbroker whom the playmakers will at least reproduce with all his interesting peculiarities and surroundings.

Clay M. Greene, who wrote "Bluebeard, Jr.," "The Golden Giant" and several other successes; Gus Thomas, author of "The Burglar," "A Woman of the World" and "Reckless Temple;" Max Freeman, who wrote "Claudius Nero," and a prominent dramatic writer of Boston, are all busy constructing "A High Roller," the new play which will blend in a happy combination all the elements of spectacle, farce and comedy, and be sent on tour next season by E. G. Gilmore, part owner and manager of the Academy, New York, and Alex. Comstock, business manager of that house.

So successful has the first venture with the English pantomime proven in this country, that Manager E. G. Gilmore, who is now enjoying an immense success at Niblo's, New York, with "Babes in the Wood," has arranged for the production at his theatre during the holidays of next year, of "Beauty and the Beast," the latest London pantomime, and one declared by the English critics to be the grandest offering of its character ever presented at the historic Drury Lane.

Literary Notes.

J. B. Lippincott Company will bring out next week a new number of their American Novel Series entitled "The Romance of a Spanish Nun," by Alice Montgomery Baldy. The story is said to be well told and to possess many features that will gain the favor of that class who seek in novel reading a pleasing diversion, rather than a discussion of knotty social, political and religious problems.

The succeeding number of this series, "An Exceptional Case," will appear in the course of a few weeks. It is from the pen of Mrs. Itti Kinney Reno whose "Miss Breckenridge" gave novel readers quite a pleasurable surprise a year or so ago. It is said that the new story possesses equally popular characteristics with its predecessor, and will win new laurels for the author.

Two volumes of verse are also announced for early issue from the press of J. B. Lippincott Company, they are entitled respectively "Bohemia and Other Poems," by Isabella T. Aitken, and "Dramatic Sketches and Poems" by L. J. Block, already known to the public through previous poetical works. It is said that both books contain excellent examples of versification and give evidence of true poetic genius and independence of thought.

—A gentleman who advertised in THE PRESS of last evening, had seven answers this morning.

Terrible Position of a Car Coupler.

RED BANK, N. J., Jan. 29.—John Abbott, a brakeman on a New Jersey Southern freight train, was in the act of coupling cars and walking backward, when he fell, having caught his right foot in a frog. The cars ran back on him and cut off his foot, crushing his leg in a frightful manner to the thigh. He died two hours later.

Awaiting the Court's Decision.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The argument for the British government in the Behring Sea case has been concluded in the United States Supreme Court, and the matter is now in the hands of the Court for decision.

The Increased Representation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Senators Davis and Washburn, of Minnesota, after making a careful canvass of both Houses, are satisfied that the former's amendment, making the representation in the House 359 instead of 356, as now proposed, will be adopted. The increase will give one additional member to Minnesota, one to Arkansas and one to Alabama.

The Contest for Farwell's Seat.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—A special from Springfield, Ills., says: "It looks as if a break in the balloting may come at any time. The grangers are being deluged with petitions from branches of the Alliance, urging them to stop the waste of public money and time, and agree upon some available candidate. The Republicans have submitted a proposition to them to drop Oglesby for Judge Gresham.

GUINEA PIGS ENOUGH.

How They Are Raised for Experimental Purposes.

There is not the least danger of a scarcity of guinea pigs, despite the fact that hundreds of them are being sacrificed daily on the altar of science. The demand created by the extensive manufacture of Koch's curative lymph has not affected the local market in the least. The harmless little animals are wonderfully prolific, and two or three healthy pair can easily furnish enough subjects for a small army of doctors to experiment with.

The usual price, says the Philadelphia Record, one dollar and fifty cents to two dollars a pair, has undergone no increase, though Philadelphia dealers are in constant receipt of inquiries from producers in regard to the probability of an excessive future demand. The dealers, in turn, are giving close scrutiny to the matter of tuberculosis cure in order to give timely notice to producers, but it is authoritatively stated that, even in case of sudden increased demand, the scarcity of the scientifically important animals could not be of long duration. The guinea pigs' litters, too, are usually large, and the general oddity of the little creature shows itself in the fact that an odd number of young are always born at a time. Guinea pig twins and quadruplets are unheard of, five small ones being the rule.

It was with surprise that animal dealers learned of the discovery in pathology that the gentle rodent contains elements capable of successful warfare with the rapacious bacillus tuberculosis, and a seller of pets said that no one but a genius could have deduced from the lymphatic temperament of the guinea pig the fact that from it could be derived lymph of sufficient activity to combat the micro-organism of consumption.

The guinea pigs sold in Philadelphia are of two varieties, the smooth haired and the rough haired or Abyssinian. They are technically known as "cavies," and the smooth haired "cavy," being cheaper, is usually found in the shops and used for scientific purposes.

Jefferson and the University medical colleges dispose of fifty pairs each during the year, and they are the favorite subjects of private vivisectors, who timidly refrain from taking their fingers by handling rats and other low-down quadrupeds used in experimental medicine. The cavy farm has never been run to its fullest capacity, which is declared by the proprietors to be limited only by the size of the barn used for breeding purposes.

The pigs begin to breed at the age of two months, and a well-constructed pair are capable of producing three litters a year. Each succeeding litter is composed of a larger number of young than the preceding one, so that it often happens that a gray old pair will present their owner with as many as eleven little ones at one litter.

The common cavies are a product of domestication, and it is said that their wild relatives which swarm in Uruguay and Brazil are vastly different from the cultivated variety, and would be useless for experimental purposes. The attractive colors even of the guinea pig are the result of interbreeding of different wild varieties, and, until use was made of the animal for scientific research, were its only claim to interest. Neither its flesh nor fur are put to use, and attempts to use the offensive and defenseless quadruped for bait in hunting sports have always proved failures. The idea that the presence of the cavy in a house is sufficient to drive away rats and mice lacks confirmation, and belongs to the same class as the story that if a guinea pig be lifted by the tail its eyes will fall out. The optical organs of the creature appear protruding enough to drop from their sockets on slight provocation, but careful search fails to reveal the presence of a tail.

The First Telegraph Line.

There are but very few outside of this immediate vicinity, says the Brandon (Vt.) Union, that are aware of the fact that the first telegraphic line in the world for transmitting signals by electricity over a wire was erected in Brandon and by a Brandon man. Yet such was the case, and this town has the honor of being the first spot where this mighty invention of modern times was put to practical use. A Brandon man named Thomas Davenport and a Mr. Smalley, now living at Forestdale, Vt., had a wire erected between their residences, on which were transmitted messages as far back as 1840. Mr. Davenport afterward went to New York, and it is asserted that Morse met him and that his telegraph was simply an improvement of Davenport's discovery.

A Buddhistic Encyclopedia.

A work of great historical interest and peculiar value will shortly be deposited in the British Museum. It will come, says the New York Commercial, through the Asiatic Society of Bengal, which has succeeded in procuring it under somewhat singular circumstances. Through the agency of a native emissary, and after many years' correspondence, the society has secured from Thibet a copy of the "Jangym," a monster encyclopedia of Thibetan Buddhism. It comprises two hundred and twenty-five volumes, each of which is two feet long by six inches thick. Three thousand rupees formed the price for the work, which was formerly in the possession of a Buddhist monastery in Thibet.

Damages by a Kiss.

A court in the staid old German town of Gotha has been called upon to decide a novel question. A gentleman while playing cards with a party of friends in a beer-hall was assaulted by a pretty waiter-girl with malice aforethought and with a smacking kiss upon his manly cheek. The matter was at first treated as a joke, but turned out to be a rather serious affair for the kissee, when his wife heard about it. His irate spouse would not believe that the kiss was an unprovoked affair, so far as her liege lord was concerned, and in order to vindicate himself he has brought a suit against the girl for damages on the ground that the kiss had injured his reputation for morality.

THE CHINESE JOSS.

Religious Observances of the Mongolians in America.

The Idols Are Set Up in This Country Amidst Costly and Pretentious Surroundings and Are Worshiped Constantly.

While the evils of cheap coolie competition with American labor may be but little felt or understood in the Eastern States, it is causing much worry and trouble here, and the subject of Chinese exclusion is of all-absorbing interest in all the Pacific coast States. But without discussing this topic, writes F. M. Harper in the Chicago Inter Ocean, it may be of interest to know what influence the joss exerts upon his devotees when absent from the Flowery Kingdom. As the wily Celestial only comes to this country for "what there is in it," and expects to return to his native land as soon as he has "made his pile," he rarely settles down to become a citizen of the United States. With no intermarriage or social intermingling with the white race, he imitates our ways "for profit only," but clings to the customs and religion of his fathers with the greatest tenacity.

Hated by the average Californian, cheated and maltreated on every side, with his keen imitative ability he soon becomes an adept in all the sly tricks that have been practiced upon him, and, taking every kind of abuse without a murmur, he rolls up the dollars, while his persecutors are holding indignation meetings. A trifling incident will show the sagacity of the "tricky Chinee." My wife intrusted the week's wash to an intelligent-looking laundryman one Monday not long since upon his promise, given in excellent English, that the clean clothes should be brought to the house on the following Saturday. But, failing to keep his word, my wife repairs to the "washee-house" on the following Monday and upbraids the Chinaman for breaking his promise. But lo! the scamp has forgotten his English and says: "No sa-be what lady want." My wife says: "Why did you not bring the wash Saturday?" "Me no sa-be; bling clothes to-mollow." That was all the English he seemed to know. Very convenient sometimes not to understand.

As a knowledge of the English language is very essential to the Chinese in their business with the Americans, they are very glad to attend the mission schools and they make very apt scholars. Whether many of them become genuine converts to Christianity through these schools or not I am of course unable to judge, but certain it is it pays the Chinese merchant or laborer to be a professed Christian. But the Celestial coming to our hospitable shores never forgets to bring his "joss" and all the accessories for his worship. As these pagans worship their forefathers, the household god or joss represents some one of the most distinguished ancestors of the family to which the joss belongs. In small settlements or isolated groups of Chinese the household joss must answer every purpose for worship, but in the larger towns and cities a room or building is set off for a joss house, and upon the decorations of this is lavished a good deal of expense, if the Chinese of that community are prosperous, and they mostly are. San Jose has what is said to be the most beautiful joss house in California. A very respectable two-story brick building has been erected in Heinleinville (one of the Chinatowns of the place, San Jose has two Chinatowns), and has been ornamented with very elaborately carved and gilded decorations and furnishings, brought from China, and several josses have been placed in the niches prepared for them, and last winter the building was dedicated in grand style, a whole trainload of Chinese coming over from San Francisco to assist in the ceremonies. And now the altar fires are kept constantly burning, and the atmosphere of the whole building is laden with the fragrance of burning sandal wood and spices.

Curious to know the manner of worship, I have learned that only on special holidays (four or five times a year) are there any important ceremonies, or united worship. On those occasions there is a good deal of blowing of horns, and pounding of drums, and burning of offerings and incense, incantations by the priests, and a general feasting by all. As fear seems to be the predominating sentiment in the Chinese breast, rather than love, the incantations and other ceremonies are intended to scare the devil, rather than as a demonstration of reverence for the joss. But at other than these few stated times, the joss seems to be to the Chinese what the oracles were to the ancients. At any time of day, the devotee may go to the joss house, make his offering of food, or whatsoever he wishes to place upon the altar and then he consults the joss upon all subjects of interest, whether of business or sentiment. This he does in various ways. Upon the altar lie two blocks of wood, shaped like the halves of a kidney cut in twain, painted black without and red within. The worshiper expresses his desire and casts the blocks into the air. Upon the manner of their fall depends his answer. Another way: In a vase is a bundle of long narrow bamboo sticks, their sides covered with Chinese characters. The inquirer takes the vase in his hand and whirls it rapidly round and round, while to the joss he makes known his wishes. One or two bamboos will work up from the bundle and finally fall out, and in the writing on these is found the answer. This reminds one of the children's card game of fortune-telling. There is provision also for any guilty ones who wish to make confession of their sins, as books are provided in which the penitent records his own evil doings, after which the devil has no claim upon him until he sins again. The joss house in San Jose is certainly gorgeous. It is quite beyond my powers to describe. The josses are hideous, but the carved figures, and scrolls, and filagree work of the decorations, all covered with gold, silver and enamel, are very beautiful.

He bought one. Then his trousers bagged;
He ordered two new pair,
And then, strange fact! he noticed that

He had to get some ties to match;

Value of Changing Advertisements.

Picking up an old journal the other day I found a statement to the effect that a certain patent medicine firm had not (at that time) changed the wording of its advertisements for thirteen years. While I am a thorough believer in judicious advertising I doubt if such advertising as that would accomplish any good after a few months of publication. No doubt ninety-nine readers out of a hundred would throw aside the paper at sight of the familiar heading with the exclamation, "The same old story." Though publishers may save considerably in composition bills by permitting advertisements to "stand" in their columns for a year or more, they must lose considerable in the ill effect upon other would be advertisers.

It is to the interest of publishers that their patrons should find that "it pays to advertise," and those advertising columns are most attentively perused which are most frequently changed. A publisher who allows an advertisement to stand without change in his columns for over three months is doing his own business an absolute harm. Advertisements are being looked upon as news, and as such they should be fresh and interesting. Invite your patrons to make frequent changes in their announcements. It will pay them, and this will have a reflex action upon your own receipts.—National Publisher and Printer.

A New Profession.

The writing of advertisements is assuming the dignity of a profession. Much of the style of writing is charmingly seductive, and withal contains no little information of a scholarly nature, as many a reader has discovered after perusing a half column with quickening interest to find in the end how he may become a Hercules in strength or a beauty by the use of certain elixirs! There is more money in the writing of advertisements than in legitimate literature. Agencies solicit the writing of advertisements and guarantee appropriate illustrations, and the insertion of same in whatever newspaper or periodical the advertiser may desire. Most of the celebrated advertisers write their own notices. "It is only needful to repeat a thing often enough," says Goethe, "and everybody will end by believing it."—L. R. McCabe in Chicago Herald.

Woman's Influence.

What is so good an advertisement as the confidential advice of a woman of influence? I know nothing which approaches it. You can remember a dozen books which have been made by this sort of feminine recommendation. It sold a hundred thousand copies of Marion Harland's "Common Sense Cook Book," and more copies of "Little Lord Fauntleroy;" it made The Ladies' Home Journal, and it makes the fortunes of baby food people every year. Suppose your child is ill, and Mrs. Smith tells your wife that Canteloupe's food saved her baby's life, a hundred dollar bill would not be too much to pay for a box or bottle of the food, and so it goes.—Art in Advertising.

Fussy's Long Fast.

On Feb. 19 a live cat was dug out of a ruined building in Lynn, Mass. It is now known beyond a doubt that this animal had been confined in the ash pit of an old fashioned brick oven ever since the fire, Nov. 26, 1889. Instances of cats living without food or drink have been chronicled, but this one seems to have distanced all others. The old oven has not been used for over forty years, consequently nothing remains there for fodder. It may have been that mice and rats were confined with kitty and she made herself comfortable while they lasted. The place where the cat was confined is such that, when the smoking debris fell at the time of the fire, the hottest of the ruins were only a few feet distant. The animal, when released, could only walk a few steps at a time without falling over on her side.—New York World.

How to Advertise.

The question of method in advertising is one having infinite range. The matter is one of the very first importance, and cannot be too carefully studied. One thing about it that may be set down as true is that every man's advertising, in its language and style, should be characteristic—characteristic of the man, characteristic of his stock, characteristic of his commercial position. For every man has his peculiarities of development. When he speaks we know it is he, though we may not be looking at him, and his advertisement should represent him like his voice. He should put his experience, his industry, his enterprise, into his advertising. It is astonishing to see how merchants who are tireless in their industry—at the store early and late, close buyers, eager seekers after business, quick to embrace opportunities for enlargement of lines and extension of trade—it is surprising to see how such business men continue their advertising in the language of the old rut, and announce in the same words and the same type that did duty for them years ago that "B. Franklin (or any other man, the name doesn't matter) is still to be found at the old stand, with a choice stock of dry goods, notions, etc., etc." (The two etc.'s are indispensable in an "ad" of this kind.)

There is another and a better way to do: If a merchant has any snap, any energy, in himself, let him show it in his advertising. If he has any bargains in his store, let him say so. If he has connections which enable him to sell better goods, or the same goods at lower prices, than anybody else, let him say that; say it plainly, strongly and in a way that will carry conviction of truthfulness; and on the same principle that leads him to treat visitors to his store so that they will call again, let him write his advertisement so that his next advertisement will be looked for; if you get a person's attention once try to hold it. The whole thing is summed up in this: One should study advertising as he does every other department of his business. Advertising is a science, simple, it is true, as to its main elements, but requiring more thought and system than many of our business men have been accustomed to give it.

The Art of Advertising.

Advertising seems to be an art yet to be discovered by some people. That is, the practical part of it. A constant stream of water from one or more fire engines will soon extinguish or get under control a very large fire, while a few buckets of water, dashed on here and there, have little or no effect. The modern fire department is practical, and has outgrown the old bucket system; and so with modern advertising—plenty of it, used in a practical, common sense and judicious manner, pays.

If you want to catch a certain kind of fish you use a certain kind of bait; not all fish bite at all kinds of bait. Not all people respond to every advertisement. The newspaper is a medium indispensable to the majority of advertisers, because of its wide and repeating circulation. As a promoter of trade and profit newspaper advertising is no longer an open question; that is, when done in a practical and intelligent manner, and pays because of its effectiveness and cheapness.—Beatrice (Neb.) Democrat.

Spasmodic Advertising.

We all recognize that as between the fellow who works "by fits and starts" and the chap who plods along and keeps at it steadily, the plodder gets there every time. The spasmodic fellow may create an occasional impression, but the results of his fitful labors are dissipated in the intervals.

The occasional display of fireworks only serves the purpose of preventing his being forgotten altogether; while the man who works, and keeps working, constantly improves his position and prospects.

So it is with advertising. It is the repeated "ad" and the sustained effort that tell. We don't mean the "ad" that is never changed, but the one that is ever changing, but never omitted! The wise advertiser keeps always before the people to whom he desires to sell his wares. When you want to quit doing business stop advertising, or advertise only "once in a while."

Not a Charity.

In any just view of a quarter of a century of journalistic work the most prominent feature, and one giving great satisfaction to respectable publishers, is that printing a newspaper has become recognized as a business and not a charity.—Owen Scott.

THE FIRST BABY.

Usually a Tyrannical Being, with the Freedom of the House.

The first baby in a family is usually a privileged and tyrannical being, for whom the entire house, from attic to cellar, is an open domain, and the inhabitants thereof humble and willing slaves; but when his or her brothers and sisters arrive to share these rights and honors, those long suffering elders rise in mutiny against a trio or quartette of infantile rulers, and declare their authority and influence are to be respected only within the limited bounds of a certain room known as the nursery, says a writer in the Illustrated American.

Now, in the average American home, where mothers are confronted with the necessity of providing a play-ground and sanctum in which to accommodate her accumulating family of little ones, her choice is, in nine cases out of ten, for that apartment for which she feels she has the least need for other purposes. The back room, perhaps, it will be, of the second or third floor, that looks out on unattractive back courts and white, board divisions, between paved yards, where melancholy displays of the week's washing flap in the breeze, and where the sun is not too generous of his rays. Then, if she be an industrious mother and capable housekeeper, whose abhorrence is dust and disorder, she relegates to the so-called nursery certain tables, chairs, curtains and a carpet that have been banished from the other rooms, and by reason of their faded colors and battered varnish are regarded as sufficiently serviceable to enjoy a miserable old age at the mercy of the children. Now, into such a bare, colorless and unattractive apartment, babies, with their nurses, and loud-lunged, strong-limbed little boys and girls are required to spend three-fourths of their infantile days. There they play, and perhaps have a larger part of their meals seven days out of each week, and the mother vaguely wonders why it is that, after awhile, as the babies grow older, they prefer any other room in the house to their nursery; that there are wry faces and impatient words when they are told to run and stay in their own room; and, for that matter, the children themselves could not explain this preference.

MARIE ANTOINETTE.

How She Made Peacock's Feathers Popular Throughout Europe.

Marie Antoinette had as much influence upon the fashions of her time as any woman who ever lived, writes Tom Masson in an exchange. When she entered Paris in 1779 she waved her hand to a milliner—one Mlle. Bertin—who made her fortune by it. This Queen was one day making her toilet, when she discovered some peacock's feathers which had been placed on her dressing table by accident. Mechanically she picked one up and put it in her hair. The effect was so pleasing that she added another. She called for more, and on leaving her dressing-room astonished every one by the originality of her head dress. The King admired, all Europe applauded, and thus the custom of wearing feathers spread.

In 1775 she was one day dressed in a material of brown lustering, when the King observed, in a happy moment, that it looked to him like fleas. Immediately the color of fleas became fashionable, and suen was the rage that the different shades between old and young fleas were separated and the whole gamut of fleadom was run. Finally the venders of silk presented a new set of samples to the Queen, of a gray color, and the King this time remarked of one that it was the color of the Queen's hair. This color quickly superseded all others, and in order to get the exact shade some of her Majesty's hair was obtained through bribery and sent to Gobelins, Lyons and other places where the silks were made.

AN OLD-TIME NICKNAME.

The Name of Puritan Was Used as a Term of Reproach.

"The name of Puritan was itself originally a nickname," says a writer in the New York Times, "neither accepted nor acceptable to those to whom it was applied, but first devised by Sanders, the Jesuit, to cast a reproach upon the persons and ways of reformers, to render them suspicious and odious to the State.'

"I give this on the authority of one of the most eminent of the early emigrants to Massachusetts, where he joined the elder Winthrop and shared with him that distrust, if not hatred, of democracy which was and is the touchstone of the real, original and only genuine New-England Puritan, as I must call him, although in those days the name had not been accepted. I refer to John Cotton, 'Bachelor in Divinity and Teacher of the Church of Christ at Boston, in New England.'

"It was very near the middle of the seventeenth century when this conspicuous divine, resenting the application of the name to himself and his associates by Roger Williams, significantly added to the account given above of the history of the nickname Puritan, that 'the righteous hand of the Lord struck him with madness who invented the name—nor doth he delight in them that delight to take up a reproach against the innocent.'"

Lacking in Common Sense.

At an informal reception held after Mr. Henry Stanley's lecture in Scranton the other evening, says the Boston Post, a gentleman remarked to the explorer: "One of the things in your book, 'In Darkest Africa,' that interested me most was your vivid account of the sufferings of your party in 'Starvation Camp,' but one thing I never could understand. When your men were dying for want of food, why didn't they fish, since they were so near the river?" Mr. Stanley's face was a study. He looked at his questioner as if dazed by a blow. "Why," he exclaimed, and then hesitated in evident surprise and consternation for several moments, "why, I don't believe any one ever thought of it!" His questioner thereupon suggested that the next time he formed an exploring party he should take a Yankee with him.

Recovered Health and Happiness.

LAWRENCE, MASS., Dec. '88.

I was suffering for 12 years from a nervous disease more or less; tried everything I heard of, spared neither money nor time to get medicine, but none had the desired effect, until Rev. Sagg recommended the Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, of which I used but three bottles and completely recovered my health and happiness. I hope others will be benefited by the remedy as much as I was. MARY SENSE.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers of nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

MR. WINDOM DEAD!

The Secretary of the Treasury Stricken With Heart Disease at a Banquet.

FELL DYING IN HIS CHAIR.

Prostrated Just as He Had Finished a Brilliant Speech.

PRESIDENT HARRISON SHOCKED.

He Calls on Mrs. Windom and Notifies Her of the Sad News.

She Had Just Left a Reception Held at Postmaster-General Wanamaker's—The President Accompanied by His Cabinet Officers—Mrs. Windom and Her Daughters Distracted—The Secretary's Remains Taken to Washington To-Day. Surprise and Sorrow at the Capital Not Confined to Party.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—The sudden death of Secretary Windom of the Treasury, while at the dinner of the Board of Trade and Transportation at Delmonico's last night, caused the immediate adjournment of that body a few minutes after ten o'clock.

The Secretary was the first speaker of the evening The dinner which began at six o'clock was completed shortly after nine p. m., and the Secretary arose to speak. He entertained the diners with a most elaborate oration and sat down amidst the loud applause of his auditors. Judge Arnoux then got up and was in the midst of his speech introducing ex-Secretary Bayard when somebody cried "Look at Secretary Windom!"

A Cry of Horror Arose.

The speech was broken short and every eye was turned in the direction of that gentleman. He had collapsed in his chair and was falling to the floor. His face was ghastly and a cry of horror arose from the late festive revellers.

There was an immediate rush on the part of all hands towards Mr. Windom's chair, but several doctors who were guests at the dinner got there first and drove the others back.

SECRETARY WILLIAM WINDOM.

Dr. Robinson bent down and making a close examination of the prostrate form discovered that the heart was still beating.

Applying Electric Shocks.

By his orders the dying Secretary was carried into the dish room adjoining the banqueting hall, and there placed on a table. Messengers were hastily dispatched for electric batteries, and as many as four were applied to his body, which was rapidly growing cold.

It was exactly 10:05 when this occurred, and for six minutes the shocks were applied incessantly but without success. At 10:11 p. m. Judge Arnoux came out of the dish room and announced to the diners that Secretary Windom, whom they had had the pleasure of hearing only a few minutes before, had breathed his last.

"He is dead!"

This was the fearful announcement that was sent through the gayly bedecked banquet hall, around which still hung like a funeral pall the smoke of the after-dinner cigars.

"He is Dead!"

The words went to the heart of every man who heard them. Could they believe it? The brilliant orator of a few minutes before, aglow with enthusiasm, predicting his future policy in the Treasury, was only a mass of clay. His voice was forever silenced, and his last words were for his country.

Every man looked at his neighbor with blanched cheeks. Death, that awful messenger, had descended upon their feast, and taken from their midst one of the nation's chief officers.

Died of Heart Disease

The Secretary had succumbed to an attack of the heart. He had been for a long time a sufferer from heart disease and only last Monday was visited by a shock, which passed away without causing him much inconvenience.

When it was officially announced that Secretary Windom was dead, Secretary Tracy, who was a guest at the banquet, at once went to the nearest telegraph office and sent a message to President Harrison, informing him of the sad event and requesting him to inform Mrs. Windom and have her start immediately for New York.

The Funeral Arrangements.

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Undertaker Huyler, of 127 East 27th street, took charge of the body, and at an early hour this morning, at the direction of Proprietor Vilers, of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, took the body to parlors Nos. 24 and 25, on the third floor of the building, facing on 23d street.

Mrs. Windom and daughters arrived on an early train, accompanied by the members of the Cabinet. They were escorted to the death chamber by Secretary Foster.

At 9 o'clock it was announced later. Secretary's remains would be taken to Washington this afternoon, where all arrangements for the funeral would be made.

Gen. Logan C. Murray, president of of the United States National Bank, and J. Edward Simmons, president of the Fourth National Bank, said that efforts would be made to-day to have representatives of all the banks belonging to the Clearing House Association of New York accompany the body to Washington or at least attend the funeral at some future time which

WASHINGTON SHOCKED.

The President Notifies Mrs. Windom of Her Husband's Death.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The news of Secretary Windom's sudden death came to the President and his Cabinet officers and their families like a pall, at the dinner and musical entertainment given at his home last night by Postmaster-General Wanamaker to the President and Cabinet.

The guests had assembled; had enjoyed the excellent menu, and were being entertained by a soul-inspiring musical programme, when the sad news came in a dispatch to the Postmaster-General, Secretary and Mrs. Blaine and all the Cabinet officers or some members of their families, excepting Secretary Windom and Attorney-General Miller were present. Mrs. Windom, her two daughters and a lady friend were also present.

When the sad news came, at the suggestion of Secretary Blaine, Mrs. Windom's friend was informed of the Secretary's feigned serious illness, and she was requested to accompany the Secretary's wife and daughters home.

As soon as Mrs. Windom left the Wanamaker mansion the brilliant and joyous entertainment came to an end and the guests dispersed.

President Harrison's Grief.

The President and Mrs. Harrison had started home a few moments before the sad news came, only to be apprised of it when they reached the Executive Mansion.

"Oh, my God!" said the President, placing both his hands at the side of his head with a despairing gesture, while his face became deathly pale.

The President turned half away, and an audible sob escaped him. The man was deeply moved, and sensibly affected by a strong and sincere emotion.

"Just to think," he said, walking a few steps away as if in a reverie, "not 30 minutes ago I left his wife and daughters at a merry party at Mr. Wanamaker's."

"My God! but this is terrible!" he cried again.

"I shall go to Mr. Wanamaker's and take Mrs. Windom home, and then communicate the sad news to her."

"Does Mrs. Harrison know of Mr. Windom's death?" the President was asked.

"Yes, I told her, and she is very much affected."

At this moment the President's carriage drove up and he stepped in.

"Drive to Mr. Wanamaker's," he said to the coachman, "Mr. Windom is dead."

The coachman whipped up his horses as the President sank back in the cushions, and the carriage dashed around the driveway and up Madison place toward the residence of the Postmaster-General.

When he entered the house, the President, fearing that his arrival might awaken suspicion, was shown into the ante-room, where he was speedily joined by several of his Secretaries.

About five minutes after Mrs. Windom left, the President accompanied by Secretaries Blaine and Proctor and Postmaster-General Wanamaker, drove to the Windom mansion on Massachusetts avenue, and there the President broke the news to her. A scene of desolate and indescribable grief followed.

About fifteen minutes past 12 the President returned to the White House. His face was ashy white and full of suffering. His eyes showed signs of an emotion that had not been controlled. In answer to a question the President said: "Mrs. Windom bore up like the brave woman that she is. But of course no one can understand her feelings."

STORY OF HIS LIFE.

Secretary Windom's Public Career and Services.

Secretary Windom was born in Belmont County, Ohio, May 10, 1827. He received an academic education, studied law at Mount Vernon, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1850. In 1852 he became prosecuting attorney for Knox County, and in 1855 he removed to Minnesota and soon afterwards was chosen to Congress from that State as a Republican, serving from 1859 to 1869. In that body he served two terms as chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and also was at the head of the special committee which visited the Western tribes in 1865, and of that on the conduct of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in 1867.

In 1870 he was appointed to the United States Senate to fill the unexpired term of Daniel S. Norton, deceased, and was subsequently chosen for the term that ended in 1877.

He was re-elected for the term that expired in 1883, but resigned in 1881 to enter the Cabinet of President Garfield as Secretary of the Treasury, but retired on the accession of President Arthur in the same year, and was elected by the Minnesota Legislature to serve the remainder of his term in the Senate. In that body Mr. Windom acted as chairman of the Committees on Appropriations, Foreign Affairs and Transportation. At the expiration of his term Mr. Windom went to New York and engaged in business in Wall street. He was in the midst of a prosperous career when Benjamin Harrison was elected President, and called him to his old position in the Cabinet. He hesitated to respond, but was finally prevailed upon to leave New York and go to Washington.

Surprise and Sorrow in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 30.—The news of the death of Secretary Windom, which reached here shortly after 10 o'clock, was received with great surprise and universal regret. Mr. Windom was the best known Minnesotian in public life, having settled here back in Territorial days. Mr. Windom, although a Minnesotian, has spent most of his life at the capital of the nation.

The Senate and House Adjourn.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—When the Senate and House met this morning, Secretary Windom's death was announced. After making arrangements for delegations to attend the funeral, both Houses adjourned.

Mrs. McKee, however, is now ill with a severe case of tonsilitis, which seems to be quite prevalent throughout the city at present. There is nothing serious about her ailment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The 14 Sioux Indians, and their interpreters, in charge of Special Agent Lewis, are carefully guarded at their boarding house and are not permitted to talk with any one. IN A BLAZING MINE

Eight Men Who Cannot Possibly Escape Death.

TRYING TO SMOTHER THE FIRE.

The Unfortunate Miners Cut Off from All Means of Exit.

It Is Not Known How the Fire Started. Twenty-Nine More of the Mammoth's Victims Buried—The Exact Number of Dead Reported at 107—The Inquest to be Held Thursday.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Mich., Jan. 30.—Eight unfortunate miners are imprisoned in the Chapin mine, which is now a blazing furnace.

The mine caught fire shortly after 6 o'clock last night, and just before the time for changing shifts. The flames were first discovered on the sixth level, and spread with amazing rapidity. Nearly all the shift succeeded in making their escape, but eight of them had all means of escape cut off and it is supposed by this time they have succumbed to the stifling smoke.

Inside of an hour dense volumes of smoke were pouring from four of the shafts. The tops of the shafts were covered as quickly as possible, in hopes that the fire might be smothered out, but it is regarded as extremely doubtful if this can be done. It is not regarded as at all possible that any of the imprisoned men will be rescued.

It is not known how the fire started.

THE MAMMOTH DISASTER.

The Coroner's Inquest Will be Held Next Thursday.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 30.—The exact number of dead removed from the Mammoth mine is 107. Twenty-nine victims were buried during the day. The body of another miner has been recovered and identified as George Mofford. It is the general impression that a number of bodies are yet in the mine covered with debris.

A large number of men are at work clearing out the mine. Mr. Frick was on the scene for the purpose of providing help to families in need. The undertakers have gone home, and the improvised morgue is deserted.

The damage to the mine is very slight, and will not exceed $1,500. The coroner's inquest will be held next Thursday.

STILL DEADLOCKED.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 30.—The deadlock seems no nearer a solution than it has been since the first. The debate is likely to continue all day, and then a recess will be taken until Tuesday, when the motion to adopt the minority report will be put before the House. There will be a strict party vote, and the motion will be lost.

Then the majority report, which in the face of the sworn returns, declares that the Democratic candidates were not elected, will come up for action without debate. On this as on the minority report the vote will be strictly partisan. The majority report will be adopted and its accompanying resolution declaring no election will be passed and sent to the Democratic Senate. That body will refuse to concur, and the situation will remain as it is to-day. This is the present outlook.

A MURDERER ARRESTED.

He Was Twice Convicted and Thrice Escaped—In Hiding 17 Years.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Jan. 30.—Jacob Staup, who 17 years ago was twice convicted of murder in the first degree, and who escaped from jail pending a third trial which had been granted on an appeal, and has been hiding ever since, is once more a prisoner. He will probably be tried again. He is 69 years old.

Staup was captured in the mountains last night, and lodged as the first prisoner in the new jail in Henry Clay township. He was found in the house of his son-in-law, a man named Little. Staup was arraigned for killing Alpheus Glover on July 16, 1873, in a quarrel.

THE BILL PASSED.

The Senate Adopts the House Apportionment Measure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Apportionment bill has passed through the Senate just as it came from the House, and without any fight.

The amendments offered in behalf of New York, Arkansas and Massachusetts were voted down by a strict party vote. The Apportionment bill provides that the number of Representatives in the 53d and succeeding Congresses shall be 356.

HE WILL STOP TRAINS.

Jersey City's Mayor Thinks Enough Persons Have Been Killed.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Jan. 30.—Mayor Cleveland has issued the following proclamation:

Superintendent Pennsylvania R. R. Co.:

After our interview, a short time since, I supposed that proper protection would be given at the street crossings, but it appears that you need to be brought to a realizing sense of the value of human life, and unless adequate protection be given at once I shall proceed to drastic measures in protecting our citizens from your murderous corporation.

You have not kept faith. You promised that flagmen, ample in numbers and equal to the emergency in intelligence, would be employed at once in the service, but it has not been done.

The men, such as they are, are overworked and underpaid. No such men can stand on their feet, or be alert and in a condition of anxiety of mind, twelve consecutive hours for $1 10 and be efficient.

Efficient men would not render such severe service for such compensation.

Unless assured within an hour that proper protection will be given, and the nature of the protection explained at this office to my satisfaction, I will deem the emergency great enough to justify taking the matter into my own hands to protect the lives of our people, and in doing that will stretch the law to its utmost limits, even if I have to stop the running of your trains at a speed across our streets. Respectfully yours,

ORESTES CLEVELAND.

LIBERALS AGITATED

An Unexpected Move by Sir John Pope Hennessey.

HE AMENDS GLADSTONE'S BILL.

The Entire Royal Family Included in the Religious Disabilities Measure.

England Excited Over the Bold Proposal—Dr. Parker Calls It an Assault on the Foundations of the British Constitution—The Nonconformists Aroused—Another Blow at the Irish Cause.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—Mr. Gladstone introduced his bill to remove the remaining political disabilities of Roman Catholics, by enabling members of that faith to hold the offices of Viceroy of Ireland and Lord Chancellor.

Sir John Pope Hennessey, in accordance with his announced intention, submitted an amendment proposing that the sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland be permitted to be a Roman Catholic should the sovereign see fit to adopt that faith. The amendment was received with cries of protest from all quarters, irrespective of party.

The announcement of Sir John's intention had already stirred to its very depths the conscience of Protestant England, and the Rev. Dr. Parker in the Temple services during the day condemned in the strongest language the assault, as he characterized it, on the foundations of the British Constitution. The Nonconformists everywhere are greatly excited, indeed much more than the Established Church people, who are not disposed to treat the matter as of serious importance.

A Serious Blow at the Irish Cause.

The Liberals are very much hurt, that Hennessy should have taken such a step without their consent, which, of course, would never have been given, and they connect his action with the circumstance that, since the opening of Parliament, he has been hobnobbing a good deal socially with his old friends, the Tories. Depending as the English Liberals do upon Nonconformist support, it is a question with some of them whether the action of Mr. Hennessy is not a more serious blow at the Irish cause in England than was the Parnell divorce case.

Mr. Gladstone hastened to oppose the Hennessy amendment, and in reply to an inquiry, he says that his bill has no relation, either in its words or its policy, to any conditions on which the royal family of England holds the crown of Great Britain. The Tories and their allies, the Dissenting Liberals, are unwilling, however, to look at the matter in that light, and they are holding forth everywhere that Gladstone has permitted himself to be made a tool of by those who desire to assail the Act of Settlement, and undo the work of the revolution of 1688.

FRANCE ALARMED.

The Grand Duke of Luxemburg's Visit to the Kaiser Not Friendly.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The approaching visit of the Grand Duke of Luxemburg to the German emperor is regarded with no little alarm in France, as there is no doubt that the object of the visit is to discuss the adoption of a military convention between Prussia and Luxemburg, and thus bring within the control of the Germans a place that has been, and can again be made, one of the strongest fortresses of Europe.

Instead of Prussia taking the initiative toward the military annexation of Luxemburg, the Kaiser has withheld from any proposition of the kind, determined apparently not to give France any grounds for complaint. But the Grand Duke himself is understood to be anxious for an arrangement that will place Luxemburg in line with the German Empire, and provide for the protection of the Duchy in the event of war.

Without some arrangement for defence, Luxemburg, should war arise between France and Germany, would be the prey of the first troops that would succeed in reaching it, and those would probably be French, for not much faith is placed by the Luxemburgers in the guarantee of their neutrality by the great powers, now that they are divorced from the crown of Holland.

The Pope Will Send the Golden Rose.

A PLAINFIELDER KILLED BY THE CARS.

Fatal Ending of a Pleasure Walk on a Railroad Bridge.

John Lewis King, formerly a resident of this city, where his parents still reside, was crushed to death yesterday noon on the Pensylvania railroad bridge crossing the Elizabeth river, near Rahway avenue, Elizabeth. King was forty-one years old and had been employed as a plumber and tinsmith in Smith's establishment on Parker street, Newark. He was not working yesterday, and started out for a short walk. As he was crossing the bridge a Lehigh Valley train came on the structure while an ther train appeared in an opposite direction. The only way King could save himself was by closely hugging the bridge railing. One car projected so far that it pinned him between its side and the railing. He was pushed along some distance and crushed almost to death.

King was taken to the City Hospital, where he died about ten minutes later. His wife did not know of his death when she reached the hospital, or that he was seriously hurt.

A messenger carried the news of the death to King's father, John S. King of 38 West Second street, at a meeting in Reform Hall last night.

Harry Roberts, David Krymer, Charles Geopfert, Bert Littell, Thatcher and Piker.

There was singing by Miss Bonnell and by Mr Roberts, with the old folks in chorus; also recitations and piano solos. "Refreshments," consisted of apples, gingerbread, doughnuts and water.

DEATH OF A GRAND OLD MAN.

JOB MALE, OCTOGENARIAN AND PHILANTHROPIST, BREATHES HIS LAST.

Peaceful Ending of a Tranquil but Busy Life—His Career a Public Benefaction; His Death a Public Sorrow—Eighty-Three Years of Earnest, Upright Living and Good Works—His Life-Story Full of Interest, and His Life-Work Worthy of Emulation—From the Toll-Gate to the Mayoralty—An Object-Lesson for Rising Youth.

Job Male is dead. The end came at half-past ten o'clock last night. As he had lived, so he died—peacefully, tranquilly, with a beatific smile illuming his venerable features. The tidings of his death have cast a shadow of grief over the hearts of the entire people. Beloved by all the community where he had so long been an upright citizen, a citizen full of honest purposes and good deeds, he had fittingly come to acquire that honorable characterization, Plainfield's Grand Old Man. His earthly career is an ensample for the rising generation; his departure is a bereavement which only time and tears and consolation from on High can heal.

Who did not know the Grand Old Man? His stature tall and commanding, his form erect and firm, in spite of the assailments of more than four-score years. His benevolent countenance, his snowy locks, his steady, unwavering tread of foot, familiar daily on the streets. His purse, always ready to respond to calls of deserving charity. His record of public service, a credit to himself and an honor to the city which he helped to incorporate and to build. His life was a continuous public benefaction; his death is a public sorrow.

Only last Sunday was he taken ill, and then his ailment seemed only an insignificant one. But Monday evening he had to take to a bed from which never again would he arise. From the outset it seemed to his friends that death was near, and THE PRESS was called on to perform the melancholy duty of preparing the public mind for the mournful possibility of his not recovering. Yesterday morning he told the anxious inquirers at his beside that he was feeling better, but last evening his condition became so alarming that a consultation over the case was held between Dr. T. S. Davis and Dr. George Endicott. Despite the skill of the physicians, however, he could not be rallied from his sinking condition. He was conscious quite to the last, and recognized the friends gathered about him, and pressed their hands in solemn parting token of affection. As he breathed his last a kindly light suffused his countenance, and heavenly smiles brought a look of supreme content and happiness and rest to the earthly form from which the spirit was fleeting and which was about to know earth's last repose.

Relatives were notified early this morning of his death, and a number have already arrived, while others from a distance are on the way.

Funeral services over the remains will be held at the late residence of the deceased, 19 Crescent avenue, Sunday afternoon at half-past two o'clock. Interment will be made at Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, Monday. The body will be buried by the side of his wife's.

The funeral sermon will be preached by the Rev. Hobart Clark, pastor of the Plainfield Unitarian church, and the Rev. Robert Collyer will be invited to assist in the services.

Job Male was born in Somersetshire, England, August 24, 1808. His father, Ambrose Male, by his first marriage, to Anna Coxe, had six children—James, Betsey, Simon, Sally, Job and Ambrose. By a second marriage he had five others—Simeon, John, James, William and Susanna. The father, with his first children, second wife, and eldest two children by his second marriage, emigrated to America in 1816, landing at New York in May of that year.

Job Male, then a lad of eight years, promptly went into the busy world to care for himself, and is first found attending the toll-gate over the Hackensack River. For one year and a half he served as a clerk in the store of Asa Wright, at Hoboken. In November, 1819, he removed with his parents to Cobourg, Canada, where the father and mother resided until their decease, his father dying about 1861 at the age of eighty.

After remaining at Cobourg eight years, Job returned to Jersey City, where he worked at his chosen trade of carpentry until 1836, when he established a business for himself, and continued as a successful contractor and builder until 1845. Naturally of an ingenious turn of mind, he became his own architect, and drew most of the plans for the buildings which he constructed.

In 1845 he purchased a farm of sixty acres at Scotch Plains, to which place he removed, and where he resided five years. Returning to city life, he resided in New York and Brooklyn until 1853, when he again settled in Jersey City, and for six years was in the employ of the New Jersey Railroad and Transportation Company, building docks and piers, and reclaiming the river front, which included all that section east of Hudson street lying between Essex and Wayne streets. He planned and built for the company the old circular-roofed depot, which was five hundred feet in length and one hundred feet wide, and which was situated where the Pennsylvania Railroad depot now is. He also planned and built many substantial business blocks, his own residence, and a block of twelve stores on ground which for twenty years he leased from the company, and of which he subsequently became owner. These stores were on the north side of Montgomery street, between the Pennsylvania Railroad ferry and Hudson street. He sold them to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company in 1879. He constructed also, for the Jersey Associates, docks and piers for the accommodation of their Cunard steamers on the Jersey City side of the river, and after removing to Plainfield he constructed for the Cunards a pier five hundred feet long, and widened it.

In May, 1866, Mr. Male and his wife, Maria Glaze, made a tour of Europe, and visited the leading cities and places of interest on the continent, and attended the Paris Exposition. Mrs. Male was a daughter of William Glaze, a glass manufacturer of Jersey City. She was born in Staffordshire, England, April 13, 1803, and died of old age in September, 1882, in her 80th year, in this city.

Returning from Europe in July, 1867, and after spending a few months at Yonkers and in New York, Mr. Male settled in Plainfield, then a small village, where he purchased, in connection with Evan Jones, twenty-four acres of land in the suburbs, laid it out in village lots and streets, and erected twenty substantial residences of fine architectural design, drawing the plans for them all himself. He continued to acquire real estate and to construct homes in different parts of the city, until his possessions included more than one hundred Plainfield houses.

During his residence in Plainfield, Mr. Male contributed perhaps as largely as any other one man to building up and beautifying the city, and was liberal of his means in all worthy enterprises tending to develop its prosperity. He gave to the Muhlenberg Hospital the ground on which the building was erected, presented to the city its handsome and complete Job Male Public Library and Art Gallery, and only recently donated to the Unitarian church, which he helped to found, the plot of land on Park avenue on which it is soon to build. He was a worthy supporter of church, school, and kindred interests.

While a resident of Jersey City he was a member of its Board of Education for several years, and a member of the City Council; was a director of the Hudson County Bank during the twenty years following its organization, and was president of it several years.

He was an advocate for the incorporation of Plainfield as a city, and was chosen its first chief magistrate. This election was in 1869. He was re-elected, on the Republican ticket, three times, and served four terms, or eight years—in 1869, 1870, 1877, 1878, 1887, 1888, 1889 and 1890. His fourth term was therefore served when he was more than eighty years of age.

Although Mr. Male received only a limited education from books during his boyhood, he was a man of practical business ideas, possessed strong force of character, and was classed by the host of people who knew him among the self-made, enterprising business men of the times. His life was almost wholly devoted to business pursuits, and is one of the many striking examples in this country of what industry, self reliance and judicious management can accomplish towards securing a competency, and at the same time fulfill the full duty of a respectable, honorable and useful citizen.

Ribs Fractured by a Fall.

Samuel Moore, an employe at A. D. Thompson's stock farm, was injured while unloading hay at Mr. Thompson's North avenue stables this morning. A bale on which he was standing slipped from under him. He caught at a beam, and hung dangling in the air a moment, then dropped heavily. He struck his side against a board, and it is feared that his ribs have been fractured. He was taken home in a buggy by Mr. Tunison.

Plainfield Commuters in a Ferry-Boat Collision.

A ferryboat of the Central Railroad while crossing to Communipaw to connect with the 6 o'clock train going East, Wednesday evening, collided with a big boat. The ferry-boat's paddle-wheel was broken, and the boat had to be towed into the Communipaw slip by two tug boats. There were many passengers aboard of the ferry-boat, some of them commuters living in this city. The collision caused a scare among the passengers, but no one was hurt. The accident caused a delay of trains three-quarters of an hour.

The authorities of Plainfield have set up a large steam whistle on the power house of the electric light company of the town. It is twelve inches in diameter and thirty inches high, and is to be used as a fire-alarm. It was sounded last Saturday, and everybody who heard it, which means all the people of Plainfield and the dwellers in the region round about, agreed that for alarm purposes it is a great success.

PLEASURES OF SUBURBAN LIFE.

Excellent Advice Concerning the Selection of a Rural Home, and Reasons for Choosing Plainfield.

THE PRESS has already published from the pen of John Habberton an interesting article on the pleasures of suburban life, as particularly applied to Plainfield; and now gives space to the following additional reasons, advanced by him, why the suburbs, and especially that queen of the suburbs, Plainfield, is superior, as a place for homes, to the city, together with some valuable suggestions which if faithfully followed will result in each prospective home-builder's deciding on Plainfield as his choice for permanent settlement, after thorough investigation of the merits of the various towns clustering about New York:

A gratifying feature of suburban society is permanency. Change consists principally of increase, for only a small proportion of families ever return to the city, and new arrivals are almost sure to be acquaintances of one or more older residents, who soon see that they do not lack society. In a suburban town everybody knows everybody, if he likes—and sometimes when he would prefer not to do so—and although the people divide into sets, as people do everywhere else, no one of decent breeding lacks a large circle of acquaintance. People who "come to stay" are quickly "sized up" and adopted by the set to which they naturally belong.

Not all portions of the suburbs are equally desirable, and the family that contemplates going out of town to reside cannot begin too carefully. To find a desirable house does not imply that the town and neighborhood will prove satisfactory. The best time to look at a suburban place is a soft day in late Autumn or in Winter—a day when there is no snow on the ground and the condition of the roads and sidewalks, with their extreme of muddiness and roughness, may be ascertained. On such a day the eye will have longer and wider views of surroundings than are possible while the leaves are on the trees; Summer shade and shrubbery often have a covering capacity equalled only by that of charity.

[And right here it may be remarked that this exacting test has already been frequently applied by house-hunters to scores of places, including Plainfield, under comparison, and has always resulted greatly to Plainfield's credit and profit.]

For many reasons it is preferable that the suburban resident should own the house in which he lives; one of these is that rents, in desirable towns, are generally far in excess of interest, taxes and insurance. Another is that suburban cottages and "villas" built to be let are not often as comfortable in Winter as they should be; most of them are of wood, and the ways in which these structures may be slighted while attractive exteriors are secured are as numerous as they are lamentable.

THE PLEASURE OF OWNERSHIP.

The garden, no matter how small, soon becomes an object of interest and pride, sometimes of profit, but no one likes to expend much heart and money on another man's ground. As a rule, however, it is better to defer buying or building until possessed of enough knowledge, through inquiry or residence, to be sure as to the part of the town in which one would prefer to live, and the sort of house that would be most suitable for permanent occupancy. A person who has always inhabited a brick rectangle in a city and has seen no houses of different style is likely to be charmed at first by cottages which through observation and comparison soon become unendurable. Against the single house plan of the city may be found several hundred in a suburban town of a few thousand inhabitants, and scores of able architects are annually adding to the variety. It is better to live a year in a hired house and walk and look about whenever leisure allows.

Above all things, it is well to avoid purchasing building sites in some newly developed locality merely because they are cheap and the auctioneer assures the crowd that there will be hundreds of houses there in a year or two. Within twenty-five miles of New York or any other large city there is more vacant ground than can be covered with houses in the next hundred years. To begin suburban life comfortably it is necessary to live within easy walking distance of existing railroad stations, shops, churches and schools and where village improvements such as pavements, sidewalks, lights, drains, etc., have already been provided. Bargains are always to be had in desirable localities by persons who have a little ready money and are not in foolish haste. To buy on the outskirts, with the hope of the village growing out to meet you, is to buy a lottery ticket, the only certainties being muddy walks and assessments for improvements.

Seeking to Evade the Law.

[From The Evening Sun, New York.]

It is dollars to cents that the New Jersey Legislature will not pass a law legalizing bookmaking. An effort has been made by the associations interested to get a hearing for such a bill, but church members have antagonized it so strongly that there is very little chance of its success. The only law on the statute books of New Jersey which prevents racing with bookmaking is the one referring to disorderly houses, and the racing associations are discussing ways and means of overcoming it.

STATE LEAGUE FORMED.

Building and Loan Men Have a Great Convention.

The convention of building and loan associations, held at Trenton yesterday, was a grand success. A State League was formed, and matters of interest to the business discussed. There were represented 179 associations from all the counties in the State except Ocean and Sussex. There are 256 associations in all and they represent twenty millions of dollars. Over 300 delegates crowded into the Assembly chamber, some of them being obliged to go into the galleries. Judge Codington and ex-Councilman B. F. Corlell, represented Plainfield Association, and R. Struthers and W. M. Stillman represented the Home of this city. Ex-Councilman Isaac Rushmore, President of the latter association, was also present.

A resolution was passed, after long discussion, to form a State League. It was offered by Luther Schaeffer of Rutherford.

Frank O. Cole, of Hudson, said he thought the advisability of forming a State League should be taken into consideration; that he for one had come to the convention to listen to discussion; he was not sure that a State League is needed.

This brought forth a number of resolutions and substitutes and after considerable talk the air was cleared by Senator Marsh of Union taking the floor and telling the convention that the idea of many speakers, that it would not be right to organize a league to antagonize the Legislature, was wrong. As a legislator he knows that the members of the Legislature are jealous of the interest of building and loan associations, and they would appreciate the good advice of a league.

Judge Gilhooly, of Union, stated that his association was not favorable to the formation of a league, but he was personally, because he thought a yearly conference would be beneficial.

After the discussion had continued for two hours, the roll was called on the resolution, and it was adopted by a vote of 148 to 109. Committees on permanent organization and to draft a constitution and by-laws were appointed.

Reform Hall's Good Works.

The gospel temperance meetings held in Reform Hall Sunday afternoons at four o'clock continue to be liberally attended. Last Sunday's meeting was led by the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, who in his usual forcible manner presented the truths of the parables of the lost sheep and the prodigal son [Luke xv], depicting to his hearers the starving, forlorn condition of the sinner feeding on husks when there was abundance in his Father's house; showing in glowing word-pictures how that Father yearned over his lost one—watching, waiting for his face to turn homeward, going out to meet him while he was yet afar off, bestowing on him the kiss of forgiving love, lifting him up to the sonship which he had severed himself from for the allurements of the world; and illustrating God's wonderful love to lost sinners.

After prayer and testimonies, mingled with the praises to God, of severals souls who had returned to their Father's fold under the influence of the current meetings of the Salvation Army, and with hymns of praise led by J. B. Martin, with Miss Smith as organist, the people went home feeling that the Spirit of Grace was hovering in their midst and was ready to bless all who were ready to profess Christ's name.

Bury the Wires.

The recent storm was an impressive object-lesson on the folly of maintaining a system of overhead wires for the purposes of telegraphic and telephonic communication and electric lighting. Corporations that have made a fight, as many of them have, against the proposition to bury the wires, will have no popular sympathy whatever in their troubles. The probability is that, great as was the inconvenience caused to citizens by this general prostration of the wires, most people would bear their privations cheerfully in view of the severity of the punishment inflicted. The fact that the underground system is practical has been demonstrated, and in this same storm, underground wires in Paterson and other places continued in good working order. In spite of repeated warnings, companies employing the overhead-wire system have gone on adding wire to wire and overloading their poles until the ruin wrought by this last storm has overtaken them. All wires ought now to be buried.

A Thunderbolt to the Race-Track People.

Five hundred dollars fine and a year in State prison. This is the sentence which Judge Dixon imposed upon the convicted race-track owners in Passaic, the men who openly and defiantly violated the laws at the Clifton race-tracks.

"No wonder"—comments The Journal, of Elizabeth—"that there is consternation among the whole racing, pool selling, track gambling fraternity, and no wonder there is rejoicing among all who hold that honor and character and morality and the law are worth preserving.

"The result [of the recent convictions and sentences in Union, Passaic and other counties], according to the present outlook, is likely to be just what the moral, thoughtful, fair-minded people of this State most desire. It is that in a short time every race-track in New Jersey will be permanently abandoned, and every race-track association driven out of the State."

Valentine's Day is coming, and Gerome Pack, on Park avenue, has an expensive line of the missives of the season.

MASONIC GRAND LODGE.

Plainfield's Votes Help Elect Two Dark Horses.

The Grand Lodge Free and Accepted Masons, concluded their two days' session of the annual meeting at Masonic Temple, Trenton, yesterday by the election of officers. Among the Plainfield Masons present were Most Worshipful, District Deputy, Grand Master F. O. Herring, Master of Anchor Lodge; W. J. Ford, Master of Jerusalem Lodge; Past Masters B. F. Corlell, H. Woodland and John Ulrich.

For the positions of Grand Master and Grand Secretary, dark horses won the race. The most important contest was on the Grand Secretaryship. Everybody thought that the Rev. H. Veslage, of Irvington, had the inside track, but Thomas H. B. Redway, of Asbury Park, who was Deputy Grand Secretary last year, and who had not sought the office, was elected by a nice majority. The list of officers is: Thomas W. Tilden, of Jersey City, Most Worshipful Grand Master; James H. Durand, Rahway, Deputy Grand Master; Charles Bucher, Newark, Senior Grand Warden; Albert F. Randolph, Bridgeton, Junior Grand Warden; Charles Bechtel, Trenton, Grand Treasurer; Thomas H. B. Redway, Asbury Park, Grand Secretary; William D. Rutan, Deputy Grand Secretary; the Revs. Charles H. W. Stocking and Edward Dillon, Grand Chaplains; Henry S. Haines, Burlington, Grand Instructor; A. D. Winfield, Orange, Senior Grand Deacon; Edwin W. Hine, Orange, Junior Grand Deacon; John A. Parker, Jersey City, Grand Marshal; W. C. Scott, Freehold, Senior Grand Steward; Henry A. Hodges, Junior Grand Steward; John Cluny, Camden, Grand Sword Bearer; Louis C. Gillespie, Grand Pursuivant; Florin Oborstel, Patterson, Grand Organist.

Grand Master Tilden ran for the same office four years ago against Robert H. Moore, of Elizabeth, and was defeated. He is past Master of Rising Sun Lodge, Jersey City, Past Grand Master and Past District Deputy. Among prominent Mason present yesterday, were ex-Governor Green, Governor Abbett, State Treasurer Toffey, Chancellor McGill, Justice Scudder, ex-Chancellor Runyon and ex-Governor Bedle.

A Gift from Appreciative Friends.

The young men of the Holy Cross church choir were the guests last evening of their late choir master, Charles W. Kellogg, and wife, at their residence on Mercer avenue, and the occasion will long be remembered as a most enjoyable one. The hours fled away very rapidly under the spell of music, games, speech-making and general good-humor. An especially pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation of a handsome standard lamp to Mr. Kellogg by Wm. H. Hardy, President of the Choir Guild, in behalf of the members, as a token of their esteem and regard. Mr. Hardy accompanied the presentation by a neat speech, voicing the regret of the choir on the occasion of Mr. Kellogg's retirement, but congratulating himself and his fellows because, although they have lost their trainer, they have still a friend and neighbor. Mr. Kellogg responded in a few words, thanking the men for their dainty gift, and expressing his admiration and gratitude for the faithful and honorable spirit which has always characterized their work with him. Those present were: Wm. H. Hardy, Henry Williams, Chas. F. Denecklau, Geo. A. Westervelt, Charles Mackey, Geo. P. Taggart, Wm. Holmes, Bertram F. Tallamy, Edw. Smith, and Edward N. Neilson of Elizabeth, late organist of the church.

To Repeat a Lecture of Years Ago.

Dr. T. H. Tomlinson will repeat, by request, at the Young Men's Christian Association rooms next Thursday evening, the very plain, forcible and helpful address on "Physical Degeneracy" given under the auspices of the Association Dec. 15, 1881. The following report of the lecture was published at the time: "The doctor first touched on overwork, the want of holidays, the excitement of speculation, gambling, etc. The use of alcoholic and malt beverages was shown to be a curse. The use of tobacco was severely condemned, and its evil results in the users and their offsprings were clearly pointed out. Various forms of licentiousness were dealt with—not in a vague general way, but with a definiteness commensurate with the gravity of the subject. The talk was such a one as should be repeated until every young man in town has heard its warning.

Coal Traffic Shifted from the Central.

An arrangement has been effected by which the Lehigh Valley railroad will hereafter handle the coal traffic of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company between Bound Brook and Perth Amboy, until the completion of the Reading's new Port Reading branch. Heretofore the traffic has been carried over the Jersey Central.

Street Lighting Service Not Yet Wholly Mended.

Plainfield's electric lighting service has not yet entirely recovered from the effects of the storm. Some of the wires are still broken, and last night at least two thoroughfares—Broadway and Prospect avenue—were in total darkness.

Whatever tends to increase usefulness, by banishing pain and suffering, will certainly secure notice and approval. We allude to Salvation Oil.

Insure your life for 25 cents against all the danger of a consumptive's death by keeping a bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup convenient. It is the best.

CLIQUES IN CLUBS.

Every Large Club Has Its Sets of Fellows Who Ride Hobbies.

In every large club there are sets or cliques. Every other member naturally drifts into one of these sets very soon after he joins the club, says a writer in the New York Sun. They may be defined in this way: First, there is the billiard set. Its members rarely visit any other part of the club than the billiard room, and every other member knows just where to find them. They are usually evening men, for the billiard tables are not much used in the day-time. Most of them are billiard experts—gentlemen experts, of course—and they can not tolerate the ordinary billiard player.

Then there is the card set. Not all the clubs allow card playing, but most of them do. In a good many of the clubs whist is nominally played, but actually all sorts of gambling games with cards are permitted. All the card players in the club gradually drift into this set. Of course, occasionally, men play a quiet game without becoming slaves to the habit, but these are not members of the card set, and their presence is not at all desirable to the latter.

There are some men who have fallen into the habit of breakfasting at their clubs, and are never seen there at any other time. Others come only to luncheon. Their places of business are not remote from the club-house, and they drop over there for an hour in the middle of the day. Sometimes they bring friends along, and they always have a good time. This is a pleasant set.

The set containing the men who hang around the clubs in the day-time is a very peculiar one. Its members are either wealthy young fellows who think it beneath them to engage in any useful occupation, or men who prefer to do their work at night. The latter are few. These are the men who constantly occupy the club windows and gaze out upon the fashionable throng with supercilliousness.

A good many only see the club when they drop in on their way home to take a cocktail. They are family men, who go home to dine, and occupy their evenings with social engagements or domestic affairs. It is no unusual thing to see fifty men drop into a club between four thirty and six o'clock, just for the purpose of taking a little champagne and bitters, or a less aristocratic cocktail. These men rarely stay more than half an hour. The reading set contains a very desirable element of the club. Its members are quiet, gentlemanly fellows, who lend tone and dignity to the club and are always well informed.

The dinner set is not so well defined as the others. It includes men of all kinds, but there are particular men who come only then, and who are experts in good living. These are always good fellows, and everybody is glad to know them. A man who dines well must be a good fellow in his heart, and usually is an interesting one, too.

AFRICAN PIGMIES.

Stanley Tells a Curious Story About the Dwarfs and Their Poisoned Arrows.

When we first encountered the tribe who fought with poisoned arrows, writes Stanley in Scribner, we were not prepared to be greatly impressed with the danger, but we received a severe lesson in August, 1887, during a fight with the Avisibba savages. Young fellows, inspired by the example of Lieutenant Stairs, R. E., rushed with brave homicidal intentions to the front, and the tiny arrows sailed in showers past them; but some of them found their intended billets, and were arrested quivering in arms and shoulders. With contemptuous smiles the young men drew them out and flung them away, and some continued answering the savages with rifle shots, while others sought the surgeon, bearing with them the arrows with which they had been wounded. When the day's fight was over of course we had more leisure to examine the missiles, and our anxiety was great when we observed that they had been freshly smeared with a brown, gummy-like substance which emitted a subtle acrid odor, with a suspicion of asafœtida in it. The arrows seemed to have been plunged into a pot containing a goodly quantity of a resinous substance, and twirled around in it and well soaked and then lifted up in a bunch and covered with a banana or a piece of phrynium leaf. Quivers full of the arrows showed us that the weapons were considered by their owners to be dangerous, for those so smeared were tied together, head downward, and apart from the others.

Yet the wounds made by these slender arrows were mere punctures, such as might have been made by finely-pointed butchers' skewers, and being exceedingly ignorant of the effect we contented ourselves with syringing them with warm water and dressing them with bandages. In some instances affectionate men sucked their comrades' wounds, to make sure that nothing of the substance should be left to irritate them. In no instance was this method of any avail. All who were wounded either died after terrible sufferings from tetanus, or developed such terrible gangrenous tumors as to incapacitate them from duty for long periods or wreck their constitutions so completely by blood-poisoning that their lives became a burden to them.

A British Buried City.

It is reported that a British Pompeii or buried city has been discovered on the estate of the Duke of Wellington, in Berkshire, and an exhibition of articles discovered in it is to be held in London. The excavations have brought to view the remains of a house ornamented with mosaic floors and containing rooms heated by hypocaustu. Among the articles to be exhibited are potsherds, bones, combs, bronze utensils, fragments of good glass vessels, pieces of ironwork, chiefly tools, including carpenters' planes, chisels, axes, hammers, gouges, anvils and some edged tools sharp enough, after having laid buried for ten centuries, to work with now. The city was laid out with great regularity.

PAPER HORSESHOES.

The Process by Which They Are Manufactured.

The need of a more or less elastic horseshoe has led to many trials and experiments, which, not resulting in any thing satisfactory, has kept the farrier's art in the same old rut of olden day. A new horseshoe has been made in Germany, says the Age of Steel, and it is constructed of parchment paper or a paper prepared by a saturation of oil, turpentine, etc., and impenetrable to dampness or moisture. Thin layers of such paper are glued together until the desired thickness necessary for the horseshoe is attained by an agglutinant, which is indifferent to the action of moisture, and which will not get brittle when dry (especially casein gum, chrome gelatine, copper chromate, ammonia, or a mixture of Venetian turpentine). The leaves of such prepared paper can first be cut to the desired form, and holes for nailing on the paper be stamped through, and the leaves glued together, one on top of another. Then the shoe has to undergo a very strong pressure, perhaps by a hydraulic press, is dried, and lastly rasped and planed. The holes can be bored in by boring machines similar to those used for brushes, instead of being stamped out. The fastening of these shoes can be done by nailing through the holes bored or stamped, as above described, or by gluing with bitumen, caoutchouc, or a mixture of gum ammonia, emulsion, one part; gutta percha, two parts. The fact of its getting rough makes the paper horseshoe a great advantage in preventing the slipping of the horse on smooth and slippery places.

The Berlin Royal Stables.

A special department in the royal stables at Berlin is set aside for the Imperial children. Each little Princeling has his stall containing his own particular pony, funny little animals with big manes and bigger tails. The Princes themselves look after the welfare of their steeds, and the stable master told me that the ponies would soon be dead with overeating if they were permitted to gorge themselves with all the provender provided for them by their little royal masters.

SUMMONS SERVERS.

They Must Be Possessed of Energy, Ingenuity and "Cheek."

A Business That Requires a Man to Almost Go Through Fire and Water to Attain Success—The Clever Ruse of a Genius in His Line.

If there is a man in the world who needs to be energetic, ingenious, quick-witted, patient, long-suffering, determined and, above all, "cheeky," says the New York Times, that man is the unfortunate server of summonses. Serving summonses is a good deal like driving a skittish horse—anybody can do it until something happens, and then when something does happen, unless the driver or the server can do something more than hold on to the reins or hold out his summons, he is done for.

The tricks that are taken to get the best of the summons-server are legion. Defendants in suits, even if they have scruples against lying at other times, feel that to lie to a summons-server is perfectly legitimate, and, as it were, only making one of his own moves against him. For the server himself never hesitates to lie. It is one of his most useful tricks. He is any thing while trying to get near enough to Mr. Blank to serve him with the summons he is paid for serving. He is a particular friend just come to the city from Hoboken or the West, and has not seen Mr. Blank in years, or he is the real-estate agent who was talking with Mr. Blank last week about those valuable lots in Harlem, or he is a special messenger from a business friend of Mr. Blank who wants to see him at once on the most important business and can not possibly come to his office. Any and all and many more such personages is the summons-server at different times of his arduous career, until it is a wonder that he doesn't himself forget what he is, and when he catches his victim fail to recollect to hold out the little official piece of paper and say: "Mr. Blank, here is a summons in a suit brought by—" But the summons-server never forgets.

As a general rule the summons-server carries on his disagreeable business quietly, but of course a well-equipped server never hesitates to "make a stir" if it is necessary. If his victim jumped into the water, very likely he would jump in after him if there wasn't a boat handy, and serve his summons before attempting to save his man from drowning. In fact, a summons-server without a large bump of determination would be of little good, while the one who is determined and at the same time quick-witted enough to make his determination valuable is never out of a job. He gets up a reputation as a reliable man, one who always nails the defendant he is set on, and a lawyer who knows the man he wants to serve will be difficult to catch, doesn't put his summons in the hands of his office boy, but sends for the server with the reputation.

It sometimes happens that a piece of ingenious summons-serving is done in public, and sometimes so neatly that those who see it done are so taken up with the admiration for the ingenious server that they quite forget to sympathize with the victim, which ordinarily they would do, knowing that the chances are in favor of their at some time being in his place, rather than of their ever having to try to serve summonses themselves.

Such a case occurred in East Fifty-ninth street the other night, and was witnessed by twenty or thirty passengers on a Belt Line street-car and half a dozen pedestrians. The car was bowling along rapidly. Suddenly two men dashed out from one of the avenues crossing Fifty-ninth street, one of them about twenty feet in advance of the other, who was shouting at the top of his voice: "Stop thief! Stop thief!" One or two pedestrians joined in the pursuit, and the policeman at the corner got his unwieldly frame into motion. But the supposed thief was a faster runner than any of the others, and jumping on to the front platform of the car he gasped to the driver: "I am no thief. Whip up your horses, and here's a dollar." Then he went inside and sat down, and all the other passengers looked at him askance.

The conductor evidently thought it was his place to get his car through on time, and not to stop to let a man after whom "stop, thief!" was being called be captured. But when he saw the policeman in the crowd of pursuers he pulled the bell-strap and the car came to a stop. The man who had first appeared in pursuit leaped on board and rushed up to the man whom he had called a thief. The other passengers looked to see him take the man by the collar, and the policeman was just at the rear platform ready to put him under arrest. Pulling a paper from his pocket the pursuer held it out to the pursued and said: "Mr. ——, here is the summons in that suit of ——"

And then the policeman swore because he had to run a block to help a summons-server, and the car went on its way. The man who had been served looked dejected, but he remarked to his next neighbor: "It's just as well, I suppose. It was bound to come some time. I knew at the start that that fellow would serve his summons some way. He's been after me for a week and has played all sorts of sharp games to get at me. That last one was a bright trick, though, wasn't it? He was waiting for me outside my house but I saw him just in time to get a good start. But I think I ought to sue him for defamation of character for calling after me: "Stop, thief!"

Fishing in England

Angling in England is in point of law on the same footing as net and other fishing, and anglers who fish in private waters without permission of the owners are liable to punishment as poachers, subject to certain exemptions. For instance, if fishing in the day time, the angler can not be apprehended, but the owner of the fishery can summon him before a justice and seize his rod and tackle, but not his creel nor any fish he may have taken.

His Rise.

He bought a brand new pair of shoes,
He thought he'd get some spats;
He then discovered that he lacked
The latest thing in hats.

He bought one. Then his trousers bagged;
He ordered two new pair,
And then, strange fact! he noticed that
His coat was quite threadbare.

He bought another. Then he saw
Some waistcoats. Just the thing!
He had to get some ties to match;
He bought a diamond ring.

He joined three clubs. He bought a horse,
Then changed it for a team;
He bought a sailing yacht at first,
And then moved up to steam.

He bought these things, and many more,
This man so great and wise;
For during his career he had
The sense to advertise.

Value of Changing Advertisements.

Picking up an old journal the other day I found a statement to the effect that a certain patent medicine firm had not (at that time) changed the wording of its advertisements for thirteen years. While I am a thorough believer in judicious advertising I doubt if such advertising as that would accomplish any good after a few months of publication. No doubt ninety-nine readers out of a hundred would throw aside the paper at sight of the familiar heading with the exclamation, "The same old story." Though publishers may save considerably in composition bills by permitting advertisements to "stand" in their columns for a year or more, they must lose considerable in the ill effect upon other would be advertisers.

It is to the interest of publishers that their patrons should find that "it pays to advertise," and those advertising columns are most attentively perused which are most frequently changed. A publisher who allows an advertisement to stand without change in his columns for over three months is doing his own business an absolute harm. Advertisements are being looked upon as news, and as such they should be fresh and interesting. Invite your patrons to make frequent changes in their announcements. It will pay them, and this will have a reflex action upon your own receipts.—National Publisher and Printer.

A New Profession.

The writing of advertisements is assuming the dignity of a profession. Much of the style of writing is charmingly seductive, and withal contains no little information of a scholarly nature, as many a reader has discovered after perusing a half column with quickening interest to find in the end how he may become a Hercules in strength or a beauty by the use of certain elixirs! There is more money in the writing of advertisements than in legitimate literature. Agencies solicit the writing of advertisements and guarantee appropriate illustrations, and the insertion of same in whatever newspaper or periodical the advertiser may desire. Most of the celebrated advertisers write their own notices. "It is only needful to repeat a thing often enough," says Goethe, "and everybody will end by believing it."—L. R. McCabe in Chicago Herald.

Woman's Influence.

What is so good an advertisement as the confidential advice of a woman of influence? I know nothing which approaches it. You can remember a dozen books which have been made by this sort of feminine recommendation. It sold a hundred thousand copies of Marion Harland's "Common Sense Cook Book," and more copies of "Little Lord Fauntleroy;" it made The Ladies' Home Journal, and it makes the fortunes of baby food people every year. Suppose your child is ill, and Mrs. Smith tells your wife that Canteloupe's food saved her baby's life, a hundred dollar bill would not be too much to pay for a box or bottle of the food, and so it goes.—Art in Advertising.

A Common Sense Opinion.

The newspaper without any advertisements, which Mrs. Julia Ward Howe wants to see, might suit the tastes of some people, but it would be without a very interesting feature. The idea that the advertisements in a newspaper only please the counting room unfortunately obtains in some quarters, but to the great mass of the people they are not only interesting but useful and instructive reading. They are the shoppers' constant companion, the business man's guide and everybody's instructor. A newspaper without advertising columns would fail to accomplish its mission. Besides, it would be about as poor as Job's turkey.—Boston Herald.

How to Advertise.

The question of method in advertising is one having infinite range. The matter is one of the very first importance, and cannot be too carefully studied. One thing about it that may be set down as true is that every man's advertising, in its language and style, should be characteristic—characteristic of the man, characteristic of his stock, characteristic of his commercial position. For every man has his peculiarities of development. When he speaks we know it is he, though we may not be looking at him, and his advertisement should represent him like his voice. He should put his experience, his industry, his enterprise, into his advertising. It is astonishing to see how merchants who are tireless in their industry—at the store early and late, close buyers, eager seekers after business, quick to embrace opportunities for enlargement of lines and extension of trade—it is surprising to see how such business men continue their advertising in the language of the old rut, and announce in the same words and the same type that did duty for them years ago that "B. Franklin (or any other man, the name doesn't matter) is still to be found at the old stand, with a choice stock of dry goods, notions, etc., etc." (The two etc.'s are indispensable in an "ad" of this kind.)

There is another and a better way to do: If a merchant has any snap, any energy, in himself, let him show it in his advertising. If he has any bargains in his store, let him say so. If he has connections which enable him to sell better goods, or the same goods at lower prices, than anybody else, let him say that; say it plainly, strongly and in a way that will carry conviction of truthfulness; and on the same principle that leads him to treat visitors to his store so that they will call again, let him write his advertisement so that his next advertisement will be looked for; if you get a person's attention once try to hold it. The whole thing is summed up in this: One should study advertising as he does every other department of his business. Advertising is a science, simple, it is true, as to its main elements, but requiring more thought and system than many of our business men have been accustomed to give it.

The Art of Advertising.

Advertising seems to be an art yet to be discovered by some people. That is, the practical part of it. A constant stream of water from one or more fire engines will soon extinguish or get under control a very large fire, while a few buckets of water, dashed on here and there, have little or no effect. The modern fire department is practical, and has outgrown the old bucket system; and so with modern advertising—plenty of it, used in a practical, common sense and judicious manner, pays.

If you want to catch a certain kind of fish you use a certain kind of bait; not all fish bite at all kinds of bait. Not all people respond to every advertisement. The newspaper is a medium indispensable to the majority of advertisers, because of its wide and repeating circulation. As a promoter of trade and profit newspaper advertising is no longer an open question; that is, when done in a practical and intelligent manner, and pays because of its effectiveness and cheapness.—Beatrice (Neb.) Democrat.

Spasmodic Advertising.

We all recognize that as between the fellow who works "by fits and starts" and the chap who plods along and keeps at it steadily, the plodder gets there every time. The spasmodic fellow may create an occasional impression, but the results of his fitful labors are dissipated in the intervals.

The occasional display of fireworks only serves the purpose of preventing his being forgotten altogether; while the man who works, and keeps working, constantly improves his position and prospects.

So it is with advertising. It is the repeated "ad" and the sustained effort that tell. We don't mean the "ad" that is never changed, but the one that is ever changing, but never omitted! The wise advertiser keeps always before the people to whom he desires to sell his wares. When you want to quit doing business stop advertising, or advertise only "once in a while."

Not a Charity.

In any just view of a quarter of a century of journalistic work the most prominent feature, and one giving great satisfaction to respectable publishers, is that printing a newspaper has become recognized as a business and not a charity.—Owen Scott.

SAVED BY HIS NERVE.

A Young Man's Dangerous Situation and How He Got Out of It.

An incident which recently took place at Plymouth, Mass., called for the possession of a good deal of pluck on the part of two actors, says the Detroit Free Press. A young man of about twenty was leading a bull, that had always been peaceably inclined, when the animal seemed to be seized with a sudden fury, and made a lunge at him.

The stick which was fastened to a ring in the animal's nose snapped short in the young man's grasp, and almost before he knew what had happened he was thrown into the air from the bull's horns.

His clothing was torn from his body, his cheek was cut open, and he was much bruised, but when he fell, almost under the feet of the bull, he had presence of mind enough to realize that his only safety lay in keeping so close to the head of the animal that he could not be thrown again. He managed to get three fingers of his left hand into the ring in the bull's nose, while with his right hand he grasped one of the horns.

Meanwhile the farmer who owned the animal, and who is an excellent shot, got a rifle from the house, and hastily put into it two cartridges. The young man, finding his strength failing, called out to the other to shoot.

"Fire, for pity's sake," he said; "I can't hold on much longer."

The bull, astonished by the clutch of his victim, had for a moment stopped, but when he should again start there would be small chance of the life of the young man. The animal stood so that his forehead was presented to the farmer, but the young man's head was within a few inches of the spot which the bullet must strike.

"If I fire," the farmer called, "the ball may flatten on the bone, and kill you on the rebound."

"Fire any way, and quick," the other cried out, as the bull showed signs of moving.

The farmer put his rifle to his shoulder, and fired. The shot was so true that the bull dropped in his tracks without a struggle.

A BARKING SCARF-PIN.

Startling Effect Produced in a Club by a New Invention.

A member of one of the up-town clubs caused something of a sensation in the smoking-room of his club a few nights ago, says the New York Times. As he joined a group of gentlemen it was noticed that he wore a unique pin in his scarf. It was a large dog's head made of oxidized silver. Its eyes were tiny diamonds and its mouth red enamel. While the wearer's friends were looking at the pin and commenting upon it the red mouth of the silver dog opened and a succession of sharp barks issued therefrom.

The effect was startling at first, but as the barking continued several members of the club pressed about the owner of the pin, curious to examine "the new trick." The wearer of the decoration, after enjoying the sensation he had created for awhile, unbuttoned his waistcoat and disclosed a long rubber tube attached to the pin on the the under side of the scarf. The tube extended down into one of the pockets of the gentleman's trousers, terminating in a rubber bulb. By repeatedly pinching the bulb the wearer of the pin was able to cause the sounds to issue from the dog's mouth. Thus does the Yankee mind triumph again.

Photographs as Presents.

A word as to photographs, or rather concerning photographs as gifts. It is never wise for a young girl or woman to give her photograph to young men, promiscuously—this term is justified because of the fact that so many girls and women sow their photographs broadcast, as it were, among their acquaintances of both sexes, says the Ladies' World. A young woman should be very, very chary in making such a gift; in fact, it should be made to none but near relatives. It is time enough when a young woman is engaged to a thoroughly responsible and excellent young man to exchange photographs with him. Young men are very apt to jest about the originals of these pictures when in company with their comrades, and to make boasts that would be very unpleasant for the young ladies to hear. A young lady may give a young man a book, or some bit of her own handiwork in the way of embroidery or painting, or carving, or the like, and the young man might give her something of his own handiwork; for example, a painting or a carved bracket, or a piece of repousse work, with propriety, but expensive purchased gifts are properly interdicted by "good form."

A Graveyard Rabbit.

There is an old graveyard in Clarke County, Georgia, which is held in superstitious fear by the neighborhood. One story about it is that a rabbit has taken up its home there and burrows in a sunken grave. The boards covering the vault have rotted, leaving a cavern extending into the coffin itself. For a long time a rabbit has used the den as a lair and can be seen at almost any hour entering or leaving the cavern. Time and again the hunters have sought to kill this particular rabbit, but it is like firing at a sun ray. The little quadruped seems quite tame and will invite a near approach of the sportsman, but upon the discharge of his gun Br'er Rabbit bounds off unharmed. And no dog, either, can be found to chase the rabbit any distance. They will run it a few yards and then return to their owners with a mystified look and their tails dangling between their legs.

Cow Trees.

The cow tree, the sap of which closely resembles milk, is a native of South and Central America. It is a species of evergreen and grows only in mountainous regions. A hole bored in the wood, or even a wound made in the bark of this remarkable tree, is almost immediately filled with a lacteal-like fluid. Alexander von Humboldt was the first traveler to describe this tree and bring it to the notice of Europeans.

"LIKE A FROST-BLIGHTED FLOWER,"

The fair young sufferer perishes, and often from causes unknown to the world, but superficial judgment, founded on appearances, takes this form of expression, "died of quick consumption," while in nine cases out of ten it should be, "died from carelessness." Mothers, look to your daughters. Daughters, look to yourselves.

THE NATION'S GRIEF

Universal Mourning for the Dead Secretary.

DEEP SORROW AT THE CAPITAL.

The President Has an Affecting Interview With His Cabinet.

The Funeral to Take Place on Monday. The President Selects the Burial Lot. Messages of Condolence Showered Upon Mrs. Windom—All Social Events at the Capital Indefinitely Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The national capital is bathed in tears, swathed in black and decorated with flags at half mast in token of its grief at the death of Secretary Windom. All day expressions of the profoundest regret have been heard in the circles which have for so many years been honored by the presence of the distinguished statesman.

On the arrival of the remains here the casket was tenderly carried into the drawing room of the late Secretary's residence, and after the procession had dispersed Mrs. Windom and her two daughters were left alone with their dead. Mrs. Windom's grief burst forth afresh as she looked upon her husband's body, and so overwhelmed was she that she had to be led from the room.

The President and the members of the Cabinet and their wives called on Mrs. Windom this morning and found her far more resigned than at any time since the terrible news was broken to her. She arose after a sorrowful, sleepless night to find many friends awaiting her in the drawing room, while hundreds of messages of sympathy are showered upon her. Misses Nellie and Florence Windom were particularly brave in their bereavement and do much to comfort their stricken mother.

The only son, Mr. Wm. D. Windom, is travelling in the South, and is expected to reach home to-night. Mrs. Windom's sister, Mrs. John Douglass, living at Minneapolis, has been heard from, and will arrive here with her husband Sunday evening. Mr. George Hatch of Boston, her only brother, will probably arrive here to-night. Mr. Windom's nearest relatives now living are the widow and three sons of a brother, who live at Sterling, Ill.

The Funeral.

There will be private service Monday morning at the Windom mansion on Massachusetts avenue, and later in the day public services at the Church of the Covenant on Connecticut avenue. The pallbearers, honorary and active, will be announced this afternoon.

The interment will be at Rock Creek Cemetery. The President, the Postmaster-General and Mrs. Dimmick performed the sad duty of securing the burial lot in the cemetery where the body will be laid to rest.

MEETING OF THE CABINET.

The President Has an Affecting Interview With His Advisers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—President Harrison's eyes were swimming in tears as he met his advisers in the Cabinet room. He said it was the first serious blow he had received since he formed his Cabinet.

The officers remained with the President a long time discussing plans for the future in the Treasury Department, the funeral of the dead Secretary, etc.

After the meeting broke up the following official announcement of Secretary Windom's death was made:

"The Hon. William Windom, Secretary of the Treasury of the United States died suddenly in the city of New York in the 64th year of his age.

"Thus has passed away a man of pure life, an official of stainless integrity, distinguished by long and eminent service in both branches of Congress and by being twice called to administer the national finances.

"His death has caused deep regret throughout the country, while to the President and those associated with him in the administration of the government it comes as personal sorrow.

"The President directs that all the departments of the executive branch of the government and the officers subordinate thereto shall manifest due respect to the memory of this eminent citizen in a manner consonant with the dignity of the office which he has honored by his devotion to public duty.

"The President further directs that the Treasury Department in all its branches in this capital be draped in mourning for the period of 30 days; that on the day of the funeral the several executive departments shall be closed, and that on all public buildings throughout the United States the national flag shall be displayed at half mast.

"JAMES G. BLAINE."

SOCIAL GAYETY CRUSHED.

Many Brilliant Washington Events Indefinitely Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—It is scarcely possible to exaggerate the depression which the lamented death of Secretary Windom has thrown over the society season in Washington. Invitations to receptions, dinners, balls and theatre parties have been recalled by the hundreds. All the White House official receptions are declared off.

Mr. Windom's personal popularity is strongly shown in the marks of respect offered. The cortege which escorted his remains from the depot to his late residence on Massachusetts avenue included most of those prominent in official and social life here. President Harrison's sympathetic and considerate action in connection with the distressed family receives earnest approval on all sides. In this affliction, as well as in the calamities which bereaved his Secretary of State and his Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Harrison has shown that even the cares of the Presidential office and the pettiness of modern politics are not inconsistent with the generous manifestation of sympathy and kindness.

The Annual Dinner Postponed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The Gridiron Club has postponed its annual dinner to be given to-night, for one week, on account of the death of Secretary Windom, who was the personal friend of many of its members, and a guest of the club at its annual dinner last year. Elaborate preparations had been made for the dinner, at which President Harrison, Secretary Blaine and Secretary Rusk were to have been among the guests.

THE WOUND PROVED FATAL.

A Little Girl Refuses to Give Up a Package and is Struck With a Stone.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan 31.—Last Monday Katie Kopf, 8 years of age, was sent on an errand by her parents. When returning home with her package, a boy much older than Katie stopped her and demanded of her the bundle she carried. She refused, whereupon the boy attempted to take the package by force.

Katie broke away from her assailant and started to run. The boy threw a sharp stone at the girl, striking her just above the left eye. She fell to the ground and the boy ran away.

A passer-by carried the girl home, where she related the adventure to her father, who, not thinking the injury serious, did not call a physician. Yesterday erysipelas set in and last night the girl died in terrible agony.

The name of Katie's assailant is not positively known and he has not been arrested.

A YOUTHFUL LOVER.

He Disappears With an Old Lady's Horse and Carriage.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 31.—Ike Jewell, the youthful lover of Mrs. Louise English, is missing, and so are Mrs. English's horse and carriage. Jewell is 35 years old and Mrs. English is 70, and as she is suffering from a stroke of paralysis she was removed to the hospital. Her grandchildren from New York have succeeded in getting a conservator appointed.

Ike Jewell has been conducting a saloon, which Mrs. English is supposed to have paid for. Several attachments were placed upon the saloon to-day. Jewell had no difficulty in securing credit, as he was expected to marry Mrs. English and inherit her $75,000. It is learned that Jewell has a wife and two children living on Long Island.

Change of Newspaper Management.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 31.—The Nyack "Evening Journal" and the "Rockland County Journal," newspapers, hitherto published by the Nyack Publishing Company, of which Garrett Z. Snider was president, have been sold to William H. Helmle, George B. Helmle and Joseph P. Helmle of this city, who have been associated with the composing room and editorial department of the Brooklyn "Times" for a number of years. The editorial management of the two papers will be taken by George B. Helmle.

Kilrain and Godfrey Sign.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan 31.—When Kilrain made his appearance at the California Athletic Club rooms the large collection of sports assembled were enthusiastic over his fine appearance. He was accompanied by William Muldoon, and after introductions all around Kilrain and Godfrey signed articles for their battle booked for some night in the latter part of March for a purse of $14,000.

Barker Brothers Resume Business.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 31.—Barker Bros. & Co., who made an assignment just ten weeks ago, resumed business this morning at 10 o'clock under a new name and with a new partner, in their former counting house at Fourth and Chestnut streets. The firm's name has been changed to "Barker & Co.," and J. C. W. Barker has been admitted to partnership.

Winter Weather at Pine Ridge.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Jan. 31.—An officer writing from Pine Ridge Agency states that winter has at last set in and that six inches of snow have fallen this week, causing much suffering to both men and horses who are exposed. If the war is over the few troops now there, say the officers, should be withdrawn.

A Powerful Organization.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 31.—The Mahoning and Shenango Valley Iron Manufacturers' Association was organized here comprising all the blast furnaces and rolling mills in the two valleys. The amount of capital invested is over $7,000,000, and the output amounts to nearly 3,000,000 tons annually.

Hunting for an Archduke.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Jan. 31.—Baron Franz Josef Toaffe, son of the present Chancellor of Austria, passed through Pittsburg on his way to Wurtemburg, Butler county, to find the Archduke John of Austria, who is supposed to be working on the Pittsburg and Western Railroad as a day laborer.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Gossip Already Busy Regarding the Next Secretary.

SENATOR SPOONER'S CHANCES

Major McKinley's Name to Be Pressed Upon the President.

First Assistant Treasurer Nettleton Also Spoken of—Kansas Will Present Mr. Ingalls—New York Has a Candidate—Congressman Cannon May Secure the Portfolio—Pushing Bills Through the House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The death of Secretary Windom has already started speculation in regard to his probable successor. Senator McMillan said he thought it not improbable that Senator Spooner of Wisconsin, who retired on the 4th of March, will be tendered the position. Senator Spooner agreed with Secretary Windom in his silver policy and is from the same section of the country to which the late Secretary was credited. Senator McMillan did not venture an opinion as to whether Senator Spooner would accept the position or not. The suggestion has met with a great deal of approval.

A member of the Ways and Means Committee of the House said that the name of Major McKinley would be pressed upon the President in connection with the vacancy. The closest friends of the major, however, said that he would not take the place or any other that would interfere with the probability of his being nominated for Governor of Ohio next fall.

Representative Wallace of Brooklyn said that the New York delegation would like to see Secretary of the Navy Tracy transferred to the head of the Treasury Department, and that the suggestion would be made to the President at the proper time.

Representative Cannon, the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, is said to be desirous of an opportunity to accept or decline the vacant office.

First Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Nettleton is also spoken of as Secretary Windom's successor. General Nettleton's views on financial questions are thoroughly in accord with those held by the dead Secretary and President Harrison.

Senator Ingalls is Mentioned.

TOPEKA, Kan. Jan. 31.—The death of Secretary Windom has given renewed hope to the admirers of John J. Ingalls. Already the defeated Senator is being boomed here to succeed the deceased Secretary. To-day a resolution was introduced in the Senate asking the President to appoint a man who will be in accord with the Western financial question.

DOINGS IN THE HOUSE.

The Principal Interest Now Centers on the Silver Coinage Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The docket of the House Committee on Rules is full with requests that certain days be set apart for specified legislation. The committee will only exert its power in behalf of a few of the most important measures on the calendar, and the remainder will have to take their chances in the general scramble that marks the closing days of a short session and an expiring Congress.

The principal interest centers on the Senate Silver Coinage bill. Mr. Bland's resolution to discharge the Coinage Committee from its consideration is before the Committee on Rules, and it is believed the Speaker will decide that the resolution is a privileged one and can be called up at any time. The chances are that the resolution will pass if it can be brought to a vote, and the bill brought directly before the House, without awaiting the action of the Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures.

Arrangements have been made with the Speaker by which two more days next week will be given to the consideration of the Shipping bill, probably Tuesday and Wednesday. The chances are that the Military Academy and Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bills will be disposed of next week.

Wholesale Smuggling of Chinamen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—The Department has received information from Wild Superior, Wis., that wholesale smuggling of Chinamen into the United States has been going on there all winter. The Celestials are brought to Canadian ports from China, and then make their way to Port Arthur. There they are provided with transportation into the United States on sleighs and wagons, in most cases being brought a distance of about 300 miles to Two Harbors, Minn., at which point the Duluth Iron Range railroad conveys them to their ultimate destination.

THE WAR IN CHILI.

Several Engagements in Which Many Were Killed on Both Sides.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 31.—According to Chilian advices received here there have been desperate and sanguinary engagements fought between the revolutionists and the forces of the Government. Many men have been killed on both sides, but reports conflict as to which side was victorious.

There seems to be but little action taken on either side at Santiago de Chili, the capital.

It is reported that fifteen thousand revolutionists are concentrated at Quillotte, in the province of Valparaiso, fifty miles from Santiago, and it is believed that they contemplate an advance on the capital.

The rebels threaten to bombard every port on the coast of Chili unless the Government concedes their demands.

Iquique has been recaptured by the Government troops, and the revolutionists have been compelled to evacuate Lapona, whence, after a fierce engagement, they were compelled to retreat to Lanorita by 5,000 Government troops.

A later report says that the Government recently sent out a force of 12,000 men against the revolutionists, and that the entire force has gone over to the enemy.

THE PATIENTS BETTER.

Prof. Hurd Sure That Koch's Lymph Will Cure Tuberculosis.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 31.—Prof. Hurd of the Johns Hopkins Hospital states that the patients under his care who are suffering from lung troubles are getting better.

Said he: "I am now convinced Koch's lymph is a success. I am certain that it will cure tuberculosis. The patients here are in a greatly improved condition. By different means which we have of testing the condition of the lungs we find those organs are also in an improved condition. They appear to be healing and I sincerely believe the patients will be completely cured. Regarding the publication of the death of an English lady in a hospital at Cannes of blood poisoning, alleged to have been superinduced by the lymph treatment, I do not believe the use of the lymph could have caused such an ailment. One the ingredients of the lymph is carbolic acid, one of the strongest antiseptics. For that reason I do not see how the lymph could have caused that complaint."

SENATOR CAMERON'S COURSE.

A Resolution on the Matter Alleged to Drop in the Pennsylvania House.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 31.—In the House a resolution was offered condemning Senator Cameron's course on the silver question and the Elections bill and calling upon him to adhere closer to his party and party principals or else resign.

After the resolution had been read a motion was made and seconded to lay it upon the table. The Speaker, however, decided that, as the resolution had not been read the second time, it was not before the House. The nays were so decidedly in the majority on the question of reading the resolution a second time that Representative Thompson, who had introduced the resolution, allowed it to drop.

CANADIANS EXCITED

Party Feeling Running High Over the Election.

RUMORS ABOUT THE CABINET.

Sir John Macdonald Says that Reciprocity Means Annexation.

Great Grief at Northampton Over the Death of Charles Bradlaugh—Police Raid a Newspaper Office in Paris—Sexton Predicts that the Irish Question Will be Settled Next Week.

OTTAWA, Ont., Jan. 31.—Excitement over the prospective election still continues. Every train brings fresh arrivals from the lower provinces and the West. Frederick Nichols, secretary of the Manufacturers' Association, is here, and so are leading contractors and other government supporters. A rumor is gaining ground that Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Leonard Tilley will re-enter the Cabinet at the earliest opportunity.

Party feeling is running high. The Liberals are strongly in favor of the most extended reciprocity with the United States, while the party in control of the government, under the lead of Sir John A. Macdonald, is insisting that reciprocity means annexation and annexation means treason.

The Toronto Globe says: "Our Washington correspondent, speaking on good authority, states this morning that a short time ago Sir Julian Pauncefote, acting, as he believed, at the instance of Sir John Macdonald, began to throw out feelers to the State Department at Washington for a reciprocity treaty of some sort. In a purely informal manner Mr. Blaine stated that the United States government was prepared to treat with Great Britain for a treaty with Canada on the basis of unrestricted trade, but that it was not ready to discuss any proposition which fell short of that."

BRADLAUGH'S DEATH.

He Will be Buried in a Coffin of Earth. Grief at Northampton.

LONDON, Jan. 32.—The Radicals of Northampton who, by an emphatic majority, persisted in sending Charles Bradlaugh back, time after time, to Parliament, are in deep grief over the death of their representative.

All classes in that town are joining in testimony of esteem for the man who conquered his way to recognition by the Tories, as well as Liberals. Public houses as well, as shops were closed as soon as the death became known, and remained closed all day.

Bradlaugh, like his daughter, who died some time ago, will be buried in a coffin of earth and in a manner consistent with his disavowal of religious professions.

He is said lately, however, to have expressed a wish that, in the event of his death, nothing should be done that would in any way wound the susceptibilities of others; so that, while religion will be absent, it will not be insulted.

Among the persons who have expressed their grief was several prominent natives of Hindostan, who are deeply grateful to Bradlaugh for his efforts in behalf of Indian self-government. It is said to have been, of late, the main object of Bradlaugh's life to secure a measure of national autonomy for the people of India, and he was the chief agitator in their behalf in Great Britain.

The King of Sweden's Debts.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—A despatch from Stockholm says that the King of Sweden has been running in debt considerably for personal expenses, and is under heavy obligations to certain rich merchants of Gothenburg. The merchants are now getting anxious about their money, as the royal allowance is not likely to leave any surplus for the obligations they hold. The matter creates much public comment.

THREE HUNDRED DEAD.

Further Details of the Burning of the Shanghai.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The steamer Rio de Janeiro arrived last night from Hong Kong. She brings details of the burning of the steamer Shanghai on the river Yangste Kiang by which 300 Chinese lost their lives.

The steamer left Chin Kiang December 25 with over 400 Chinese and one foreign passenger. When only a few miles up the river smoke was seen coming out of the after hold where a cargo of cotton was stored. Water was played on the hatches, but these soon fell in and great volumes of flame and smoke burst through.

The second officer then attempted to go forward, but found the Chinese huddled together in so dense a crowd that he could not get through, but was forced to crawl along the outside rail.

As soon as the flames became uncontrollable the steamer was headed for the bank of the river, which was reached in a few minutes.

Many Chinese were burned to death, while others jumped overboard and were drowned.

The European officers and passengers escaped to the shore, but were stripped of their clothing by the villagers, and the same has befell the Chinese passengers who escaped.

ROW IN PARIS.

A Force of Policemen Seize a Newspaper Office.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—The police seized the issue of the incendiary paper "Egalite." The office was guarded by twenty desperate would-be revolutionists, armed with revolvers and cudgels, but these were easily dispersed.

A strong detachment of police prevented the approach of a mob of students from the Latin Quarter. About 600 students had gathered, but they were not allowed to cross the bridge.

Great excitement prevailed in the district until about 6 o'clock, the police being continually engaged in dispersing disorderly groups. Many students were arrested.

RESPECT HIS WISHES!

JOB MALE LEFT AN UNSIGNED WILL BUT HIS HEIRS KNOW HIS DESIRES.

Money for the Library and the Unitarian Church was Among His Bequests, and That None of Property Should be Sold in Five Years Was One of the Will's Provisions.

The city that he loved so well and to whose fame and prosperity he contributed more than did any hundred other men; the public library and gallery of art he has erected; the institutions of charity he has contributed to so continuously; the church society he has recently been so active in establishing here; the Young Men's Christian Association in which he was so much interested; none of these will probably be benefited a cent by the death of Job Male.

When he lay on his bed last Thursday night with every throb of his heart growing weaker and weaker, he made a courageous effort to dispose of his possessions in legal form. There were present beside that death bed, his nephew, Job Male, Jr; his dead wife's sister, Mrs. Stout; his niece, Mrs. Fenno; Drs. Davis and Endicott, A. C. Baldwin and another close friend of the dying man, one who has had charge of his property in Jersey City.

The doctors, recognizing their patient's intense desire to will away his property before his death in the ways he had devised and long intended, did everything possible to prolong his life short of a too daring treatment. But he died before the signing of his name while the lawyer was copying with all human speed, the provisions and bequests that the dying man had just dictated to him.

Job Male Jr., said it was his uncle's desire that a lawyer should be called in to make his will. He had two letters in his pocket from his uncle expressing such a wish and summoning him from Canada to be present. So although the aged man was sinking fast away, Craig A. Marsh, who has recently been appearing for Mr. Male in some suits before the courts, was sent for.

The sick man was thoroughly conscious of everything that he was saying and that was being done. He told the lawyer to insert a provision in the will, that none of his property should be sold before the expiration of five years. His voice was so weak that he could hardly be heard. The lawyer leaned forward and asked—"One year, Mr. Male?" "No, no," was the answer, with an emphatic shake of the head. "Two years?" Again a shake of the head. "Three years?" The sick man rolled his head weakly from side to side on the pillow and whispered, "No, no! five years."

He made a bequest to the Male Public Library and also to the Unitarian church. After all his wishes had been noted, the lawyer began the making of a draft in legal form. Then the effects of relaxation from excitement began to develop. The sick man was asked by the lawyer in the presence of the witnesses mentioned above, "Is this your last will and testament?" He answered clearly and consciously, "Yes." Then he seemed to feel that it was all over—that his last hope had been accomplished and his every wish fulfilled. The power of the hypodermic injection vanished, the strength of the man's will faded away. Just as the pen was to be placed in the shaking fingers he sank into unconsciousness from which he never rallied.

Only a few seconds more of life were wanted—just time enough for the making of seven little letters, "Job Male." What a mighty difference was wrought by that lacking minute! All the earthly possessions of Job Male the philanthropist, will now be divided among a lot of nephews and neices whom he did not know, whom he did not care for, and who cared even less for him. Some of them, it is said, he has never seen, and none of them has ever assisted in his struggle to achieve the fortune they will now enjoy. Not but that it is right that the property of the departed should descend to the next of kin; yet it should be divided as he desired and the public benefits it had been his hope and promise to assist, should not suffer. The heirs have in the unsigned will, a transcript of his intentions. Maybe they will agree to such a devising of the fortune—but probably not.

And, by the way, this fortune is not the five or seven millions the morning papers estimate it. $500,000 will more than cover all the ex-Mayor leaves. To a certain extent he was what is called "property-poor." He owned eighty-odd houses in this city, worth from $1,500 to $15,000 each. If the heirs want to make a division right away and sell these houses at auction, they won't bring $250,000 and real estate in Plainfield will suffer a blow from which it will not recover in ten years. Most of Mr. Male's realty here and in Jersey City is mortgaged. He was always trading and accumulating property of that sort. His lawyer, Nelson Runyon, of this city, in the past few years has probably drawn 200 deeds of transfer, mortgages, etc., from and to Mr. Male.

There are some of the dead man's friends who believe there is a former will in existence. This is improbable. Unless one has been drawn within the last few months, there is none but the unsigned one made at the death bed. And if there had been one drawn within the last few months, there would have been no need of preparing the one of Thursday night, and of prolonging the dying man's life to execute it.

The above intimation that there was no will a few months ago, is made upon the authority of Mr. Male himself. He said to his lawyer, Mr. Runyon, at that time that he had been thinking about making a will, but said no more then nor since. A few days after he made a visit to Canada and was gone some time. Since his return he seems to have been preparing to have the will drawn. Everything was ready Thursday night. His houses were all designated by numbers and he had decided how all his possessions should be distributed. The executors named, it is said, were his Jersey City friend and his namesake nephew who has been referred to as "Job Male, Jr., in this article for the purpose of designation.

THE STATE CHAMPIONSHIP CHESS CONTEST.

Another Struggle for the Cup That Has Been Held by Plainfield Players for Three Years.

The sixth annual tournament of the New Jersey Chess Association, for the championship cup now held by Mr. Keys of this city, will be held on Monday, the 23d of next month, at the rooms of the Elizabeth Club, in the Wheelmen's house, on East Broad street, that city.

The New Jersey Association was organized in Elizabeth, on Washington's birthday, 1886, and the first tournament was held for the State championship. It was won by E. C. Stokes, of Millville. In 1887, at Newark, and on Washington's birthday, the second annual meeting was held and Mr. Stokes again won the championship.

Out of thirty-two contestants in the third annual tourney, held at Rutherford, the championship was won by R. B. Keys of Plainfield. Plainfield was selected for the place of meeting in 1889 and another Plainfield man, C. L. Murphy, was the winner of first honors. Mr. Keys, of the Plainfield Club, again took the championship at the tourney last year, which was held in New Brunswick.

The competition for the championship and the custody of the C. H. Waterbury cup is open to all players of the State, and shall not exceed thirty-two in number. Alfred Conger is the secretary, and to him all communications regarding the coming meet should be addressed.

Elizabeth's Musical Society Concert.

Tuesday's concert at The Casino is the talk of the town. Everybody is going. Those who haven't secured their tickets may be able to do so at the door. The ladies who started and engineered this affair, deserve much credit. The stage willl be set with potted plants. The programme is very attractive. Two of the numbers are written with a soprano obligato for Mrs. Gerrit Smith, and are very pretty. Among the others are compositions of Joseph Mosenthal and Wagner. Residents of Orange have heard of the concert and have proposed to the club to repeat it in their city, but it is hardly likely that they will do so, as the club does not intend to go into the concert business.

The Late Secretary Windom Carried Through Plainfield Yesterday.

A special car on train 512, the Royal Blue line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company which passed through this city at about 12:15 yesterday afternoon, had on board the corpse of Secretary Windom, which was being taken to Washington.

The special combination car was full of gentlemen accompanying their sad burden, among whom were Secretary of the Navy Tracy, ex-Secretary of State Bayary, Judge Arnoux, C. M. Hendley, private secretary of the deceased, Attorney-General Miller, and others.

He Never Rallied from the Effects of His Awful Injuries.

John L. King, son of John S. King, of this city, who was so terribly crushed Thursday morning, as told exclusively in THE PRESS, between a Lehigh Valley freight train and the railing of the bridge that spans the river between Rahway avenue and Murray street, Elizabeth, died at the Hospital during the afternoon in great agony.

The unfortunate man had his shoulders and hip simply mashed; rendering it a wonder that he survived his injuries for even a moment.

A Frisky Heifer Defies a Train.

A two year-old Alderney heifer strayed from "Willow Farm," Dunellen, Friday, and ran up the Central Railroad tracks as far as the Green Brook "tanks," where she was struck by the engine of a coal train. The engineer, not wishing to injure the animal, slowed up his train, and all would have been well had the heifer kept up her pace. Instead she turned and faced the engine, prepared to fight. She was picked up by the cowcatcher and thrown into the ditch uninjured.

Will It Jump?

Adventists have got their prophecy-mill at work again and have arranged things to have the world jump the track in March. This will not, however, jar this well-balanced community, and at Collier's 3 Park avenue, business will be found booming just the same, and watches, diamonds and jewelry better and more reasonable than ever. You can bank on this, for if you see it in the Press its a go.

The Electric Light People Still Taking Their Time.

Complaints against the electric light company's managers are renewed. Last night Broadway, East Fourth, Fifth and Sixth streets, Prospect avenue, and other thoroughfares, were again in darkness—yet the company claims to have repaired all damage done by the storm and to have perfected the street lighting system.

The wire that rubs against the third tree from Broadway on Sixth street, and that has already caused so much comment because of the shock it transmits to those touching the tree, is still as festive as ever, and sets fire to the tree branches at will. It is a dangerous thing.

The company's attention has repeatedly been called to these faults, yet they are not remedied.

NOT AARON KLINE OF THE CRESCENT LEAGUE.

Even the New York "World" Takes Its Story Back, and Another Chicago Paper Apologizes.

[From The New York World.]

A Chicago despatch of the 24th inst. gave the singular adventures of a young traveling salesman named Kline, who was said by the despatch to be in the employ of Arnold, Constable & Co., the well-known and long-established dry-goods and carpet firm, of this city.

According to the story, as wired from the Windy City, Mr. Kline had met a woman in Clark street, Chicago, had gone with her to a saloon, and had known nothing more until he came to himself in a hospital.

In the meantime, while he was unconscious, he had been picked up for dead in one of the dark alleys of the city and had been carried to the morgue. Fortunately, a morgue doctor saw signs of life in the body, and was persevering enough to accomplish the man's resurrection after hours of hard work.

It was this temporary sojourn at the deadhouse and the restoration to life which followed it that gave the case its peculiar features. Apart from that it was the simple story of a man being decoyed, drugged, robbed and thrown into the street.

The mention in the despatch of the firm's name given above brought the force of the story, in New York, against Mr. Aaron Kline, who is a salesman for Arnold, Constable & Co., and who was in Chicago at about the time of the morgue episode.

It appears, however, upon careful investigation, that the statement in the despatch was a mistake, and that the young Mr. Kline of the Chicago adventure was not Mr. Aaron Kline, nor was he an employe of the great New York firm named.

The gentleman who has suffered through the mistake has been for a long period in the service of Arnold, Constable & Co., and enjoys the thorough confidence and esteem of his employers. He is of irreproachable character and habits, and the knowledge of this fact made it appear from the very first almost incredible to his employers and friends that he should have been a victim of such circumstances as those narrated.

[From The Chicago News.]

There appeared in the Evening News of last Saturday an account of how a man, whose name was given as Frank Kline, had been taken to the county hospital in an apparently lifeless state and been resuscitated by means of an electric battery and a stomach-pump. Mr. A. V. Kline, who is travelling representative for Arnold, Constable & Co. of New York, and who was in Chicago at about the time of the occurrence mentioned, has been by some people connected with the case, to his great annoyance. Mr. A. V. Kline wishes it understood that he is not the Frank Kline referred to, and that he has no connection with the matter. It is claimed for Mr. A. V. Kline by those who know him that he is a gentleman whose character would in itself be a sufficient refutation of any possible connection with the story about Frank Kline, whose name it is now said is Clinck.

He Gives Thanks to Mr. Richards and THE PRESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE PRESS:—Honor to whom honor is due, praise to whom praise is deserving, but first of all, thanks to the Rev. Mr. Richards for his manly, clear, forcible, and timely sermon, and secondly, thanks to you for its publication. You could not have put your columns to better use.

You speak of 2,139 copies of THE PRESS containing it, having been published. It will bear ten times that number. The W. C. T. U. or the Y. M. C. A. could not do a better thing than to order and circulate them—sending a copy to every Plainfield official, to the Governor and his Cabinet, to every member of the Senate and Assembly, and to suggest that it be read from the Clerk's table in both Houses—in order that the "elders" might for once hear something worth hearing—something full of instruction, full of warning and of good counsel.

Nay, more. Let it go broadcast over the State. It would be well for all the Ahabs and Jezebels and "elders" to see it. It would do them more good than Naboth's garden. And not only them, but through its influence on their minds, be for good to many a rum-cursed and Sabbath-defying community. Yes, and more still, for through them in the same way, it might be a blessing to many a poor dumb beast, who at the tension of nerve and muscle, and the expense of vitality and suffering, is earning money for unworthy owners and gamblers.

I have not the pleasure of an acquaintance with Mr. Richards, but again and heartily do I say—thanks for his sermon, and to you for its publication.

T.

Mayor Place to Enlighten Them.

Mayor Charles Place of North Plainfield, will address a meeting of citizens in Voorhees Hall, Bound Brook, Monday Evening, at 7:30 o'clock, on the subject of Borough Government. Bound Brook voters will thereby be fully informed on this important matter, which will be accepted or rejected at a special election February 10.

There is one thing, the price of which is not affected by the McKinley Bill. High tariff or low tariff, free trade or any other trade, Hires' Cough Cure costs 25 cents enough.

BRUTAL, DETERMINED SUICIDE.

A Discouraged Railroad Man Eats a Poison-Sandwich in the Presence of His Invalid Wife.

Thomas Lusk, a locomotive fireman popular from end to end of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, and a well-known resident of Bound Brook, committed suicide Thursday evening by eating a large quantity of "rough on rats."

Lusk was thirty years of age. He was married to Lizzie Roach in November, 1885. Their marital relations had always been pleasant, but recently his wife became a confirmed invalid, and heavy doctor bills, worriment over his wife's illness, and business troubles, unbalanced his mind.

The suicide was a determined one, and brutal in its extraordinary coolness. Lusk returned home from work and announced to his sick wife and two female friends who were present that he had just been promoted to the position of engineer. He asked his wife where she would rather live, at Jersey City, Philadelphia or Bound Brook. She told him she felt so bad she thought she never would be able to leave Bound Brook, to which he replied: "A man might better be dead than have so much trouble."

He next asked for his supper, and, on being told that none had yet been prepared, exclaimed: "Oh, dear, I am so discouraged!—but I'll find something to eat." He repaired to a cupboard and brought out a loaf of bread and a box of the deadly poison. Cutting off two slices of bread, he spread the mixture of "rough on rats" and water over them thickly, making a sandwich, which he deliberately devoured before the horrified women. One woman started to go for a doctor, but he would not allow that. After finishing the sandwich he mixed the remaining poison with a quantity of water and quaffed it with apparent relish. Not until two hours later was Dr. C. F. Phinney summoned. When he arrived he was greeted by Lusk with the words: "Ah-ha, doctor, I've got the best of you this time You're too late; it's been in me too long."

He suffered frightful agonies, and died in convulsions. This is the sixth death in the Lusk family in less than a year.

A Treat for Every One of You.

"The Prince and the Pauper," one of Manager Daniel Frohman's companies, with little Elsie Leslie in the dual roles, will be the attraction at Music Hall Monday night for the first time here. The little girl is a wonder. Her part in this play is longer than that of Hamlet, and calls for genuine acting which puts it far beyond the power of merely precocious children. The play is one of the imagination, it is true, but it possesses the true poetic spirit, and such a semblance of reality that it never seems unnatural. It is equally interesting to grown people who are tired of conventional dramas, and children who have never witnessed a play of any kind.

Taylor's Hotel Not for Sale.

"I have heard a rumor about the purchase of this hotel by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, but I do not know anything about it and do not believe there is anything in it," said George B. De Revere, of this city, the lessee of Taylor's Hotel in Jersey City, the other day.

"The property is not for sale," said Willard Fisk, the owner. "I have heard the story about the Railroad Company buying the hotel, but no one has approached me on the subject. It is an old story, which reappears periodically and has done so for ten years."

Supt. Lendrum, of the Keystone Restaurant in the Pennsylvania Railroad depot, had not heard of the alleged purchase and the railroad officials knew nothing about it.

Praise for Dr. Ripley, and Endorsement for THE PRESS.

(From the Westfield Standard.)

Referring to the much talked-of address of Chauncey B. Ripley, LL. D., at Trenton introducing the subject of State roads, to the New Jersey State Board of Agriculture, the Plainfield Press says that it is heartily in favor of the scheme and will do all in its power to bring success. The Press asks: "Is there one of our contemporaries who will not?" Here is a question that ought to be answered by every newspaper in the State with an emphatic "No!" With the newspapers outside of the State devoting space by the column to Dr. Ripley's address, as for example the New York Times, the New York World, the New York Evening Post, etc., it is apparent that the subject is a live one, and regarded with favor.

It is to be hoped that the papers of this State will take up Dr. Ripley's proposition, and discuss it fully. We publish the Doctor's address in full, and commend it to the careful attention of all our exchanges who may not have already taken the matter up. If these roads cost the highest figure mentioned by Dr. Ripley, to wit: $5,000,000, it would be only $3.50 per capita at the end of twenty years, for the present population. The interest at 3 per cent. would be only 17½ cents per head while the debt is unpaid. The proposition commends itself especially to agricultural citizens.

I HAVE been a great sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breathe. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely; it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use with safety, and that does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

To Help Out the Social Clubs.

As the highest Courts of this State have decided that social clubs cannot dispense liquor to their members for any consideration unless regularly licensed, an important bill has recently been introduced in the Legislature at Trenton, by Assemblyman Lane of this county, authorizing the licensing of social clubs which have been incorporated and have a membership of over 50. The fee is to be $50, if the membership is not over 200, and $100 if over 200. The number of social clubs in the cities of the State is on the increase and this will help them.

TWO EASTERN SNAKES.

The Cobra Is Good-Natured But the Polonga Is a Bad Neighbor.

From ages past, says a writer in Popular Science, the susceptibility of snakes to the influence of music has been fully recognized, and it would be interesting to know how many varieties acknowledge its power. In Ceylon the natives say that only two—and they the two most venomous, the cobra and the tic polonga—can be charmed. The former, the hooded or spectacled snake, every one has heard of; the latter is not so well known out of the island and is a far more deadly and dangerous foe. The natives hold the cobra in the highest estimation and look upon it as the king of snakes—the Tamil name for it being in fact "pulla parmbu," or "good snake," and I think it is an admitted fact that it will seldom if ever attack any one unprovoked. I have myself seen cobrae under many circumstances, and although I have conscientiously destroyed every one that I have been able to, I have no hesitation in saying that they are not dangerous unless disturbed. In proof of this I would quote the case of a pair that occupied a hole in a clump of oleanders in a certain garden for several years. No one ever disturbed them and they sunned themselves where they pleased, and the gardener rather looked upon them as an additional attraction to the place. They used to eat squirrels, young birds and any thing else that came in their way, but never attempted to do any harm, and remained unmolested as long as I knew the place, and probably raised an interesting family meanwhile. Unlike the cobra, the tic polonga is always ready to attack on the slightest provocation, and as it inhabits many localities—some being found in shrubs and trees, some in grassy waterways and others invariably in the vicinity of footpaths—it is more often met with, and is I think, responsible for most of the fatal cases of snakebite that happen from time to time. This difference in the habits of the two snakes is well known to the natives and is the subject of one of the Singhalese fables, which is as follows.

One very dry year, when little rain fell, when rivers had dwindled into a silver thread, when tanks were baked hard and brown and wells and water courses were dried up, a polonga, suffering agonies from thirst and faint from the overpowering heat, met a cobra looking very lively and refreshed. "Have you found water anywhere?" gasped the polonga. The other said: "Yes." "Where—oh, where is it? Tell me, I implore you, for I am dying of thirst!" said the polonga. The cobra replied: "I can not tell you unless you promise to do no harm to any living thing that may be beside the water." "As for that," replied the polonga, "I would promise any thing so that I might quench this intolerable thirst." And he gave a solemn promise. "Well, then," said the cobra, "beyond those bushes is a large earthen pan of water, in which a child is playing. Go and drink from it, but at your peril do not harm the child." So saying they parted. The cobra, after going a little way, began to distrust the polonga, knowing the latter's treacherous disposition and rugged temper, and turned to follow him. He arrived too late. The polonga had not only drank of the water, but crept into the pan where the child began to play with him. On this he grew violently angry, bit the child with all his force, so violently, indeed, that the infant died in a few minutes. The cobra, in hot and fiery indignation, attacked the polonga and punished him severely, biting off a piece of his tail. Hence to this day all prolongas have blunt tails. Ever since cobras and prolongas have been at deadly feud. They are the most deadly serpents in Ceylon. When people hate one another mortally they are said proverbially to be like cobra and prolonga.

TAKEN ON FAITH.

Men Who Have Tried to Shave with Vaseline Vowing Vengeance.

The faith of the newspaper reader is sometimes great and abiding, but occasionally it leads him into errors. A few weeks ago, says the Galignani Messenger, a London weekly journal, published exclusively for ladies, contained a letter from a lady correspondent asserting that vaseline as a shaving cream was superior to any soap or cream that had ever been invented. This scarcely appears likely to be a very interesting topic for the gentler sex, but, nevertheless, many letters were published on the subject, and finally it became an established truth among bearded women that vaseline was the very best article with which to supplant soap, which, it is said, "chaps" and irritates the skin.

Had this theory remained confined within the limits of the journal that gave it birth no harm might have been done; but unfortunately, several American journals of repute and standing, ever ready to grasp a progressive innovation, boldly announced that vaseline was the only article with which a man could comfortably remove his beard. Perhaps the readers of these papers tried it on a very cold morning, or perhaps their razors were blunt, or perhaps—and very much more likely—the lady who asserted that she had removed her beard every morning for many years with the aid of vaseline was playing a little trick on the journal with which she corresponded.

Doubtless she never suspected that powerful and influential dailies in America would proclaim her method as an infallible one. And now the result is that old men, middle-aged men, and youths across the Atlantic are vowing vengeance against those who recommended such a painful experiment. Having a sound tooth drawn is a trifle compared to shaving with vaseline—at least, so the gentlemen across the Atlantic say.

Heed the Law.

Under the laws of every State in this Union the man who shoots another man who may be stealing his fruit or robbing his hen roost can be prosecuted for manslaughter. The idea is that you shall go out and argue with him, and if argument don't do whistle for an officer.

UNDER THE RED CROSS.

What Miss Barton's Society Would Do in Case of War.

The International Treaty with the Red Cross Society—Its Work at Johnstown After the Flood—Its Methods in Sending Quick Relief.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Pertinent inquires recently received by me are so timely as to call for immediate response at the risk, even, of that consideration which the gravity of the subject might well claim, or the literary precision which the cultured tastes of readers might demand. I will attempt to meet them in order as they occur.

"What are we to expect from the intimations of the latest dispatches of trouble among the Eastern nations; the threatening attitude of Russia, and the movements of the German Emperor; and especially, how shall we interpret the little remark, apparently quite incidental, that notice had been given to the Red Cross, and that unusual activity was observable at its various headquarters? Is this the same Red Cross that works on our fields of misfortune in civil life; that gathers up people from elemental wrecks; that fed the starving cattle in the Mississippi floods, and built and furnished acres of homes in Johnstown? If so, who gave it notice to work on these fields, and in case of European war would it be expected to, or could it render aid there, if needed?"

It is very difficult to determine the import of their warlike manifestations, which are, most likely, mere manifestations, and which, in the great march of progress and the clear light of later days, will probably find a better ending than open war.

Still it is to be remembered that the specks of war have been long on that horizon. The clouds have alternately gathered and dispelled, and it is impossible to forecast the moment when the lightning playing behind their white rifted thunder caps may shoot out and startle old Europe to its center. So long as the boundaries of nations are fixed by the sword, as for all time they mainly have been, so long shall we be in danger of their being maintained by the sword; and until the "balance of power," upon which the existence of nations is supposed largely to depend, shall mean something more than the mere strength of their armies, nations and people must look more or less to this direful savior for even physical life.

The outbreak of a war to-morrow between Russia, Austria and Turkey would be nothing the surprise to the world as was the declaration of war between France and Germany in this same month twenty years ago. Their comparative provocation, necessity, or the relative value of the causes which led to the one or would lead to the other, must be left to the general intelligence and diplomatic wisdom of the world to decide.

But the allusion to the Red Cross would remain the same in both. Napoleon III. declared war upon Germany on the 15th of July, 1870. On the 16th the International Red Cross of Geneva, Switzerland, was on its way to the "front" wherever the meeting of the contending forces should chance to make it.

The first men who fell in that great historic contest were picked up by the corps of the Red Cross on the field; all sick and wounded were, under the stipulations of its treaty, held as neutrals and treated as non-combatants.

In better explanation of the conditions of the treaty, I will quote direct from a well defined article recently published in a leading magazine. The writer says:

"The Red Cross national bodies in time of war are required to be on hand and to furnish aid; the volunteer bands are formed in corps, are bound to serve a definite period, and are required not to meddle with military affairs. The brassard, or arm badge, is worn by all in its service. Hospitals bear the flag over them; their ambulances are designated on the march by the Red Cross flag. Its corps must be self-sustaining. The international committee provides that the hospitals and ambulances, etc., are considered as neutral ground. Unless held by a military force, all persons employed therein are neutral and non-combatants.

"Neutrality continues after victory; inhabitants are to be considered free when caring for wounded; shelter of such to be protection for all; wounded soldiers to be returned to enemies' outposts whenever possible; on order of commanding general, all wounded prisoners, incapable of service again, to be returned; others to be paroled; absolute neutrality to prevail at all evacuations; Red Cross and sanitary attendants to wear distinctive uniforms and badges."

This treaty has changed not only the methods of procedure of the medical and hospital departments of all armies; but their insignia, flags, etc. There is but one military hospital flag in the world to-day. The commander who knows his own knows that of the enemy, and he breaks an international treaty if he knowingly turns even a gun or a stray shot upon it. The convoy of prisoners under escort bearing that sign is safe; no officer can fire upon that unarmed and defenseless body of men by "mistake;" no "mistake" can be made, nor pretend to be made. No captured men can longer suffer for lack of food; the world is pledged to supply this want and the way opened to do it. No fields nor hospitals at a field an long lack attendance, nursing, nor the necessaries of life; to this relief the way is opened. No wounded men can lie unattended upon a captured field, and no attendant upon them can be captured, and no distinction can be made in the care and nursing; friend and foe are alike to the workers of the Red Cross.

These are the conditions, and this the service which the Red Cross would assume upon the first note of war in Europe. This is our Red Cross, the same which would come into instant action in a similar necessity in America; and it is only another feature of the same, duly recognized by the great foreign powers, which, as I am so well asked, rescued the people, fed the starving cattle and built and furnished houses in Johnstown. It is this Red Cross to which the public thought is turned when news of a great calamity falls upon the ear. It is simply another part of the machine, moved by the same motor power of organized and practical humanity, acting under the same regulations, the same strict discipline, as if the victims to be served by it had become so through human, rather than elemental conflict.

The "civil" branch, or service in National calamities, is known among other nations as the "American Amendment."

While no actual call to aid in relief of wars has come to us in our nine years under the treaty, the Red Cross has taken its place and performed service on twelve fields of National disaster, and while regarded with grateful kindness by the people of our own country so far as understood by them, it is instructive to know with what interest its new work is observed, and how closely it is watched by the thirty nations within the treaty on the other side of the sea. They realize its fitness to the needs of our land, and approve, with a grateful pride, the additions made to the great structure of humanity so nobly erected by themselves.

The last ten years have been notably free from devastating wars in other countries which might have called for our aid; but as showing how promptly such aid can be rendered I may quote one example.

During the troubles among the Austrian States in the winter of 1886 a circular letter went out from the international committee of Geneva, Switzerland, the working corps of which held the hospital relief for the sick and wounded in the Balkan mountains, that the patients were suffering beyond their power to relieve; that the cold on the mountains was intense; their supplies had given out, and funds for procuring more entirely exhausted. This appeal was at once published; the first response was to this effect:

The people of New Albany, across the river from Louisville, who had been terribly swept by the floods of 1883-1884, and each time assisted by the agents of the Red Cross, having read the appeal, telegraphed to myself as president of the Red Cross, the sum of five hundred dollars ($500) for the use of the suffering soldiers in the Balkan mountains; this dispatch was that day cabled to the international committee of Geneva, and by them telegraphed to their corps at the front; and word came back to me that in less than forty-eight hours the poor, cold, benumbed, hungry and perishing victims of war, far away on the mountain coasts of the Black sea, were nestling under blankets and partaking of food purchased with the grateful gift of that comparatively little town hidden away on the banks of the Ohio.

I name this single instance as an indication of the promptness with which the facilities of this world-wide organization enable it to act.

AUSTRIAN LADIES

Ladies of high birth are wonderfully capable, owing to their excellent system of education, says a Vienna letter to the New York Evening Post. Whatever they may be called upon to do—from cutting a dress to making a salad—they are always ready.

Young ladies with titles and fortunes are sent to famous milliners and dressmakers, where they serve a regular apprenticeship, and remain until perfectly able to cut and make any garment.

An Austrian lady who can not swim or does not know how to ride well is an exception.

Needle work of every kind, even to the making of lace, is part of every young lady's education. There is no smattering of any thing; whether she learns the piano or to draw, she learns it thoroughly. If she has no talent at all for an art, which is seldom, she lets that art entirely alone. Her pedestrian accomplishments put us quite to shame; her efforts of memory are another source of wonder to us.

The wonderful memory which enables Austrian girls to repeat sometimes the whole of "Paradise Lost," or an entire drama, comes from practice begun in babyhood.

Every day the girl is expected to learn a poem or a page. She often does it while making her toilet; and at last a poem requires but a single reading, and it is stowed away in the memory safely. As linguists they are famous. This, too, comes from learning when very young. As the court language is French, learning it is compulsory. Even servants are expected to speak both French and German.

The burghers' daughters will not condescend to the learning of dress-making and cooking, which the titled lady can do without its reflecting on her social position. And so the young women to whom such knowledge would be of practical benefit are inefficient, while all the ladies at the court have at their fingers' ends the power to do any thing.

The Austrian lady of station is acquainted with every detail of the cuisine. A story is told by Viennese ladies of another, who, having neglected this branch of her education, allowed, at a great dinner party which she gave, two dishes of the same color to be served in succession—a fault for which no excuse could be made.

No Sentiment There.

In nine cases out of ten ships leaving New York, Boston or Philadelphia for distant ports are provisioned so close by their owners that if a ship-wrecked crew of ten men were picked up and fed for three days it would put everybody on short rations. A loss of four lays on sailing time would do the same thing.

English Medical Students.

Medical students in London are compelled to go through a course of four years' study, hospital attendance, and lectures, before being qualified to appear for final examination. By an order of the general medical council of England the term of preparation has been extended to five years.

MASSAGE OUTCOME.

The Polynesian "Lomi-Lomi" Far Superior—A Delicious Luxury.

"Did you ever see the 'lomi-lomi?'" said an elderly Bohemian to a San Francisco Chronicle reporter

"If you haven't and want to witness a novelty in the massage business just come along with me."

In a few minutes the elderly gentleman was lying on a hard couch, completely disrobed, but decently covered with a linen cloth from his chin to the tip of his toes. There entered with Oriental stealthiness of tread a young Japanese, who at once removed his coat, and, kneeling beside the couch, seized the old gentleman's arm and commenced to knead the muscles in an anatomical sort of way. Then he flexed the shoulder joint, the elbow joint, the wrist joint, and finally drew out each finger joint till it clicked back into the socket with a snap.

Every limb was thus treated, and then the Japanese went over all the large muscles of the back, the loins, the ribs, the neck in the same way. When he came to the palms of the hands he dug his elbows into them and "kneaded" them as if they had been bread. There was something marvelously dexterous about the way in which he traced the course of each muscle and soothingly flexed the weary ligaments.

When the operation was finished the old gentleman arose and said: "Let me tell you, the Japanese have gotten on to this 'lomi-lomi' business surprisingly. It is really the first experiment of the kind here, but every traveler in the Pacific islands knows what it means. Massage is nothing to it. Shall I tell you how it has affected me? When I lay down there, twenty minutes ago, I was fatigued to the verge of exhaustion. Now I feel ready to jump over that couch as readily as a twenty-year-old athlete. It's no delusion—it's a sober fact."

THE OLD NAVY.

How American Seamen of a Former Generation Handled Their Guns.

The proficiency of American gunnery, says a writer in the Century, is perhaps best illustrated by the Constitution's first action with the Guerriere, in which she was hulled but three times, while her antagonist, to use the words of her commander, was reduced to a "perfect wreck" within forty minutes from the time the Constitution began to fire. This battle occurred on August 19, 1812.

In her action with the Java, December 29, 1812, off the coast of Brazil, the Constitution was hulled but four times, and with the exception of her maintopsail yard she did not lose a spar. The Java, on the other hand, was "totally dismasted," while her hull was so shattered and pierced with shot holes that it was impossible to get her to the harbor of San Salvador, which was only a few hours' sail.

In her action with the Cyane and Levant the forces opposed were: Constitution, fifty-one guns, with 1,337 pounds of metal; British, fifty-five guns, with 1,508 pounds of metal. In this extraordinary action the Constitution was hulled only thirteen times, while the Cyane had every brace and bowline cut away, "her main and mizzen masts left in a tottering state, and other principal spars wounded, several shots in the hull, nine or ten between wind and water." The Levant also was roughly handled.

Before dismissing the subject of gunnery we should take into consideration: (1) The inferior quality of American cannon and shot; (2) the deficiency in weight of American shot; (3) the fact that in two of the four actions between single frigates the English used French cannon and shot, which were eight per cent. heavier than their nominal English equivalents.

Known by Their Hats.

A man who knocks about a great deal and is a close observer said recently to a Chicago Tribune reporter: "There is a man in this town who makes a living out of the manufacture of hat linings. He has stamps of all the leading hat houses in this city and New York and Paris. You know, may be, that a man is often known by the hat he wears. There are a few hat men whose names take the lead, and the young men who want to appear as if they were near the head of the procession get the linings of these well-known hat manufacturers from the man of whom I just told, and he puts them in cheap hats. The customer turns up his hat, then, whenever he takes it off, and shows the stamp of a well-known house, and thus, in some circles, he establishes himself without the assistance of any letters. The hat lining does it."

A Devoted Wife.

Mr. Froude's biography of Lord Beaconsfield contains the familiar story of the crushing of his wife's fingers in the carriage door on the night of one of his good speeches in Parliament. It will be remembered that knowledge of this accident was withheld from her husband for fear it might disturb his mind on so important an occasion. It is now made known in an English paper that the gentleman who proposed Mr. Disraeli the last time he was returned for Buckinghamshire possesses the handle of that carriage door, and has had it converted into a corkscrew, with which his old port is opened. The ardent and curious admirer also has the velvet lining of the coach with the Beaconsfield crest and Lady Beaconsfield's coronet attached to it.

Origin of the Marine Band.

The origin of the National Marine band at Washington is most curious. Nearly a hundred years ago, says the New York World, a Yankee captain kidnapped a strolling troop of musicians on the shores of the Bay of Naples and brought them to this country. From this handful of Italians the band was developed. The descendants of these stolen Italians are now among the wealthiest people of Washington. Some of them are prominent lawyers and others have their names connected with the best-known hotels and the largest real estate offices in the capital city.

PASTOR KOENIG'S NERVE TONIC

Perfectly Well!

FULLERS, Dubuque Co., Ia., Sept., 1889

Miss K. Finnigan writes: My mother and sister used Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic for neuralgia. They are both perfectly well now and never tired praising the Tonic.

Recovered Health and Happiness.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Dec. '88.

I was suffering for 12 years from a nervous disease more or less; tried everything I heard of, spent much money on things to get well, but none had the desired effect, until Rev. Sagg recommended the Pastor Koenig's Nerve Tonic, of which I used but three bottles and completely recovered my health and happiness. I hope others will be benefited by the remedy as much as I was.

MARY SENSE.

Our Pamphlet for sufferers or nervous diseases will be sent free to any address, and poor patients can also obtain this medicine free of charge from us.

A RIOT IN ALABAMA

White Miners Try to Drive Away Negro Rivals.

EIGHTEEN REPORTED KILLED.

Two Companies of Militia Hurried to the Scene by the Governor.

One of the Outcomes of the Big Strike at Birmingham—The Negroes Leaving the Town as Fast as They Can Get Away—An Effort Made to Arrest the Ringleaders Was Resisted.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 2.—In accordance with orders from Governor Jones, twenty-five men from the Birmingham Rifles and an equal number from the Birmingham Volunteers started under command of Captain Randolph Peyton for Carbon Hill, where there has been desperate fighting between the white and colored miners.

The Mayor of Carbon Hill telegraphed yesterday to the Governor that he was absolutely unable with the force at hand to preserve order or prevent bloodshed.

Carbon Hill is a small town in Walker county, on the Kansas City, Memphis and Birmingham road, and it has been difficult to get definite or reliable information in regard to the state of affairs there.

The first report was that nine negroes had been shot, of whom four had died. To-day the report comes that the fighting resulted in the killing of 18 negroes.

The trouble dates back to the big strike of the miners in this section which resulted in the defeat of the strikers. Many of the negroes either refused to join the strikers or deserted from their ranks. Some of the more turbulent of the white miners conceived the idea that it was to the action of the negroes that the failure of the strike was due and made up their minds to drive the negroes away.

As near as can be learned the negroes made no resistance. At all events no white men are reported among the killed or wounded. The negroes are reported as leaving the town as fast as they can get away.

An effort was made by the local authorities to arrest the ringleaders of the rioters, but were defied and informed that a persistence in the attempt would lead to more bloodshed.

POLICEMEN RESIGN.

General Feeling of Dissatisfaction Among the Force at Pittston, Pa.

PITTSTON, Pa., Feb. 2.—There is a general feeling of dissatisfaction among the police force of this city, and the place will soon be without police protection if the officers keep on resigning as fast as they have during the past 24 hours. Twenty or more have already resigned.

The officers are indignant over the conviction of policeman William Weathers, who killed a drunken hotelkeeper here last October. The town officials did nothing to assist the officer, although the public justified him in his action.

A Clerical Error Rectified.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Through a clerical error in misdirecting a letter in the Treasury Department recently, the Collector at Buffalo, N. Y., instead of the Collector for the Customs district of Niagara, was instructed that all Canadian live stock must be entered at Suspension Bridge; thus virtually removing the import cattle trade from Buffalo to the point. The live stock interest at Buffalo soon made itself heard in Washington, and the error having been discovered the necessary instructions to rectify have been sent to the Collector at Buffalo.

Tennie Claflin's Husband Very Feeble.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—A dispatch from London says that Sir Francis Cook, who married Miss Tennie C. Claflin, formerly of America, is reported to be in feeble health. Sir Francis celebrated his seventy-fourth birthday last Friday. His wife is said to be very devoted in her attendance upon him. The attempts in America to create trouble between the Claflin sisters and their husbands have almost ceased of late and the parties have retired into comparative domestic obscurity.

More Chiefs Go to Washington.

RUSHVILLE, Neb. Feb. 2.—Chiefs John Grass and White Bird and three young men, Turning Hawk, American Horse, jr., and Three Stars, in charge of T. W. Blackburn, of the Indian department, left last night for Washington to pay their respects to the Great Father. They all speak English and are educated. They are in great contrast to the delegation which left here a week ago.

An Ex-Collector Disappears.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—Frank Butler, ex-Tax Collector for Ridley Township, Delaware County, has fled, and a deficit in his accounts of $7,100 has been discovered. A warrant has been issued for his arrest. His son, George W. Butler, was arrested as an aider and abettor in the defalcations, and was yesterday held in $1,500 bail for a further hearing.

Deny Having Seized American Sealers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Russian authorities declare there is no truth in D. O. Mills' statement that the Russians have seized American sealers in open waters. Advices just received state that the Russian Government will not seize any sealing vessels on the Siberian coast unless found taking seals inside of the three mile limit.

Death of Ex-Treasurer Butler.

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 2.—Hon. Samuel Butler, ex-State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, died at his home here yesterday, aged 63.

SHE TOOK OPIUM.

Miss Potts Dies After Taking a Drug Prescribed by a Physician Friend.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Miss Helen Potts, a pupil at the fashionable finishing school for young ladies, known as the Comstock School, at No. 35 West 40th street, died at 11 a. m. from acute opium poison. The drug was taken on the advice of Carlyle W. Harris, a young medical student, who was one of Miss Potts' acquaintances and who wrote a prescription and had it filled for the young lady.

Coroner Schultze, after an investigation of the case, found that the death of Miss Potts, who was subject to attacks of heart disease, was due to the action of the opium in conjunction with her heart trouble. A further investigation will be made before the responsibility for the death is fixed.

No attempt was made to arrest either young Harris or the druggists who filled the prescription for Harris, but a portion of the medicine which Miss Potts took is in the possession of the Coroner, and will be subjected to an analysis.

Miss Potts was the only daughter of George Potts, of Ocean Grove, N. J., a wealthy and well known railroad contractor, who has an office at No. 40 Wall street.

SWINDLERS CAPTURED.

Two Green Goods Men Arrested in a Very Clever Manner.

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 2.—Charles and Eugene Duryea, two green goods swindlers, were arrested by Constable Shreve, near Union City, in a very clever manner. They made an appointment with Miles Walrod, a butcher, to meet him in the woods near that place, and for $500 deliver to him $5,000 in spurious currency.

Walrod concealed Constable Shreve in a large meat box in his wagon, where the officer overheard all the conversation, and at the proper time, with the aid of Walrod, captured the swindlers.

Emma Duryea, a sister of the defendants, is now under bail to appear at the next term of Quarter Sessions to answer to the same charge. More arrests will follow.

An Old Man Murdered.

LANCASTER, Pa., Feb. 2.—Henry P. Dorwart, an old man residing in this city, was found dead in an archway at St. Charles furnace, Columbia, Pa. He had an ugly cut on the head, a rib was broken and an arm and hand badly cut and bruised. A wrench was found close at hand, which is supposed to have been the weapon which inflicted the injuries. It is supposed the old man, who was paid off on Saturday, went to Columbia on a spree, and was robbed and murdered by tramps. An inquest will be held this evening.

Burglars Overlook a Prize.

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 2.—Burglars effected an entrance to the offices of Breck, Dimmick & Reynolds, attorneys, and C. G. Boland, insurance agent, in the Republican building some time during the night. They opened Reynolds' safe and secured $90 in cash, but left undisturbed $10,000 in stock belonging to the Dime Savings Bank and a certified check for $5,500 belonging to Mr. Reynolds. Boland's safe was also opened, but nothing except postage stamps was taken.

PUTNAM, Conn., Feb. 2.—Fly & Allen, grocers and grain dealers, were closed up on an attachment, with the probability of failure. The firm has been doing a heavy business, but were handicapped with a large stock of goods. Mr. Allen, of the firm, is a prominent Democratic politician in Eastern Connecticut.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Both Houses Considering Appropriation Bills.

SECRETARY WINDOM'S FUNERAL

The Members of the Cabinet Acted as Honorary Pallbearers.

Hon. John C. New May Secure the Treasury Portfolio—Senator Spooner is Not a Candidate—The Monetary Conference to Meet on Wednesday—The Sioux Chiefs to Attend the Theatre To-night.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Both houses of Congress met at 2 o'clock, after a majority of the members returned from the funeral of Secretary Windom.

There is a disposition on the part of the Senate to dispose of some appropriation bills during the week, and it is probable that the Fortifications bill, which was laid aside temporarily, will be passed, and that the Pensions and District of Columbia bills may also be taken up, and considerable progress made during the week.

Mr. Blair has good reason to believe that his bill to settle the accounts of laborers and mechanics arising under the 8-hour law will be considered and even passed before the week is out, and Mr. Platt is confident that he can call up the Copyright bill without any difficulty.

There is a possibility—a slight one, however—that an attempt will be made to bring the Bankruptcy bill before the Senate. The procedure in that body will depend mainly, however, on the action of a Republican caucus to be held early in the week. To this caucus the Republican "steering committee" will report a programme embracing, in all probability, the measures named, and the caucus will decide as to their disposition.

The greater portion of the time of the House during the week will be occupied with the consideration of appropriation bills. When the diplomatic appropriation bill is passed, Mr. Farquahar will make an effort to have the subsidy shipping bill disposed of, and four days will probably be allowed for consideration of this bill. The legislative appropriation bill will then be taken up and its consideration will consume the remainder of the week.

MR. WINDOM'S FUNERAL.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—The funeral services over the remains of Secretary Windom were held to-day. By order of the President all the executive departments were closed.

The body did not lie in state and there was no public view of the remains, but between 8 o'clock and 11 a. m. the near personal and official friends of the late Secretary had access to the house. At 11 o'clock the house was closed to visitors and a little later there was a private service at the house for the family only.

Mr. Wm. D. Windom, the dead Secretary's son, arrived yesterday from Baton Rouge, La.

Mrs. Garfield and her son were present at the funeral services.

The general services took place at the Church of the Covenant at noon. Dr. Hamlin officiated. Admission to the church was by ticket up to 11:45 a. m. All the members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the Diplomatic Corps, the Judiciary, the heads of bureaus and chiefs of divisions connected with the Secretary's office of the Treasury Department, general officers of the army and navy, and Senators and members of the House of Representatives were present.

The interment was at Rock Creek Cemetery. The members of the Cabinet acted as honorary pallbearers.

Sculptor Dunbar last night took a death mask of the face of the dead Secretary.

THE TREASURY PORTFOLIO.

Senator Spooner Says He Would Not Accept the Position.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—In pointing out the impossibility of securing anyone to succeed the late Secretary Windom from a distance within ten days, it is said that the President opens wide the door for speculation, and to those who read between the lines his determination to place John C. New, of Indiana, now Consul-General at London, at the head of the Treasury Department seems apparent.

It will be remembered that Mr. New was very desirous of entering the Cabinet, and it was thought at one time that he had the Treasury portfolio in his grasp.

Since he has been in London he has been in correspondence with Secretary Windom and the President on financial matters, and his qualifications are such as to admit of no doubt regarding his ability to fill the position. That Indiana has already one cabinet officer would not, in all probability, deter the President from appointing his friend to the vacant secretaryship."

Senator Spooner, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the vacancy, in conversation on the subject said: "I am not of the financial training to permit me conscientiously to accept the treasury portfolio. The President would not think of offering it to me, and if he did I would not accept. Please stop this nonsense and gossip. You can about my going into a Cabinet position."

Entertaining the Sioux Chiefs.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 2.—The delegation of Sioux Indians who are here to confer with the "Great Father" about their grievances, are enjoying all the pleasures of sight-seeing, and every effort is being made by those who have charge of them to render their trip to the capital enjoyable. To-night the chiefs will occupy four boxes at the National Theatre as the guests of Manager Canby of the Francis Wilson Comic Opera Company.

The Monetary Conference.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Judge Lambert Tree, ex-Minister to Belgium, is at the Arlington. He is the Democratic member of the International Monetary Conference, which will convene in Washington on Wednesday. Hon William A. Russell of Massachusetts, and ex-Senator Hill of Nevada are his colleagues representing the United States. From the Latin-American countries there will be about 18 delegates.

No Money in Supplying Natural Gas.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 2.—The Board of Public Works is conducting an investigation into the cause of the shut-down of the supply of natural gas here. It is shown that the Central Ohio Natural Gas Co., owning the franchise, lost $16,000 the year the lines were in operation, and that an investment representing over $1,000,000, in the way of pipes, dry wells, etc., was a dead loss on account of loss of supply.

Shot and Killed a Thief.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 2.—Wm. Duffy, aged 30, was shot and killed while in the act of robbing the house of Joseph Thompson, No. 1206 Tiernan street, at midnight. Thompson notified the police and gave himself into custody. He was released by the coroner on $1,000 bail. Duffy was a well-known thief and had a very bad record.

Typhoid Fever at Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 2.—Typhoid fever continues to spread. There were seven new cases yesterday and fifteen up to noon. The mortality returns in the morning included two deaths from typhoid fever, making seventeen deaths for the month from that cause. The disease is largely confined to children. The large number of patients down with the disease has exhausted the nurses of the city, and in quite a few cases nurses have been brought here from other cities.

Mr. Westinghouse Hopeful.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 2.—George Westinghouse, jr., states that 20,000 shares of preferred electric stock have been placed, conditioned upon a total subscription of 40,000 shares. The date for subscription has been extended to Feb. 15, and this is regarded as a sign that the company is having trouble over the placing of the 20,000 shares that are left. Mr. Westinghouse says, however, that the company will be all right by Feb. 15.

Warren and Griffin to Fight.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 2.—The Bowen-Gibbons fight having been declared off, Austin Gibbons left for his home in Paterson, N. J., last night. The Audubon Club has filled the date, March 9, with a fight between Tommy Warren and Johnny Griffin, of Boston, for a $2,000 purse. The men will fight at 124 pounds. Jimmy Carroll, who so ably seconded Bob Fitzsimmons in his recent go with Dempsey, is backing the Boston man.

O'Connor is Confident.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 2.—Hon. T. P. O'Connor is at the Arlington. "I can tell you," he said, "that there is every prospect of a satisfactory conclusion of the Boulogne conference. Indeed, I have recently had private advices that make me confident of a speedy adjustment of all difficulties. So far as home rule is concerned, while the cause may have received a temporary set-back, it is sure to triumph in the end.

PARNELL'S PROMISE

He Says an Irish Parliament is Close at Hand.

WILDLY CHEERED AT [illegible]

The People Told They Will Have Their Trust in a Few Days.

The Revolt in Opposition—The Rising to be Most Serious in Brussels—Troops and Artillery Ordered Out by Workingmen—British Interests at Work Against United States—Another Cathedral Burned.

DUBLIN, Feb. 2.—Mr. Parnell, according to programme, began his journey from Dublin to Ennis with a triumphal procession. There was a remarkable display of demonstration in honor of him along the route. At every stoppage an address was presented to Mr. Parnell, to which he briefly replied. At Athlone thousands of people had gathered at the station with torches and [illegible] devices.

Upon [illegible] greeted by the Reception Committee and a dense multitude of people from the surrounding districts. A procession was formed with bands and banners and Mr. Parnell was escorted to the place of meeting, in front of which a platform was erected.

Mr. Parnell in his speech declared that Ireland had stood fast to her cause and to be sovereign within her own borders. He refused to address any English audience, as he would not take the Irish people to task when they were in trouble, and events had proved the truth of his words, so in a few days they would know the truth of his declaration that they had won a settlement of this question that would be everlastingly creditable to their patriotism. They could gain a Parliament with real power to protect the interests of every class, to settle the question of land and police and to disarm the constabulary into a civil force entirely under the control of Ireland's representatives.

Under such a Parliament Ireland would realize the aspirations of a united nation. For this he had fought through many long years, and at the end of O'Connell's career he asked them to have patience and judge him by results. [illegible] cheering.

THE OPORTO REVOLT.

Death Awaits the Ringleaders and Many of Them Escape to Africa.

LISBON, Feb. 2.—Upon the suppression of the Oporto insurrection a court-martial was immediately ordered to try the ringleaders in the revolt, whose sentence is certain to be death. Many of the [illegible] are consequently hastening to the coast, but are readily dispersed by the command of the police.

The government has instituted an investigation to ascertain the authors of the disaffection, although it is believed that the conspiracy did not extend beyond the troops engaged in the insurrection, and did not include the [illegible] high in authority. Radical measures are proposed for the searching out of dangerous individuals, the foreigners upon whom suspicion may rest will be ordered to leave Portugal.

The government of King Carlos itself stands [illegible] instead of weakened by the outbreak, which gives a pretext for rigorous measures which have long been desirable. No sufficient evidence of any collusion with the conspirators has been found to implicate Pinto or any of the [illegible] who have been really prominent in the anti-English agitation. It was the outburst of republicanism fostered by agitators in the ranks and file of the army.

King Carlos, who was reported to be inclined to mercy, has, it is now said, been led to see the necessity of severest punishment for the ringleaders, besides the execution of the [illegible] remainder of the men engaged in the revolt will be drafted to Angola and Mozambique under strict guard.

TROUBLE IN BELGIUM.

The Military Enact a Mutiny Which Might Have Been Serious.

BRUSSELS, Feb. 2.—The military forces recently called into the field to cope with the radical [illegible] were promised a donation of [illegible] francs. This was granted to those [illegible] in the provinces, but the troops [illegible] thought [illegible] to [illegible] condition of [illegible] to [illegible] the [illegible] for the [illegible] from [illegible] stationed in Brussels.

Early [illegible] the day [illegible] drafts [illegible] showed [illegible] discontent [illegible] by [illegible] disobedience [illegible] of officers, and finally they left the [illegible] and [illegible] in various [illegible] protesting against [illegible] they claimed [illegible] justice [illegible] them. The [illegible] joined by workmen's clubs, [illegible] the Brussels [illegible].

The [illegible] interfered and compelled the men [illegible] to their barracks, arresting [illegible] of the more disorderly.

The [illegible] spirit shown has excited [illegible] apprehension as such [illegible] duct is [illegible] in Belgium, and indicates [illegible] feeling is gaining [illegible] in the army.

Demand for Miners.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 2.—At a meeting of the Pittsburg Operators' Association, steps were taken to secure [illegible] for the Mammoth Mine [illegible] to enforce rigid mining rules [illegible] that section of their district [illegible] that [illegible] be used in [illegible] to suppress [illegible] in England has shown [illegible] dreadful [illegible] more likely [illegible] explode with a low [illegible] than any other mine. This theory [illegible] out by the fact that [illegible] storm passed a low [illegible] which was followed by [illegible] Monongahela [illegible].

THE COUNT A PRISONER.

Bound Over by a Connecticut Court for Chicken Stealing.

KENSINGTON, Conn., Feb. 2.—Count von Wolf, a young scion of German nobility, was bound over to the Supreme Court in the sum of $300 to answer the charge of chicken stealing.

Five years ago the Count, while still living on his father's estate in Germany, fell in love with an American girl who had gone abroad for her health. She returned his love and there was every promise of a happy culmination at the altar. But the young man's parents had other plans for him than as the husband of a not wealthy girl from a strange land, and they pleaded with him to cast her out of his heart. But he was deeply smitten, and still clung to her. Finding the case so serious, the father ordered the young man into the army, and finally secured his assignment to a distant post. Before the lovers parted, however, the lady gave him her American address, which was Berlin, this State.

In the meantime the Count found that life without his American love was unendurable, and defying parental authority set sail for the New World to claim her. When he arrived it was only to learn that the woman he loved had been dead a month.

His grief was piteous. He shut himself up in his room for weeks and refused to be comforted. But as weeks and months passed by the first sharp pangs of grief began to be allayed. Then the young man yearned for his native land again. His little store of money was about exhausted, but he would write to his father for enough to carry him back. The letter was sent, but the answer brought only the announcement that he had been disowned for his disobedience.

Then to took an oath that he never would leave the place where rested the body of his lost love, and to maintain his vow he was forced to perform any manual labor that offered itself. For a time he served Lawyer Ives and Mr. Atwater, of this place, but a short time ago he was discharged, since which time he had been unable to procure any work and was forced to depend on charity for his meals. At last, disheartened and humiliated, he became a common thief.

During his stay here he has been known as Frank Wolf, and under this name he was arraigned. He is a fine looking man, of distinguished bearing, as befits his noble birth, and, despite his shabby apparel, would be noticeable in a crowd.

Downfall of an ex-Mayor of Memphis.

CHICAGO, Feb. 2.—John Daly, ex-Mayor of Memphis, was arrested here as a vagrant and sentenced to two months in jail. When arrested he was dressed like an Indian. In the course of his wanderings he went into a saloon, and a number of men there transformed him into Big Foot's ghost. His face was painted, an old sanket with a lemon sticking out of the muzzle was strapped on his back, and a helmet, from which dangled the tail feathers of a rooster, rested unsteadily on his head.

The trustees of the Methodist church of Watchung, one of Newark's suburbs, will unite with the other churches of the locality in a reception to the Rev. B. Fay Mills when he begins evangelistic revival services at Bloomfield in March.

The old Dunellen homestead of John Pope, who died a few years ago, is now vacant, a circumstance which has not occurred probably in the last century or since the house was built. Some alterations are to be made which will add greatly to the appearance of the place.

The Rev. L. O. Grenelle, of Dunellen, recently concluded a series of revival meetings at Old Bridge, Middlesex county. The meetings were continued two weeks, with good results. Mr. Grenelle is at present supplying the Baptist pulpit at that place, returning to Dunellen every Monday morning.

Plainfield Grocers May Follow Suit.

With a neatly painted wagon, plainly lettered to indicate its mission, a collector for the Grocers' Association of New Brunswick will hereafter call on all old debtors who owe association members. If they don't pay at first he is hired to call daily until they do. The stoppage of the "old debt wagon" in front of their houses regularly is expected to bring disgrace on the delinquents among the community, and eventually to bring out the cash.

DUST TO DUST; ASHES TO ASHES.

All That Was Mortal of the Late Job Male Lifted Away to Rest Forever.

The body of Job Male is now at rest forever beside the body of his wife. All that was mortal of the venerable philanthropist was conveyed to Greenwood Cemetery—that beautiful habitation of the dead—this morning, and was buried from earthly sight forever. Among his fellow-men he will be known no more, save in blessed memory; his living has been transferred from the city he loved to the celestial home on which his faith was set, for everlasting.

At the Crescent avenue residence which had been his earthly dwelling, there gathered, yesterday afternoon, those who had been his friends through life, till the house was crowded to the doors. Many representative citizens were present, including the municipal officers, headed in a body by Mayor Alexander Gilbert and the City Common Council.

The body of Mr. Male lay in a simple casket covered with black cloth. His face was calm and peaceful, and wore a smile of sweet repose.

Of ostentation there was none. Its presence would not have accorded with the life just ended. No showy tributes were heaped within the place. Instead there was the reverential attitude, the silent tear, of a host of people who thronged about the coffin to impress again on their remembrance the features of the departed. Only a simple cluster of emblematic white pinks and lilies, standing in an unobtrusive corner, breathed delicate fragrance and purity into the atmosphere.

Two brief sermons were preached. The one was by the Rev. Hobart Clark, pastor of the Plainfield Unitarian church; the other by the Rev. William R. Richards, of the Crescent Avenue. Neither clergyman attempted elaborate eulogy; he let the personal history of the good old man speak for itself.

Mr. Clark first read appropriate passages of Scripture—passages grief-assuaging, full of comfort and celestial beatitude. Every word was fraught with heavenly music, and before the blissful assurances of the Word one's earthly tribulations vanished, and sorrow was succeeded by peace.

"'I am the resurrection and the life' "—read the preacher.—"'Whosoever believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and he that liveth and believeth on me shall have everlasting life.'"

The pastor dwelt on the sweet simplicity of the life of the deceased, his honesty, uprightness, benevolence; and held up his career as a shining example to the rising generation.

Quoting from the Scriptures, he said: "'Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is none like him in the earth, a perfect and upright man, one that feareth God, and escheweth evil?'"

And the words which the Lord had used in speaking of his servant of old he considered fully as appropriate for the Job who had just begun to rest from his labors.

The Rev. Mr. Richards also applied a Scriptural passage to the deceased.

In an old proverb—he said—was recorded the truth that Wisdom carried in one hand length of days, and in the other riches and honor. Mr. Male—he added—was a living embodiment of this idea.

The clergymen drew lesson after lesson from the honest purposes, the good deeds, the excellent citizenship, the industrious, faithful life, of the Christian who had gone to his reward. His memory—they said—would remain an imperishable monument in the midst of the populace where he had so long held the high honor of being first citizen. He had been a sustainer of many charities, many institutions. One bore his own name, and through it that name would always be on the lips of the generations of readers. But besides his public charities he had contributed privately right and left; and benefited people throughout the city were familiar with hundreds of good deeds that his right hand did that his left hand never knew.

After the sermons a special choir, composed of Mrs. Knight, Mrs. Hodges, Mr. Knight and Mr. Andrew Gavett, rendered that beautiful selection, Sullivan's Hymn of Home Land, and the Rev. Mr. Clark pronounced the benediction over the people.

This morning the remains of Mr. Male were escorted to Greenwood Cemetery by a committee from the Unitarian church consisting of Wm. T. Broadway, Harry B. Wells, George D. Patton and H. P. Nichols, and with Christian ceremonies the body was returned to that earth which is the mother of all flesh.

And amid the Spring-like, balm-laden breezes of one of the fairest of Winter days, the sod was smoothed over a mound which yesterday did not exist, and which now marks the resting-place of Plainfield's first Mayor and one of mankind's best men. Broken is the golden bowl; the spirit hath flown forever. And though the sacredness of the dead man's memory may be lost sight of, here and there, in the mad scramble for earthly pelf, in the end it will gleam forth with undiminished lustre; and though greed and avarice and other of the baser motives may cause commotion on the earth which is to know his sweet and gentle spirit nevermore, he will be oblivious to it all: he has won a crown which wealth and honor can never buy; he is at rest forever.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY IN PLAINFIELD.

Austin Sturtevant Knocked Down by Footpads, and His Pockets Rifled.

Austin Sturtevant, a resident of 13 Liberty street, was waylaid, assaulted and robbed on the public highway late Saturday night.

His place of business as a butcher is on Somerset street. Having no safe in his store, he is in the habit of taking his money home with him after closing the shop each evening. This habit seems to be more or less known about town, and on two separate occasions unprincipled men have sought to make guilty use of the knowledge. Their first attempt was a failure, the second a success.

A year and a half ago Sturtevant was assailed in front of his own home by two desperate-looking characters, who sought to throw him to the ground. A struggle resulted, and Sturtevant shouted loudly for help. His assailants sought to stifle his cries, but did not succeed, and finally ran away and left him comparatively unharmed.

Saturday night when he went home it was raining, and he carried an umbrella slanted in front of his face. Going down New street, he turned into Orchard place, and was in front of one of the new houses in process of erection when he heard a stealthy step behind him. Before he could turn to see who was following him he received on the side of the head a crushing blow as of a sandbag, and sank helplessly to the earth. He did not lose consciousness, for he realized that two men were standing over him, and felt that he was about to be robbed. With one hand he sought to catch hold of the leg of one of the fellows, but instead the robber planted his foot heavily on the outstretched hand, jammed his knees into Sturtevant's chest, and clutched the throat of the prostrate man as though to throttle him. Then the other man hastily rifled the butcher's pockets, and when this was accomplished both fled with the booty.

Sturtevant lay on the ground in a dazed condition a moment, then crawled feebly homeward. His head throbbed as though it would burst, and blood was flowing from the cruel gash the robbers' weapon had made. All day yesterday he was a very sick man, but to-day is improving. The amount of money stolen was between $50 and $60. The robbers took nothing else. The police say that they have no clue to the perpetrators of the outrage. Sturtevant is a man well advanced in years. His age is probably sixty.

EXIT THE HEATHEN CHINEE.

Pitti Wing Sing and Sock Cha Lo Skipee Town Allee Same as Melican Man.

Two festive celestials vanished from Plainfield by starlight Saturday night, in the same approved modern style so successfully adopted by financially embarrassed Caucasians, leaving unpaid debts behind, and creditors to bewail their departure.

The names of the vanished Chinamen are given as Pitti Wing Sing and Sock Cha Lo. Together they ran a washee-shop on West Front street, under the laundry style of Sing Lee. They were tenants of Samuel Dreier's.

Sunday morning Mr. Dreier awoke to find that the gay young birds from the orient had flown. During the night they had gathered together all their effects, and had taken them away, and nothing but a mocking message in big Chinese characters, tacked on the bare wall, remained. This document was more than cabalistic to the astonished Mr. Dreier; it was mystic, inscrutable. It might mean "Glon but not flogotten," or it might mean "Sleek no fluhda! Have glon a belly flah way!"

It was quite evident, however, that the almond-eyed partners had seen fit to take a sudden departure for an indefinite period. Mr. Dreier's mind instantly reverted to the fact that as the Chinamen's landlord he was their creditor to the tune of $53. He therefore lost no time in repairing to the railroad station and finding out just what his prospects were. The celestials had left by train during the night, and had taken their trunk, filled with their most valuable goods, with them; but the bulk of their property, including their household goods and laundry appurtenances, had been intrusted to the care of the express company, and had not yet been forwarded. Mr. Dreier therefore promptly secured a writ of attachment against the goods, for debt, and will probably realize from their sale sufficient to cover his loss. Other creditors may not fare so well.

It is supposed that Pitti Wing Sing and Sock Cha Lo have taken refuge in Mott street, New York, to be on hand to help "make happy" on Chinese New Year's Day, Feb. 8.

The story of what constitutes a Chinese New Year's celebration has been told a great many times. It is a story of fire-water and fire-crackers, opium and debauchery. The white denizens of Mott street, and there are still some white people left there, say it is impossible to conceive of anything more diabolical and infuriating than the Chinese celebration of the Chinese New Year's.

Constable Mattox, who made the attachment for Mr. Dreier, through Justice Nash, hopes to find the missing Chinamen before the New Year's celebration has swallowed them up, and to bring them back as absconding debtors.

How Perth Amboy Enjoyed the Event.

[From The Republican, Perth Amboy.]

On Saturday evening last a number of the members of Lincoln Hose Co., No. 1, of this city, visited Plainfield and presented to Plainfield Engine Co., No. 2, two handsome steel engravings, each 30x40 inches. Our fire laddies received a hearty welcome, such as the Plainfield 2's are noted for.

Ex-Chief Jennings, in behalf of the company, received the pictures in a neat speech, alluding in a happy way to the true feeling of friendship which has existed between the companies for the past eight years. After the ex-Chief had concluded his remarks the guests and members sat down to an elaborate spread especially prepared for the occasion.

Chief Doane, Alderman Miller and several members of the Plainfield City Council entertained the boys with speeches, and a royal good time was had by all present. Foreman Rose, Secretary Korman, and in fact every member of the company, did all in their power to make it an enjoyable occasion for Lincoln Hose members, and the evening's pleasure will long be remembered.

The Pope and Public School.

The eloquent anti-Jesuit and ex-Romanist, Evangelist Leyden, of Boston, will speak Wednesday, Feb. 4, at Amphion Hall, and tell why the church of Rome condemns the American public school system. Thursday afternoon, Feb. 5, at 2:30, he will lecture to ladies only on the subject of mixed marriages and why a Protestant should not marry a Roman Catholic. Thursday evening, Feb. 5, he will speak to men only on the secret confession to a priest. Tickets at the doors, 15 cents. Every true American citizen should hear this fearless and gifted orator, on the above great subjects, as he speaks from a personal experience of 28 years inside the church of Rome, and challenges contradictions.

THE UNSIGNED WILL.

Prospects That Mr. Male's Heirs Will Consent to Such a Disposition of His Estate as He Desired.

The news that Job Male had left no will, published for the first time in Saturday's PRESS, and copied into all the New York papers, and the additional facts concerning the unsigned death-bed will, caused much talk among the people of Plainfield. As THE PRESS said, the heirs know Mr. Male's wishes, as outlined in the unsigned will, and it now is stated that they are entirely willing to have his estate divided just as he desired. An attempt will therefore be made to effect an amicable settlement of the various matters under dispute, and no doubt there will be a quiet arbitration instead of a legal contest in the courts. If stubbornness be shown, however, a fight may result as to the distribution of the good man's wealth. The public institutions benefited by attempted bequests would in that case seek to prove Mr. Male's will, even without his signature. The most likely thing, from the present outlook, is that Mr. Male's wishes will be respected in every particular, that the Unitarian church and Public Library will get the money he wished to leave to them, that what is left after this distribution will be divided among the heirs, and that none of the Male property will be sold within five years.

The prospect of such an amicable settlement will in a measure allay the anxiety that has been felt concerning various branches of Mr. Male's finances.

The late ex-Mayor had promised to donate $1,000 to the Young Men's Christian Association for their new building, and the heirs would hardly contest such a claim, anyway, even though the gift had been promised only by word of mouth.

Mr. Male had also promised that Mrs. Stout, his wife's sister, who long had cared for him, should always have the house in which he had lived, at Crescent avenue and First place, and it is expected that this claim will also be justly recognized, as well as Mrs. Stout's claim that Mr. Male had invested $40,000 of her own money in his property, although no actual legal record of such claims may exist.

Thus it is hoped that every matter at difference will be speedily, sensibly, satisfactorily and quietly adjusted.

It Hoodoos All.

Ex-Councilman F. E. Marsh is a candidate for appointment as Corporation Counsel. Mr. Marsh has not appeared before the public since his retirement from the Council, except by means of letters comparing the street expenditures of 1889 and 1890, and those letters have been buried in the columns of a paper known as the supporter of Carey and every other man or scheme that has drifted out of sight.

Consequently, F. E. Marsh is doomed to dismal failure in his aim. If he wants to succeed he must keep even his initials clear of the paper that has ruined every project or person it has claimed to advance, including itself.

Evenings at the Crescent League Fair.

A series of attractive entertainments have been prepared for the pleasure of those who will be present at the Crescent League's new club-house, during the fair of Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

On Thursday evening G. W. Cozzens the celebrated imitator and well-known monologist will entertain the people. Friday evening, the Crescent League Quartette, Stevens, VanArsdale, Barnes and Gorton will sing, Saturday evening, the New York banjo club of 7th Reg't boys will play. There will be orchestral music every evening—and perhaps the great Comancho will appear one night.

Orange Envious of Plainfield.

A special train will bring 100 society people of Elizabeth to this city, to-morrow evening, to attend the concert of the Elizabeth Glee Club, at the Casino. All arrangements have been perfected to make the affair a success.

Mr. Woodruff, the conductor, dines with friends in this city to-day. He has a number of pupils here. The society people of Orange are making an effort now to get the Club there. They don't want to be outdone by Plainfield. But the Elizabeth Glee Club are not going into the business of concert giving.

A Comparison Which Favors the Borough.

(From The Bound Brook Chronicle.)

North Plainfield assesses forty per cent. on full valuation, and Bound Brook sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. The tax rate in North Plainfield is $23 40 on $1,000, and in Bound Brook is ordinarily $15 on $1,000. Suppose a man owns two properties, the actual value of each to be $1,500, one located in North Plainfield and the other here. The North Plainfield property would be assessed at at $600, and the tax on it would be $14.04. The property in Bound Brook would be assessed at $1,000 and the tax would be $15. This shows that we are paying a higher rate of taxes on actual valuation than they are in North Plainfield.

Stopped His Train Just in Time.

A collision between a Central and a Pennsylvania train, each filled with passengers, was narrowly avoided Saturday evening at the Union station in Elizabeth owing to the failure of the new brakes on the Pennsylvania train to work properly. The engineer of the Central train, seeing the peril, quickly reversed his lever and brought his train to a stop within two feet of the other.

THOSE OVERHEAD WIRES.

Manager Moore Denies That Faults Exist in the Electric Lighting Service.

William H. Moore, manager of Plainfield's electric lights works, reports to THE PRESS that the electric lighting system of the city is in perfect condition and excellent working order. Those who for the past few days have been so prolific of complaints may therefore for themselves take into consideration all the existing faults which they report, in estimating the value of Mr. Moore's standard of perfection.

Mr. Moore is inclined to chide as unreasonable those who have protested because Broadway, Prospect avenue, Fifth street, Sixth street, and LaGrande avenue were devoid of light Thursday and Friday nights. He says that out of 570 street lamps only 18 were unlighted, which he thinks is an excellent showing for the company so soon after the severe storm. His men have worked overtime a great deal, he adds, cleaning up the wreckage, and have repeatedly had the electric light wires in proper condition, only to have them disarranged again by broken telephone, fire-alarm and messenger service wires. Mr. Moore further says that the fire-alarm wires are in a shocking state, being down all over town, and explains that these wires, crossing his, interfere greatly with the electric light service, and are mistaken by people for electric light wires. The wire which hangs over the Elm street bridge in such a way as to catch passers-by under the throat he says is a telephone wire. And he promises THE PRESS that the electric light wire which gives pyrotechnic displays among the branches of the tree on Sixth street near Broadway and bestows severe electric shocks on people brushing against the tree shall speedily be remedied. He is ready, he concludes, to correct any defects the public may point out in the electric lighting service.

Plainfield Talent Abroad.

The Chronicle, of Bound Brook, has the following to say of the Plainfielders who took part in the recent installation exercises of Craven Post, No. 57, G. A. R.:

"The first announced was a recitation by Miss Try Mattox, of Plainfield. This little lady covered herself with glory by reciting 'The Veteran's Daughter,' performing her part with vigor and eliciting rounds of applause when she told how she some day expected to capture some 'Son of a Vet.' Past Commander Adams, of Trenton, made brief remarks, followed with a song by Comrade Smith, of Plainfield, entitled 'The Old Camp Kettle,' and in response to a heavy encore rendered 'The Army Bean.' Past Commander Vickery, of Somerville, then made a few remarks, Past Commander Dangle, of Trenton, dangled to quite an extent over a stolen marine reminiscence, Comrade Smith came to the rescue and told in a song how he came to get his wonderful name, Comrade McVoy, of Plainfield, then spoke, followed by J. V. D. C. Atwood and Comrade Ed. S. Kline, of Post 50, Phillipsburg. Just about this time the jovial countenance of Comrade Robert Mattox, of Plainfield, made its appearance and judging from the long and loud applause made a hit. He was immediately put upon the floor and recited 'Mary had a Little Can,' and responded by giving 'The Nation's Heroes.' He then gave 'The Mule,' by request, and was allowed to take his seat.

"Sandwiches and coffee received their undivided attention for the next half hour, when by special request Mr. Mattox recited the old but ever popular 'Barbara Frietchie.' Comrade Smith favored the others with a beautiful song entitled 'Brave Boys Were They.' Comrade Mattox was called on to give 'The Last Hymn.' He declined, as he could not sing, but his little daughter, Miss Try., was equal to the occasion, and rendered it in a manner pleasing to all. This little girl has rare elocutionary powers which are worthy of cultivation, and judging from the renditions of her father she is a 'Chip of the Old Block.'"

"The Rosebuds" the Banner Class.

A band of nine young misses, known in the Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school as the class of "The Rosebuds," held a candy sale at the residence of their teacher, Mrs. Edwin Loomis, 12 Rockview avenue, Saturday afternoon, and accumulated profits of $21.51 for the cause of missions. The event was a very pleasant one, and made a pretty and animated scene. Each of the charming young missionaries wore as a distinguishing badge a budding rose. Their names are Nellie Martin, Ada Woolston, Edna Harris, Matie VanHorn, Flossie Loomis, Maude French, Bertha Larew, Nettie Chandler and Lula McNaughton. They get the banner for raising a larger amount for missions than any other class in the school.

Off for Mexico in a Handsome Train.

A superb train of vestibuled Pullman palace-cars, built for the special use of the Raymond & Whitcomb transcontinental and Mexico excursions, and embodying the latest improvements in car-building, will be open to the inspection of the public at the Jersey City station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey to-morrow, from 11 A. M. until 12. The cars are six in numer—the sleeping-cars "Whitcomb," "Neuma," "Kewanee" and "Greylock," the dining-car "Coronado," and the composite-car "Esperanze" (containing library, barber-shop and bath-room). The train will start at 12:10 o'clock the same day over the Baltimore & Ohio route, for Mexico and California, passing through Plainfield at about 12:40.

Local Representatives as Viewed at Trenton.

Thomas F. Fitzgerald, the Samuel Pepys of New Jersey, has just issued his annual blue book, more familiarly known to public men, politicians and place-hunters as the "Legislative Manual." This little handbook of reference is more meaty than ever, which is saying a great deal in favor of the new edition. It bristles with accurate tables of elections, terse bits of political history, new things in National and State affairs, and biographical sketches of Congressmen, Senators and Assemblymen. It is also adorned with pictures of E. J. Anderson, State Comptroller; John S. Toffey, State Treasurer, and Governor Abbett. The following facts about the personal history of the State Senators and members of Assembly from this section are taken from the manual:

W. J. Keys, Democrat, of Somerset, is fifty-two years of age and was born at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. He settled in Somerset county in 1886. He is a breeder of looded cattle and horses and is the president of Hunterdon County's Agricultural Society. He prides himself on his long connection with the sterling Democracy of New York.

Fred. C. Marsh, Democrat, of Union, is a native of that county and is thirty-three years of age. He has held nearly every important public office in Elizabeth and was an Assemblyman in 1889 and 1890, serving on all the important committees.

James J. Bergen, Democrat, of Somerset, is a native of New Jersey, forty-three years of age. He is a lawyer and was partner of H. M. Gaston for twenty years. He has well filled a score of prominent public positions in Somerset county, and is the present Speaker of the House.

Thomas F. Lane, Democrat, of Union, is in his twenty-sixth year and a native of New Hampshire. He was a diamond salesman in New York and a cashier in a Wall street banking house. He has written for a number of newspapers and is now owner of The Summit Record.

George Kyte, Republican, of Union, is forty-four years of age, and was born in South America. He was a soldier in the Regular Army before the war and served through the Rebellion. He has held minor offices at Fanwood.

Another Indorsement of Dr. Ripley's Plan.

[From The Newark Journal.]

In an address before the State Board of Agriculture at Trenton, Tuesday, Mr. Chauncey B. Ripley dwelt upon the subject of improved roads, and advocated Gov. Hill's idea of State highways. He would have these highways running from Newark to Camden, and from Sussex to Cape May, piercing through counties and encouragin gthe construction of improved county roads.

The question of roads has been left too much to township and county action. It is really a question of State and even national concern, and therefore one that State and national legislation should deal with. The policy of Rome in connecting all its vast provinces with the capital by solid roadways, some of which still exist, was the secret of the prosperity which the world enjoyed under the empire of the Cæsars until corruption ate out the heart of the State.

The world to-day admires the Roman policy, but the lesson it conveys has been wholly lost on the American people. Our roadways are as a rule barbarous in their construction and abominable in their maintenance. The reason is simply that the duty of road making has been left to localities without any State aid or supervision. The farmers who have short-sightedly opposed assessments for improved roads are beginning to realize the mistake which the live newspapers have repeatedly pointed out to them, and it is evident now that if the State shall inaugurate a policy of road improvements the farmers will not be backward in taking advantage of it.

—Don't miss "The Prince and the Pauper," with Elsie Leslie in the title roles, at Music Hall this evening.

—The New Jersey Sabbath Union have appointed a committee to "watch the legislature and the liquor men," and see that no law is enacted permitting saloons to be kept open during even a part of each Sunday.

—Manager Runyon of the telephone company is working day and night to repair the damage of the late storm. Of the 161 wires down, 75 are now in working order again. Every connection was broken except the long-distance circuits in THE PRESS office and in the pay station.

Quick, safe and sure. This is said of Salvation Oil, the great rheumatic remedy and greatest cure on earth for pain. Price 25 cents a bottle.

"Down in the coal mines underneath the ground," coughs and colds are very frequent, and there is where Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is invaluable.

CAN ONLY ADJOURN.

Nothing Else Left for the Connecticut House to Do.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 2.—Stiles Judson, jr., the Republican leader in the House of Representatives, said that after the vote was taken on the majority report of the committee to-morrow, the House will adjourn sine die.

He says there is not the slightest prospect of the rival parties coming to an agreement, and there is nothing to do but adjourn. He did say, however, that he saw no reason why Nicholas Staub, the Democratic candidate for comptroller, should not be sworn in.

This has caused no end of discussion, and has placed the Democratic leaders on their guard. A lively time is expected when the motion for adjournment without date is made.

CHARCOAL BURNING.

The Kind of Wood Used and Its Preparation for Market.

"I am just clearing up a tract of woodland and am turning the refuse to account by manufacturing charcoal," said a countryman to a reporter. "Beech wood and hickory are the best for that purpose. Oak makes a very poor coal, and it is hardly worth burning. Generally the good wood is culled out, then a huge circular pile is made of knots and refuse. This pile is often 100 feet in diameter and from ten to fifteen feet in height. The wood is piled with great care in straight rows around a small opening, about one foot in diameter, which is left as a sort of chimney for the fire to be started in. As soon as the pile is completed, it is covered all over with forest leaves or straw, and then the whole mass is covered with dirt to the thickness of three or four inches. It now resembles a small volcano, especially when the fire is started and the smoke begins to issue from the small opening left in the top. The fire is started by dropping shavings into the chimney, which was left in the center, and then lighting them by dropping live coals into the cavity. A few holes are made near the bottom of the pile of dirt in order to create a draft, and as soon as the fire begins to smoke these holes are again closed.

"Now, if every thing goes right, the fire is allowed to smoulder away, with just air enough to support combustion. If a high wind should spring up, as it often does, every hole is closed tight to keep down the fire, and very often boards must be laid over the whole pile to keep out the wind. It takes from ten days to two weeks to burn a 'pit,' as it is called, and this time is a period of great anxiety to the charcoal burner, as the operation must be watched night and day, and a little negligence may cause the loss of weeks of hard work. As the fire progresses, part of the charcoal is consumed by combustion, and the remainder shrinks to nearly one-half its original size. The shrinkage, of course, would cause the dirt to be left standing alone, provided it would do so. In order to meet this difficulty the tender goes round and round, over and over the pile, packing the dirt with a shovel. This continual packing must not be neglected, for if a cavity should occur, and the dirt cave in instantly, the whole pile would burst out into flame which nothing could stop.

"As the burning progresses holes are punctured through the dirt in such places as the tender thinks the fire has not yet been. The holes create a draft and at once bring the fire to that part of the pit, upon which the hole is again closed and the charring begins. As soon as the tender thinks that the work is complete, he shuts up the chimney and packs every hole. He then spends about two days in packing the dirt and watches for crevices through which smoke issues and closes them as soon as they are discovered. Barrels of water are now hauled to the pit, and workmen begin to open up a side and take out the charcoal. If sparks of fire should be found they are at once dashed with water, and, as the work progresses, water is thrown into the pit, while the steam thus created penetrates to all parts of the coal, and lessens the danger of a fire. As a rule all the coal is removed at once as a precautionary measure, and every man who has burned a pit is glad when he gets it off his hands. From 800 bushels to 1,000 are made in a pit. This is hauled away in wagon loads of 80 bushels to 100 bushels, and sold for about 15 cents per bushel; thus from $120 to $150 is realized from each pit."

According to chemists only twenty to twenty-two per cent. of the wood remains as charcoal, the rest being driven off as gases. Charcoal is sixty-five per cent. carbon.

Charcoal is a great disinfectant. An experiment made by a Scotch doctor illustrates this. He put the bodies of two dogs into a charcoal bath with three-inch layers of coal on all sides. At the end of six weeks the bath was opened and the remains taken out. Nothing was left but the skeletons and the skins, and, although the weather was warm and the experiment had taken place in the doctor's laboratory, no odor had been perceptible. The explanation of this was that the gases were absorbed by the charcoal and afterward set loose in such small quantities as not to be noticeable.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Malay Tooth Varnish.

The Government of Burmah has lately published an interesting report by Mr. Merrifield on the prospects of planting in Mergui, in the extreme south of Tenasserim, in the course of which he corrects the common error that the black teeth of the Malays and Siamese are due to chewing betel mixed with lime. It appears that the black color of the teeth is due to a special process employed for the purpose, for no respectable Siamese would like to have white dogs' teeth, like Chinese, Indians and Europeans. Cocoanut kernel is carefully charred, and then worked to stiff paste with cocoanut oil. When carefully and regularly worked over the teeth this produces the black varnish which is so much admired. Among some Malay tribes it is considered the proper thing not only to blacken the teeth, but to file them down to points like sharks' teeth. "A Siamese or Malay man or woman does not strike a European as beautiful when yawning."—London Times.

THE WOMAN OF FASHION.

Latest Fancies Devised for Umbrella Handles.

Sets of Hair-Pins to Adorn the Newest of Coiffures—Light Gold and Cut Silver the Favorites in Hair Ornaments—Jeweled Headed Toilet Pins.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Something new must constantly be devised to meet the demand for the unique in parasol and umbrella handles. The woman of fashion carries an umbrella nearly always in her promenades, both in winter and summer; and, in consequence, she is continually on the lookout for any thing that is new, jaunty, elegant and attractive.

Dresden china is the latest material that is used for umbrella handles. It is stout and thick when put to this use, and does not break as easily as one would suppose from merely hearing of the fad. The color of the Dresden varies according to the taste and dress of her who carries it. Dark colored handles, slightly decorated, accompany umbrellas that are used for church, shopping and calling. While light, gay ones, almost Dolly Varden in appearance, are seen of an afternoon in the parks and upon the avenue.

Pins for the hair are worn in all sizes, makes and designs, and in as great a quantity as one can boast. A pretty combination of hair-pins is a set in tortoise shell and gold. Three of the pins have gold heads, all different in design, with tortoise-shell prongs, and the others have twisted gold prongs topped with the most exquisite shades of tortoise shell, varying in color from a lovely amber to a deep wine brown.

In the hair of a light blonde these are positively dazzling, reflecting the golden shades of hair and giving back a radiance from the many-colored tortoise shell.

Another set of hair-pins varied widely in the design of each pin. One had the body of an asp for a head; another was a dull red gold with a cat's eye set within; a third was cut silver that shone like diamonds; frosted gold was another, and the prettiest of all was a combination of turquoise and moonstones. These pins are all meant for actual service as well as ornament.

Another fancy in the line of new jewelry, though an expensive one, is for having toilet pins headed with real jewels instead of the common heads that grace the pins that come by the paper. These jeweled pins are obtainable, in imitation, for a few cents a box, but the real article costs money. A certain belle left an order with her jeweler for fifty garnet-headed pins, twelve chip diamond ones, one hundred each of light gold and cut silver and half a dozen each of emerald, turquoise, pearl and Dresden. Many of these jewels require a gold setting; so, although they were to be the tiniest gems that could be procured, the cost was more than the average woman of taste would care to expend upon an article of toilet so easily lost and so really slight in the matter of ornamentation.

Every thing that can be done to heighten the charm of the tea gown is now devised by the modiste who understands her business. At an afternoon tea a young matron appeared in an exquisite gown designed by an American artist, and executed upon our own silk looms. It was gold color in hue with a suspicion of orange flashes darting across it. Pink figures were faintly outlined on the surface, blending with the background in an indistinct wavy mass of color.

The waist was half confined by a girdle which consisted of a number of miniatures painted on porcelain and set with gold and moonstones. The likenesses were those of celebrated people whom she had known and who, as a special token of their friendship, had had the paintings executed. Around the neck of the gown went three chains of gold, beautifully cut, and from the center hung an immense diamond that reflected the tints of the gown and of the girdle.

The rage for gathered and puffed sleeves is so great that they have even invaded the precincts of the decollete gown. This seems almost impossible, yet it is managed and in such a cunning way as to defy detection if really well done. A gown is made low-necked and sleeveless. Over the shoulders is fastened a tight-fitting silken strap and on this strap is gathered a full, long sleeve which extends to the waist and is there gathered in upon a band. At first sight, one is startled to see the high puffs standing securely upon the bare shoulders and only the long graceful sweep of the sleeves frees one from the uncomfortable sensation that the wearer must be suffering tortures with the sleeves pinned into her shoulders.

THE PELISSE AS SHE IS WORN.

SKETCHED AT HOME.

One never sees extremes in fashion upon the woman of refinement and taste. It is the woman who is ambitious beyond her means and who is "bad form" in general style and language who presumes to wear street garments as they are worn in Paris or who goes to the utmost height permissable in any thing. In the long skirts that one sees now upon the street there is a good illustration of this. The truly fashionable woman wears her skirt just escaping the street in front and barely sweeping the pavement in the rear. There is no perceptible fullness at either front or sides and the back is gathered in a double fold of fullness that spreads out almost like a fan as it reaches the bottom of the skirt.

A very stylish street dress of this description was of ecru cloth, tailor made. The jacket had a bordering of light fur and a high collar of the same, while a four inch band of the fur went around the bottom of the skirt.

These plain skirts actually demand a change in dress from the old-time petticoat and underskirt, the fullness of these garments being such as to seriously affect the hang of a plain skirt and to cause an awkward appearance around the knees. Then, too, the petticoat can not be quite as long as a sweeping plain skirt, and, consequently, the place where it leaves off is disagreeably apparent to observers. The new style of divided skirt does away with this difficulty, for it provides warmth and sufficient protection, while it does not in the least produce a bungling effect, nor tend to twist about the knees of the wearer as she walks.

The most elegant and expensive divided skirts are very long, coming almost to the ankles, and are rather tight. They cost upwards of ten dollars each and are not altogether convenient, being difficult to lift out of the mud in sloppy weather. Another style, costing only a quarter as much, is made of heavy linen or even poplin. These are satisfactory in warm weather. But the divided skirt that holds the palm of popular approval is a combination of silk and wool. It ties just below the waist with a shir ribbon, extends only to the knees and has a clinging quality that makes it just the thing for warmth, health and ease in windy weather, or when the thermometer threatens to take a run down among the zeros.

With such a petticoat as this and an all-wool combination garment, a woman is prepared for all kinds of weather, save very hot.

Latest advices insist that all boas shall be feat, somewhat broad and very long, reaching to the hem of the skirt. A fashionable boa of this description is in black Angora. A high collar of the same material is fastened to the boa and surrounds the neck. The front is fastened with a silver clasp. The effect is something like a cape with long fronts falling loosely to the bottom of the skirt.

The cape in seal and astrakan is new, because it combines the high, straight collar with a large Medici one which can be turned up or down at pleasure. A toque in seal and astrakan and a calrugorum brooch ornament accompanies this, and there is also a seal muff with astrakan gauntlets fastened to the ends.

This very convenient arrangement protects the wrists and keeps the hands warm inside the muff.

A charmingly becoming carriage cloak came out last week. It was of black silk brocaded in crimson. It was lined throughout with fine white Mongola fur and an immense boa of the same decorated the neck and front of the cloak. Deep cuffs set off the sleeves.

Fur toques are greatly worn. In all cases they are combination affairs, feathers and fur, seal and beaver, astrakan and seal, or plush and fur. A becoming seal fur hat had a broad band of otter fur around it. The other stood up like the brim of a turban and was much higher in the front than in the back. Another seal hat was turban shaped and was trimmed with sable tails all around the crown.

A GIRL'S MISTAKE.

The Clever Ruse by Which She Robbed a Rich Californian.

"During the month of September, 1889, I was employed on a confidential case in St. Paul, Minn.," said Detective Ainge, of the New York, Ontario & Western railway service to a Utica Herald reporter, "and was one day standing in the Union depot watching for a suspected party, when a train came in well filled with passengers. Among those who alighted was a wealthy gentleman from the Pacific coast. Just as he stepped on the platform a handsome young woman, apparently about twenty years of age, rushed into his arms saying: 'Oh, papa, papa, I'm so glad you've come,' and with that she began to shower the bewildered Californian with kisses. Then she gave a short, frightened scream, rushed through the crowd, entered a hack, and was driven away. We all supposed it was a case of mistaken identity. The Californian enjoyed the mistake.

"He came to me and the railway officer, who were talking about some business, and said it was a good joke, and he guessed we had better take something on the strength of it, as the kisses were worth considerable. We proceeded to the hotel, and he took his smile while the officer and myself took a cigar. When the Westerner came to pay for the wine and cigars he discovered that his pocket-book and two hundred dollars were gone. Further search developed the fact that his fine gold watch and diamond shirt stud were also missing. The Californian could not imagine where or when the things had been taken. I examined his shirt front and discovered teeth marks where the diamond stud had been. There was no doubt that the handsome girl who gave him such an affectionate embrace had done the work. The Californian was mad, and called the policeman a dolt. After telling him that I was a detective, he asked me to take charge of the case and find the girl and he would pay me for services and all expenses. After placing my special agent on the case I was then engaged with I proceeded to Minneapolis, where I located the woman at one of the hotels. She had registered from Milwaukee. When I arrested her she told me her history. She had been a member of a wealthy family in Colorado. I told her that if she would return the money, watch and diamond stud the Californian would likely not prosecute her. I wired him and he answered the telegram in person. The woman gave him all the plunder, and then she told him her story of misfortune. He was much impressed by the recital, and I saw him with her at the theater about a week afterward."

He Solved It.

A Michigan farmer who drove to town on certain days of the week always arrived at a railroad-crossing the same time an express train did. For three years he debated as to who had the right of way, and to settle it he started to drive across the other day and next moment found himself in an old cornfield with a broken leg, while horses were dead and wagon smashed.

HEROIC TREATMENT.

How Two Squaws Cured a White Man of Fever and Ague.

After a week or ten days the fever, somewhat abated, says a writer in Forest and Stream, and Peter, taking my double-barreled rifle by way of armament and half a dozen hard biscuit by way of grub, gave notice of two days' absence, and, buckling his blanket about him, went off up the trail.

Late in the evening of the second day while I was lying on the bearskin with swimming brain and a fevered brow he came back, but not alone. Two strong, athletic squaws, each toting a large pack, were his companions. He introduced them as "Ole Blackbird squaws and he gal; pooty young squaw—great medicine."

The elder of the two was about as tough, leathery-looking a specimen of aboriginal ugliness as I have ever fallen in with, and making due allowances for difference in age the daughter was the perfect model of her. They both cast their loads unceremoniously aside and the elder proceeded at once to business. Watching me closely as she did so she rolled a large handful of leaves in her hand until they were partially pulverized, then passing them over to the younger squaw, who soon made a pint of very bitter tea from them which I was told to drink. I managed to gulp it down, hot and bitter as it was, and the old squaw then seized me without ceremony, packed me snugly in bear-skin and blankets, after which she and her daughter, wrapping their own blankets around them, lay down on either side of me, crowding me in a manner more close than pleasant.

I trust King David's medicine, which answered the purpose so well, was not a squaw—or, if she were, that she was young and good-looking.

My leathery belles answered, however, to help get up a copious perspiration, which was just what they intended, and when I awoke from the first sound refreshing sleep I had enjoyed for weeks it was with a cool, clear head and limbs free from pain.

With the rise of the sun the confounded ague began to threaten me, and Mrs. Blackbird, with the help of her interesting daughter, proceeded to take measures for expelling it in a manner quite as novel and original as her treatment of fever. First she undid a bundle of dirty blue cloth and took therefrom several bundles of neatly bound, minute twigs. I had heard some hard stories of "whippin' out the ague," and smelled a pretty extensive mice immediately, but on the whole concluded to go through, so I suffered them to divest me of my clothing and seize me firmly by the wrists, and made no objection even when Mrs. Blackbird began to apply the switchings gently to the bare skin. Gradually the blows increased in rapidity and severity. Old Peter, who had stood by as a spectator at first, stepped forward and seized a wrist firmly in each hand, so suddenly that I had no time to object; and the whipping immediately became energetic and general. Each of the squaws with a switch in each hand vied with the other in rapidity of hitting, and as the sluggish, torpid blood strove to dash with answering speed through the tingling veins the pain became unendurable. I had resolved to bear all that was asked of me in hope of a radical cure, but the torture was too severe, and I ordered them to desist, trying at the same time to wrench myself loose from Peter. They only laughed and laid on the harder. I became mad with pain and went in on my muscle, biting and butting furiously at old Peter and giving the leathery females ungallant kicks about the ribs and abdomen—a proceeding that made them laugh all the more and brought down the switches with increased vigor. I entreated and cursed by turns, tried bribery and flattery, begged for a resting spell, and threatened death to the party of conspirators immediately I got loose, but all in vain. They flogged me for a time that seemed an age, and only let me off when I was too exhausted to stand alone. Then I was again enveloped in skins and blankets, when, strange as it may seem, I almost immediately fell into a deep slumber, from which I did not awake until evening. When I did awake it was with a general sense of soreness all over the outer man; but where was the ague? Gone. Completely cured, as well as the fever.

SURVIVED HIS EXECUTION.

The Soldiers Fired a Volley at Him and Then Marched Away.

A man who has attended his own execution and still survives to relate the details is surely worthy of a short paragraph. The man in question, though at present serving in the humble capacity of waiter in one of the Paris cafes, was, twenty-one years ago, one of the historic characters of the world. His name is Colonel Marteras, and in 1869 he was on the point of being proclaimed President of Uruguay, when he was arrested, charged with treason, and sentenced to be shot.

On Monday, June 30, of that year, says the St. Louis Republic, he was taken by a pistoon of soldiers out of the capital to a cleared spot in the heart of a forest and bound to a chair. At the word "Fire!" a nervous shock caused Marteras to fall to the ground. He did not hear the volley, but a laborer working near by did. The workman went to ascertain the cause, saw the soldiers marching away and Marteras badly wounded, but not dead by any means, lying on the ground. The laborer took the would-be president home and cured his wounds, and he and Marteras now often tell of the supposed execution of the "French pretender."

Everybody a Skin-Breather.

A scientific gentleman of Buenos Ayres, M. Cobes, has discovered that all living animals breath through their skins as well as through their lungs. Hypodermic injections of oxygen into their skins are taken up by the capillaries of the system in the same manner as when oxygen is breathed through the lungs. The practical part of the discovery is that M. Cobes thinks the hypodermic respiration will become of great use in lung diseases.

WHO WILL BE NAMED

Several Candidates for the Treasury Portfolio.

OHIO PRESENTS EX-GOV. FOSTER.

The Subject Has Not Yet Received the Serious Attention of the President.

Great Britain Gains a Point in the Behring Sea Case—The Supreme Court Has Jurisdiction—Latest Gossip About the Silver Bill—Senator Blair to Secure a District Judgeship.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The question of the hour is "Who will be Mr. Windom's successor?"

The politicians do not believe that the subject has yet received the serious attention of the President. They say he has not talked with any one about the matter.

The names suggested are those of Senator Allison, Senator Sherman, Senator Aldrich, Mr. McKinley, Senator Spooner, Senator Ingalls, Cornelius Bliss, of New York, and ex-Senator Platt, of New York.

The chief difficulty confronting the President will be that of preserving what is sometimes called the geographical equilibrium in the Cabinet.

Working for Ex-Gov. Foster.

FINDLAY, Feb. 3.—The Republicans of Ohio, regardless of faction, are moving on to the President for the appointment of ex-Governor Foster as Secretary of the Treasury to fill the place made vacant by the death of William Windom. Meetings were held last night in all the principal cities of the State by the Republicans to devise ways and means for bringing about Foster's appointment.

CONGRESSIONAL DOINGS.

Appropriations Bills Considered by the House and Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—In the Senate, after routine business, the Fortifications bill was considered, and an amendment to reduce the appropriation for gun and mortar batteries for the defense of the harbors of Boston, New York, San Francisco, Hampton Roads and Washington from $1,000,000 to $700,000 was agreed to. Other amendments of minor importance were agreed to.

In the House the Senate bill was passed, making an additional appropriation of $50,000 to continue work on the public building at Worcester, Mass.; also a bill amending Section 180, revised statutes, so as to read: "Vacancies caused by death or resignation shall not be temporarily filled under the preceding sections for a longer period than 30 days." The present law limits the time to 10 days, and the bill has special reference to the appointment of a successor to Secretary Windom.

J. A. Owenby was brought before the bar of the House, and, expressing a willingness to testify before the Silver Pool Committee, purged himself of contempt.

CANADA MAY GET THE WRIT.

A Little Surprise Over a Decision of the Supreme Court.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—There was something of a surprise in the Supreme Court of the United States when Chief Justice Fuller announced the court's decision in the Behring Sea matter.

A decision was not expected at this time, but Mr. Calderon Carlisle, who represented the British government in Washington, was on hand. Attorney-General Miller was absent.

The decision was rendered on an application filed by the Canadian government, for leave to file a suggestion for a writ of prohibition in the case of the Canadian schooner Sayward, which was libelled by the United States for catching seals in Behring Sea.

Chief Justice Fuller announced that the court had decided to grant the British government leave to file an application for a writ of prohibition in the matter, and directed the issuance of a rule ordering the District Court of Alaska to show cause why the writ should not be issued. The Chief Justice said in delivering the decision that the Supreme Court undoubtedly had jurisdiction in the matter.

After a whispered conversation between Mr. Carlisle and Solicitor-General Taft, representing the United States, the former said that Mr. Taft was desirous of having an early day set for the rule to be made returnable, and the Chief Justice settled the question by selecting the second Monday in April.

Senator Blair for District Judge.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Senator Blair is placed for a Federal office at the expiration of his term in Congress. He is to succeed the late Daniel Clark, deceased, late United States District Judge of New Hampshire. The office has been vacant for nearly three months, but the President has held the place open for Senator Blair.

The Silver Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The latest gossip concerning the prospects of the passage of the Silver bill in the House of Representatives is that Speaker Reed is disposed to allow it to come up for consideration, and that he will not attempt any rulings to kill it. He will let a direct vote do that. But whether it will ever get out of committee is a question which is troubling free coinage people.

Patti Very Ill.

BRISTOL, Feb. 3.—The great prima donna, Adelina Patti, is lying very ill at a hotel here. She caught a severe cold in crossing the Channel between Dover and Calais. Dr. Frederick Love, who is in attendance, reports unfavorably of her condition.

FOR A SHIP CANAL.

The Scheme to Connect Pittsburg With Lake Erie Will Cost $25,000,000.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 3.—The Ship Canal Commission held its final meeting in this city, and the cost of the artificial water-way, which is to connect Pittsburg with Lake Erie is estimated at $25,000,000.

Ellen Brewer of Erie was delegated to make the report to the State Legislature. The railroads are expected to meet the project with aggressive hostility, and the Commissioners' report will thoroughly inform the Legislature on every point on which the railroads can make any pretence of opposition.

The route recommended as the most feasible coming south takes in the towns of Jamestown, Sharpsville, Sharon, West Middlesex, Pulaski and Newcastle and strikes the Ohio river at Rochester, 30 miles west of Pittsburg.

There are no great engineering difficulties to surmount, and it is believed that the work can be completed in four years. The Commission will ask the Legislature for the appointment of a committee to take charge.

HER BODY CARRIED HOME.

Ocean Grove Receives the Victim of an Overdose of Morphine.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Feb. 3.—The remains of Helen Potts, who died from an overdose of morphine in New York, were brought to Ocean Grove for interment.

Miss Potts was one of the most popular young women here. She graduated from the Asbury Park High School four years ago. She was one of the brightest pupils that ever attended the institution. Carlyle W. Harris, the young student of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, who prescribed the pills to relieve Miss Potts of her headache, is well known here.

Last summer Harris, together with a number of other men, was arrested for conducting a rum and poker resort known as the Neptune Club. Harris was arrested as the proprietor. Indictments were found against him, but he has never been tried because of illness. His trial is now set down for Thursday, March 5, at Freehold.

Ex-Postoffice Clerks Sue a Paper for Libel

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 3.—John F. McLaughlin and George W. Bass, ex-postoffice clerks, are suing the Courier Company for $10,000 damages for libel. The paper published an article stating that the complainants had been removed from the postoffice, which bore the headline, "No More Thieves at the Postoffice." Complainants deny that any charge was made against them when they were removed and claim their reputations were damaged to the above amount.

Gov. Pattison's Staff.

Rodgers, Philadelphia; Quartermaster-General, Henry C. Deming, Dauphin County; Commissary-General, to be appointed; Surgeon-General, Louis D. Reed, Montgomery County.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 3.—Ernest Forbes, the colored man, who in November last committed an assault on Miss Bertha Phipps, a white girl, in Anne Arundel County, and who was last week convicted of the crime, has been sentenced to be hanged at such time as the Governor may appoint. Forbes' crime almost caused a race riot and lynching at Annapolis, where he was temporarily confined after the commission of the crime.

TERRIBLE TALES OF CRUELTY.

Citizens of Richland, N. J., Aroused and Hold an Indignation Meeting.

Two Women Charged With Torturing the Child—They Claim to Have Picked Her Up in the Gutter in New York—A Clergyman Tells What He Witnessed—A Committee Appointed to Prosecute.

VINELAND, N. J., Feb. 3.—With but little clothing on her frail form, and suffering terribly from cold and exposure, and nearly dead for want of nourishment, 11-year-old Eva Tucker was found by a teamster on a country road near this place yesterday.

Eva had disappeared after being threatened with death by Mrs. Winton and Miss Peeler, two women with whom she lived in a small house on the outskirts of the town. She had been missing nearly two days, and the whole village was stirred.

Rumors have been rife in the quiet little village that Eva was being ill treated daily by the two women.

Richland is a new settlement, situated in the lines of two railroads. Mrs. Winton and Miss Peeler came to Richland about 18 months ago, bringing the child Eva with them. They went to live with the Rev. D. J. Jones in the Richland Seminary. Both ladies are highly educated.

About six months after their arrival Mrs. Winton erected a small house one mile from Richland. Here the two women and the child took up their residence. Soon after they moved to Richland Mrs. Winton gave it out among the neighbors that Eva was an adopted child, picked up in the gutters of New York.

Shortly after their removal to the new home Eva was often seen in the woods early and late, and often almost barefooted gathering wood. She also went about the town picking up refuse to be used on the farm.

The tales of cruelty continued to be spread, until finally the citizens of the village held an indignation meeting. Many people testified.

The Rev. D. J. Jones testified that he had seen Miss Peeler beat Eva with a slipper until she was tired, and then send her to Mrs. Winton for further punishment. He had also seen the women drag the child around the room by the hair. All this for some trifling act.

Similar testimony was given by other persons, and a committee was appointed to take steps to prosecute the women. The whole town is aroused.

It is generally supposed in Richland that Eva Tucker was kidnapped.

ELECTRIC CARS IN A CRASH.

They Were Caught on a Railroad Crossing and Several People Were Injured.

BROCKTON, Mass., Feb. 3.—An exciting accident occurred last night at the Crescent street crossing of the Old Colony Railroad. The electric road to Whitman crosses the railroad at this point, and, as two cars in charge of Conductor Fred Wood were crossing the track, the second one caught in the rails.

At this time the 6:18 train from Boston came in sight and the gateman ran down the track waving his red lantern, but before the passengers could alight from the cars the engine crashed through them, derailing an electric car each side of the track and hurling the passengers to the ground.

These ladies were injured: Mrs. John Dawson, of Brocton; Miss Ella J. Noyes, of Whitman; S. E. Plummer, of Brocton; Louise M. Sturtevant, of Whitman; Miss Nellie Williams, of Brocton.

J. E. Bliss, station master, said that there was plenty of time for the passengers to alight after the train came in sight, but he understood that the conductor had told them to remain in the cars.

AN OLD CRIMINAL CAUGHT.

A Petty Thief Turns Out to be a Notorious Prisoner Who Fled Justice.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Feb. 3.—Some time since, a stranger calling himself John Rice registered at the Elm Tree House in this place. A few days afterward he disappeared, taking with him $5 and a silver watch belonging to one of the boarders.

He was traced to Troy, N. Y., where he was arrested. He was brought here, and at his examination he was held in $300, which he was unable to procure.

A telegram has just been received from Windsor, Vt., asking that the prisoner be detained. It now turns out that the prisoner is the notorious Robert Hutton of Proctorsville, woolen manufacturer, whose mills were burned a few years ago, for which he says he received $85,000 from the insurance companies. Afterwards he obtained papers from the Windsor County Clerk's office by which he was fined $300 for contempt. He fled and hid in Canada until the affair blew over. Fitton will be delivered to the Windsor County Sheriff.

NEW JERSEY NOMINATIONS.

Hoppenheimer and Gray Named for Comptroller and Treasurer.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 3.—Gov. Abbett last night renominated Allen McDermott as Clerk in Chancery, and the Senate in executive session at once confirmed the appointment. The term is five years, and the office is worth $5,000 per annum in fees.

HASTENED HIS DEATH.

The Fire Lymph Patient Injected in America Passes Away.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 3.—George M. Bradley, who was the first patient in this country to receive the [illegible] treatment, is dead, and the scientist, Prof. Blake, another lymph patient, who has been under treatment for nearly two months, is at the point of death.

Bradley was about 30 years of age, and was not in an advanced state of consumption when he began receiving treatment.

The inoculation had a disastrous effect upon his throat, making it difficult and extremely painful for him to take any nutriment, and his physician states that his death was undoubtedly hastened by this condition.

Another Rolling Mill Shut Down.

READING, Pa., Feb. 3.—There is considerable excitement over the action of the Brooke Iron Company, at Birdsboro, this county, in reducing their puddlers' wages to meet a similar reduction on the part of Ellis & Lessig at Kenilworth. The puddlers refused to accept the proposed reduction of 25 cents [illegible] $3.25 to $3 per ton, and the rolling mill is closed. Nearly 500 hands are thrown out of employment. The suspension of work in the rolling mill will necessitate closing down the nail factory.

Death of Charles T. English.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 3.—Charles T. English, for many years a prominent resident of New Haven, is dead, aged 77 years. He served as chairman of the first Republican State Convention in Connecticut, and was one of the founders of the party in this State. In 1877, he was his party's candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, but was not elected.

Al Doggett Sold Out.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 3.—The sale of the assets of the insolvent estate of Al Doggett, the postal card manufacturer, took place at the factory on Sheldon. Bidding on the property was very slow, and it was finally knocked down to H. E. Townsend for $715. He purchased for George E. Lemon. The claims of Wilkinson Brothers & Co. amount to about $2,700.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 3.—Governor Pattison has vetoed the joint resolution of the Legislature instructing the United States Senators from Pennsylvania to support the Federal Elections bill. In the House last evening, the resolution censuring Senator Cameron for his action on the silver question and the Elections bill was lost.

PARNELL IS COMING

The Irish Factions Have Settled Their Trouble.

JOHN DILLON TO GO TO PRISON.

While He is Serving His Term O'Brien and Parnell Will Visit America.

The Liberals Agree to All Irish Demands—Home Rule Including the Control of the Police as a Non-Military. The Tories Now Dissevering Liberals Preparing for a Desperate Struggle.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—This morning's London Times says it is reported on good authority that a settlement has been arrived at between the Irish factions.

Parnell and O'Brien will go to America; McCarthy will remain chairman for the present, and Dillon will surrender himself to imprisonment, the understanding being that he will be nominated as leader at the next session.

O'Brien has written a long letter to the Times, refuting Balfour's speech as to the origin of the "Plan of Campaign."

Lobby rumors confirm the settlement reported in the Times.

ALL FAVOR HOME RULE.

The Liberal's Victory Extends to Scotland and Wales.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—It appears that the main point of difference which prolonged the Boulogne conference almost defeated the efforts to reconcile the Irish factions was in regard to the constabulary. Messrs. Gladstone, Morley and Harcourt being unwilling to agree that the constabulary should be turned over to the control of an Irish Parliament, and Mr. Parnell on the other hand, insisting that nothing less would suffice.

On taking the sense of other prominent Liberals, however, he was ascertained, rather to the surprise of Mr. Gladstone, that the prevailing sentiment was in favor of granting to the Irish the control of the police as a non-military.

It being made apparent that Dillon, O'Brien and Healy were with Parnell in requiring a substantial concession as to the character of the home rule bill, Mr. Gladstone [illegible] those assurances through Mr. Morley. The result of the Hartlepool election also greatly strengthened the faith of Mr. Gladstone in the ability of the Liberal party to give Ireland what she desired. The result is an agreement that [illegible] is believed, will be satisfactory to all parties.

The arrangement, however, comes too late to get rid of Mr. Parnell. He has succeeded in again firmly entrenching himself in the affections of the people, and the virtual acceptance of what he demanded has made him a place of commanding importance in the eyes of the British Liberals. He was evident on his return from Ennis. He looked haughtier than ever, and there was an air of triumph about him that arrested the attention of everybody.

Preparing for a Desperate Struggle.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The leaders and dissenting Liberals are preparing for a desperate struggle over the Home Rule programme [illegible] and the instructions are that the religious issue will be made a prominent feature of the anti-Irish agitation, and that the cry of priestly influence will be raised on every platform. The Liberals are satisfied, however, that all arguments will have but little effect and they propose to keep British [illegible] to the front, and not permit Irish Home Rule to stand as the sole issue before the voters.

King Christian Congratulated.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The latest advices from Portugal state that entire quiet prevails, and that the Government is searching out the few remaining insurgents who have so far escaped arrest. Among the many congratulations received by King Carlos on the quick suppression of the revolt are one from his relative, the deposed Emperor of Brazil, Don Pedro, and another from Pope Leo.

Irish Claimants Want Gladstone's Money.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—It appears that another suit is threatened against the late Parnellite Mr. Gladstone, the present owner of the estate of Alderman T. Stewart, the [illegible] merchant. The relatives of Stewart in the North of Ireland are dissatisfied with their treatment, and evidence is now being taken by Sir [illegible] Hanbury and Consul Reed at Belfast in support of their claims.

Crispi's Resignation Accepted.

ROME, Feb. 3.—[illegible] has accepted the resignation of Premier Crispi as final and has requested the withdrawal. The King has [illegible] Marquis A. di Rudini, and four ex-Presidents of the Chamber of Deputies, to form a Cabinet.

The Ruler Still Very Ill.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—The Empress is ill with a severe cold, and the reception which was to have been held to-day has been postponed until Saturday next. The court ball which was to [illegible] Wednesday has also been [illegible].

Chili Wants Peace.

BUENOS AYRES, Feb. 3.—The latest from Chili is an [illegible] that the engagement of [illegible] fought between the [illegible] and a force of [illegible] soldiers, the latter being [illegible].

Money Market Barometer.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—The [illegible] of Rothschild took place to-day. [illegible] a requiem mass was celebrated at the Church of the Madeleine. [illegible] President, Ministers, officers of the [illegible] and Chamber of Deputies offered condolences to the [illegible] of the deceased.

TRAGEDY IN BROOKLYN.

A Laborer Saves His Employer from Being Killed in a Fight.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Josiah G. Willetts, an Englishman, having an office at 111 Broadway, New York, entered the office of the South Brooklyn Steam Engine Works in Brooklyn, during the morning, and asked D. M. Cobb, the president of the company, to step out on the sidewalk, as he wished to have a few words with him.

Cobb went outside into a covered wagonway, close to a weighing scale. The two clerks who were in the office heard loud voices, and, looking out, saw Cobb and Willetts fighting with each other. In a moment or two the men clinched and fell to the pavement.

While down, Willetts pulled a revolver and shot Cobb. He was in the act of firing a second time, when a laborer named Quinn, employed by Cobb, rushed up, seized the weapon, and struck Willetts on the head with it.

Cobb's wound is not dangerous. Willetts may die, and Quinn is under arrest.

What the trouble is can at present be only conjectured. That it relates to Willetts' pretty daughter Emma, who is 30 years of age, is common rumor. She has been in the habit of visiting Cobb at his place of business, and he has been seen in her company elsewhere.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Jennie Voorhees, daughter of ex-Councilman Voorhees, is visiting relatives in this city.

Mrs. George C. Evans was the hostess at a dinner given to a favored party of guests, Saturday evening, at the Union Country Club.

Secretary Manning of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., spent Sunday at Long Branch where he spoke to a large gathering interested in forming an Association in that place.

Up to the close of the Uhrhahn-Long case, a few days ago, Counselor Craig A. Marsh had spent forty successive days in Court without an intermission. At fifty dollars a day, that was quite a six-weeks' income.

Charles B. VanName, of Third place, has recently returned from a trip to California. He came back by way of Mexico and Texas and thus escaped the blizzards of the plains and the temptations of Mormon land.

The Rev. and Mrs. Asa Reed Dilts have returned from a visit at the home of Mr. Dilts' father at Raritan. A few weeks of farm life and food have greatly improved the health of the Park Avenue Baptists' pastor.

The music-loving people of Plainfield—who are the great majority this season—will be intensely pleased to hear that it is probable that the celebrated musician and critique, Mr. H. E. Krehbiel of the Tribune, will be persuaded to give a lecture on Die Meistersinger of Wagner, at The Casino, this Spring.

The club that is being formed by the wealthy people of Washington Park, is rapidly approaching consummation. Subscriptions for the bonds have grown until the amount is already nearly sufficient. The name is not yet decided on. As THE PRESS stated, it will not be called a "County Country Club." So far the preference is in favor of "The Somerset." Some of the subscribers also like the sound of "The Watchung."

Miss Virginia F. Randolph, daughter of ex-Mayor and Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph of East Front street, will sail soon for Europe. She will spend probably a year and a half in Paris, where she will continue her studies of art. At the gay French capital she will be the guest of old family friends of her father's. The artistic work Miss Randolph has already accomplished has won great admiration from friends, and high praise from competent critics.

At four o'clock of Tuesday afternoon of next week, at the home of the bride's parents, 360 East Front street, this city, the wedding will take place of Miss Margaret Clendenen Field and William Runyon Stanbery of Scotch Plains. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Scarborough will officiate assisted by the Rev. William Maxwell Reilley. Invitations have been sent to only the relatives and intimate friends of both families. Among those who have expressed their acceptance are Senator Rufus Blodgett and the Hon. H.S. Little.

By order of the Court of Chancery of this State, Peter Duryea, formerly of West Seventh street, this city, is required to appear and answer before March 7, why the petition of his wife for a divorce from the bonds of matrimony, should not be granted. Mrs. Duryea is well-known in this city and highly esteemed. There is no more truly charitable, thoroughly generous and genuinely Christian woman in any community. While sincerely wishing her success, everyone will regret that necessity should bring the name of so modest and sensitive a woman into public court.

Ladies, clean your kid gloves with Mather's glove cleaner; for sale only by Mrs. J. C. Dyer, 38 West Front street. All the latest novelties of the season in fine Millinery. Correct styles.

A YOUNG GIRL STRANGELY MISSING.

She Had a Good Home, in a City Full of Friends, Yet Vanishes as Completely as if Forever.

Leila L. Highsmith, who for several months has made her home at the residence of Councilman Elmore D. Moffett on Orchard place, has mysteriously disappeared.

She was virtually the adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moffett, for since the marriage of their daughter she had occupied a place in the household just as though she had always been a member of the family.

Every happiness was accorded to her. She was treated with the utmost kindness and consideration.

Yet last Friday afternoon, at about half-past two o'clock, she slipped quietly out of the house, went up town, and mailed a letter to Mrs. Moffett, saying that she was going away.

"I know I am doing wrong,"—she wrote—"for turning my back on such a good home as you have given to me. No one could have been nicer to me than you and your family. Do not think me ungrateful, for I appreciate all you have done for me. To go away from all the comforts you have provided is, I know, a very poor way of showing my regard; but forgive and forget it all. My head feels as if it were crazy. I don't believe I realize what I am doing."

To this brief note she merely signed her initials, "L. H."

The postmark indicated that the letter had been mailed about two hours after the girl had left the house. Mrs. Moffett, receiving it, supposed that Leila had merely gone to the home of some friend in Plainfield, and immediately wrote back to Leila, telling her that it was foolish for her to go away, and advising her to return. That letter was never called for, and this morning Mrs. Moffett herself took it from the post-office.

Mrs. Moffett also communicated with the parents of the missing girl, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Blazier, who live at Chatham, Morris county. Leila is the daughter of Mrs. Blazier by her first marriage. Mr. Blazier was formerly a resident of North Plainfield, and Leila received her education in the Plainfield schools. During her school-days here Leila made many friends, and this number was greatly increased by her attendance at the First Baptist Sunday-school while at Mrs. Moffett's home.

Mrs. Blazier was terribly shocked by the tidings that her daughter was missing, and has been on the verge of nervous prostration ever since. Mr. Blazier endeavored to reassure her, and told her that he would find the girl in a very short time. He began the search instantly, but it has been a vain one. Inquiry among the relatives to whom it was thought she might have gone has been fruitless, and constant seeking for her among her many friends in this city and in the borough has likewise been of no avail. This morning the stepfather said that he met with nothing but failure at every turn; each hope that loomed up from time to time, as quickly was dispelled. He was in despair, and had not the heart longer to carry on the search.

"Oh, how I dread to tell her mother!" —he said.—"It will break her heart."

Absolutely no clue has been found that offers the slightest chance of dispelling the mystery, and those to whom Leila was so dear are possessed of the gravest fears. What at first seemed a mere caprice now stares them in the face with awful possibilities. Attempts to follow out theories suggested only deepen the mystery.

The wildest imaginings fail to offer the least explanation why Leila left home without giving a reason. Only a day or two before she went away she had said, in response to a bantering question from Mr. Moffett as to how she liked her new home, "I shall never go away till you tell me; and even if you did, tell me to go I believe I should stay." The very morning of her strange departure she had displayed warm affection to Mrs. Moffett, and had greeted her in the morning with a kiss. She had seemed in excellent spirits all the morning.

Leila was at times subject to very peculiar headaches. During such illness she would seem very absent-minded. It is thought that the "crazy feeling" she spoke of in her letter may have been such a headache, and that it brought on mental aberration under which she was not accountable for her acts.

When last seen Leila was attired in a gray flannel dress, a tight fitting jacket of green cloth and a Nellie Bly plaid cap.

The age of the missing girl is seventeen years. She is a very attractive young woman, but the theory that she was involved in any affair of the heart is ridiculed. She never received gentlemen callers, and was a stay-at-home girl.

The Law About Paying Taxes.

The Item, (Short Hills), contains a synopsis of the law making it lawful to imprison for the non-payment of taxes, and says:

There is much misapprehension of the law which allows imprisonment for the non-payment of taxes, when the delinquent tax-payer has not sufficient property on which to levy. (Rev. of N. J., p. 1143, § 18.)

This law was modified by an act prohibiting imprisonment for default in payment of taxes on real estate (Supl. to Rev. of N. J., p. 1021, P. L. 1879, p. 238,) so that now imprisonment can only be resorted to in the case of a tax on personal property or a poll tax. In this case the right to imprison for non-payment of taxes is unquestioned in our State.

Many have supposed that the clause of the Constitution of New Jersey prohibiting imprisonment for debt, or on a judgment, etc., covered the case of unpaid taxes; but it is not so. It is a well-established principle of law that a tax is not a debt and cannot be converted into a judgment, but no one imprisoned for the non-payment of taxes could have the slightest hope of relief unless he could show that the requirements of the statute had not been complied with, such as the exhausting of any personal property that could be levied on before resort was had to imprisonment, etc.

This law has never been enforced, except in rare and isolated cases, and if it were generally enforced to-day large additions to our jails would become necessary. On the other hand, no delinquent tax-payer can ever feel assured that his case may not be one selected by the authorities for the enforcement of the law, and the best advice that can be given him is to pay up, lest he may be called to go to jail. The most potent reason for the general failure to enforce this law probably lies in the fact that the officers who would have to enforce the same hold their office by direct election by the people, and that delinquent tax-payers have votes.

Elsie Leslie More Disappointed Than the Audience.

There was a house full of disappointed people in Music Hall, last night, when it was announced before the rise of the curtain that owing to serious illness, Miss Elsie Leslie would not be able to appear. There was an inclination to join in a general hiss, but Dan'l Frohman's good name carries veracity with it everywhere and the long suffering Music Hall audience quietly submitted. They have in the past three years become used to disappointments of all sorts, and as they can stand the clarionet in the orchestra they can stand anything.

The mistake on the part of the company's manager was the announcement that Elsie would not appear. If nothing had been said less than a dozen would have suspected the substitution of an understudy. Estelle Sprague's interpretation of the title roles only gained by comparison with Leslie's. The former is as delicate in her ways and more exquisite in figure than the latter, while her acting is smoother and more complete. The audience lost nothing by the substitution.

The really disappointed one was Elsie Leslie herself. She had a number of personal friends in this city and has long looked forward to the pleasure of appearing before them. But diphtheria is a sickness that cannot be trifled with. It was not until afternoon, however, that she would submit to the advice of her doctors and give up all thought of going to Plainfield.

The rest of the company were also beyond unfavorable criticism. Arthur Elliott cannot be excelled as Miles Hendon. Dora Leslie has even improved as Elizabeth, and D. Glitfether's John Canty is still only slightly overdone. Plainfield hopes to see them all again.

An Old Lady's Sudden Death.

Mrs. Phœbe, wife of Johnathan Lyons of 55 West Second street, was seized with an apoplectic fit while walking along West Second street last night, and fell to the ground in front of the residence of L. Warren Randolph, the West Front street pharmacist. Relatives of Mr. Randolph heard her groaning and carried her into the house. Dr. W. C. Boone was sent for, but she was dead before he arrived. She had just parted, at the corner near her home, from her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sturtevant, who were on the way to the theatre, when the sudden illness occurred.

Romanism and the Public Schools.

Congratulations.

The Senator for Union county wears a very broad smile today and beams on the community more gladsomely and benignantly than ever. Rumor assigns the cause to the arrival of a daughter. The HERALD congratulates Senator Marsh.—Elizabeth Herald.

The Central to Carry Only New York and Brooklyn's Coal.

The story was published in THE PRESS, last week, that the Philadelphia and Reading had fallen out with the Central Railroad of New Jersey, and that it had withdrawn all of its New York freight and coal business from the latter, turning it over to the Lehigh Valley Railroad pending the completion of the new Port Reading Railroad, from Bound Brook to Perth Amboy. This was looked upon as a sign of a possible far-reaching alliance between the Reading and Lehigh Valley systems. Such a step would save the building of two parallel roads which have been mapped out, and would render another road profitable, which otherwise might not pay its fixed charges. President McLeod of the Reading said in his last annual report that the facilities at Communipaw furnished by the Central for handling the Reading freight were utterly inadequate. Jersey Central stock was hammered down several points on the Stock Exchange Saturday.

President J. Rogers Maxwell of the Central said that the present intention of the Reading is to let the Central handle at Communipaw coal for New York and Brooklyn delivery, but to take all the rest over the Lehigh Valley to Perth Amboy, pending the completion of the Port Reading Railroad.

COMMON COUNCIL DOINGS.

Re-appointments by the Mayor—Liquor License Applications—General Routine Business.

The regular February meeting of the Plainfield Common Council, held last evening, was largely devoted to business of a routine character. All the members were present but Councilman Rushmore. President Smith occupied the chair.

Alexander Titsworth, City Treasurer, applied for an increase of salary, claiming that the amount of work he had to do, the amount of bond he had to furnish, and the expenses he had to incur, were all so large that the present salary was entirely inadequate. The application was referred to the Finance Committee.

T. W. King, of Sandford avenue, presented an essay on the proper way to build up a growing city, and wound up by asking for electric lights on the thoroughfare on which he resides. The petition was referred to the Committee on Public Lights.

A petition from residents of that part of the city beyond Grant avenue, asking for a regular policeman for that unprotected section was referred to the Committee on Police, Salaries and Elections.

Mayor Alexander Gilbert presented the following nominations, all of which were confirmed:

Corporation Counsel—Craig A. Marsh.

New Members of the Board of Health, for term ending in February, 1893—Geo. W. Rockfellow, O. B. Leonard.

Street Commissioner—Robt. A. Meeker.

Chief Engineer of the Fire Department—Thaddeus O Doane.

First Assistant Engineer—J. Erwin Waters.

Second Assistant Engineer—John W. Murray, Jr.

City Physician—Andrew Manning, M.D.

Overseer of the Poor—J. Oakley Nodyne.

Regular policemen—George W. Grant, Patrick Lynch, Thomas McCue, Patrick J. Flanagan, Charles Giese, Jos. Cooney, Christian Frederickson, Patrick Kiely.

Special policemen—Stephenson R. Hope, Thomas Clarkson, Wm. V. Mundy, Robert Walker, Morris Higgins, Wm. R. Mattox, Randolph Marsh, Andrew Muir, Jacob Kriney, Philip Giese, Wm. Sliter, Cadwallader Jones, Francis Moran, Henry W. Angleman, George R. Rockafellow, Nicholas W. Conway, Wm. J. Mattox, Vincent W. Nash, Chas. F. Glaentzer, Edward F. Schiemer.

Pound master—David Hand.

All of the confirmations were unanimous except that of Mr. Rockafellow, against whom Councilman Hetfield voted.

The bond of City Treasurer Titsworth, in the sum of $15,000, with E. C. Mulford, D. S. Roberts, L. A. Hummer, J. S. Cutter and A. Vanderbeck as sureties, was presented and ordered recorded in the County Clerk's office.

City Physician Andrew Manning reported that he had attended eighteen families during the past quarter.

The Board of Health reported that the condition of the city's health was excellent, and that the prevailing system of disposing of nuisances was very satisfactory. The city had been free from epidemic during the year, and every precaution was taken to prevent contagion.

S. L. Miller's election to membership in Zephyr Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, was confirmed.

Councilman Moffett for the Water Committee reported that ex-Councilman Newhall, Chairman of the late Water Board, had transferred to the keeping of the committee all maps, plans, schedules, etc., pertaining to the proposed construction of water works.

A letter from Thomas Nevins, representing the Rapid Transit Railway Company of Newark, applying for the right to construct a street railway in Plainfield, was referred to the Street Committee.

Councilman Hetfield presented a resolution that the Committee on Fire and Buildings be empowered to select rooms for the Council, the Mayor, Chief of Police and other city officials. The resolution was adopted.

A resolution that the City Clerk be authorized to advertise for proposals to construct a system of water-works and sewerage for the city, the bids to be presented at next month's meeting, was presented by Mr. Hetfield, and was adopted.

In response to a petition from the local merchants, asking for protection to their business, Mr. Hetfield presented an ordinance increasing the restrictions on peddlers, hawkers, etc., fixing the license fees for hackmen and similar professors of transportation at $10 per year, and on peddlers, hawkers, etc., at $25, and increasing the fines for ordinance-violation. The ordinance was adopted on its second reading and was ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Hetfield introduced an ordinance to remedy the hackman nuisance at the North avenue railway station. It prohibits the hackmen from keeping the horses or vehicles standing in front of the station, and compels them to keep them in a line east of the northeast end of the station—that is, on North avenue near the Peace street corner, in the centre of the street, twenty feet distant from each curb, in such a way as not to interfere with public travel. It also provides that hackmen shall keep their horses and vehicles at least thirty feet away from entrances to places of public entertainment while waiting for customers.

The object of the ordinance—Mr. Hetfield explained—was to prevent the hackmen from monopolizing certain portions of the streets as they do at present, and especially to provide ample room for private carriages to drive to and from the North avenue station. Mr. Hetfield added that at present the hackmen were such a nuisance at the station that many railway passengers had to leave their carriages at corners a block away and walk to the station because the hackmen blocked the approaches so. Besides, the constant standing of the horses in front of the station was the cause of the street pavement becoming an eye-sore. He for one wanted the avenue in front of the station kept in an attractive and openly passable condition.

Councilmen Ginna and Ackerman were of the opinion that the ordinances already on the statute books were sufficient to cover the case and abolish the nuisance, if properly enforced by rigid police regulation. A somewhat extended debate ensued, and the ordinance was finally adopted on its second reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised by the following vote:

For the ordinance—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg—7.

Against—Councilman Ackerman, Ginna and See—3.

Councilman Hetfield introduced an ordinance to change the hour of closing the bar rooms in the city from eleven to twelve o'clock at night. It was adopted on its second reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised, by the following vote.

For the ordinance—Councilmen Gallup, Hetfield, Moffett, Roberts, Smith and Spangenberg—6.

Against—Councilmen Ackerman, Ginna, Johnston and See—4.

An ordinance establishing the grade of West Fourth street from Plainfield avenue to Grant avenue was adopted on its second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised, as was also one changing the grade of portions of Plainfield avenue, West Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Liberty streets.

The sum of $500 was appropriated from the funds still having a balance, for use in repairing the streets.

A resolution was adopted providing for the transfer of money from the Fire Department fund to the general fund sufficient to meet a note of $3,500 falling due Feb. 13.

The report of the commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages to adjacent property by the extension of Orchard place was approved. It assesses benefits varying from $20 to $30 for various property-holders and awards $420 to Peter Emmons as the excess of damages to him over benefits, on account of the land taken from him for the street continuation.

Councilman Ackerman inquired why Madison avenue wasn't macadamized as provided by an ordinance of 1889. Street Commissioner Meeker explained that prior ordinances, adopted in 1888, provided for the macadamization of other thoroughfares, and that the work of macadamizing was being done as fast as possible, taking up each ordinance in the order of its adoption. The matter of macadamizing Madison avenue was referred to a special committee consisting of Councilmen Gallup, Ackerman and Roberts.

The following liquor license applications were presented and ordered advertised as required by law:

AN OLD JERSEY BLUE LAW.

Plainfielders Who Lend a Horse and Carriage on Sunday Do So at Their Own Risk.

Judge John H. Lippincott rendered an interesting blue-law decision in a case in the Hudson County Common Pleas Saturday, which is of large interest to liverymen and others throughout the State. John Dillworth of Henderson street, Jersey City, borrowed John P. VanDoren's carriage one Sunday three years ago and went riding. The horse became fractious and broke the carriage and threw Mrs. Dillworth out. VanDoren sued for damages to the borrowed equipage.

At the trial in Judge Douglas's court, Dillworth's lawyer set up the novel plea that VanDoren violated the law by lending his carriage for use on Sunday, and produced an act passed in 1846, which reads as follows;

"That no traveling, worldy employment, of business, ordinary or servile labor, or work either upon land or water, (works of necessity and charity excepted,) nor shooting, fishing, (not including fishing with a seine or net, which is hereafter provided for,) sporting, hunting, gunning, racing, or frequenting of tippling houses, or any interludes or plays, dancing, singing, fiddling, or other music for the sake of merriment, or any playing at football, fives, ninepins, bowls, long-bullets, or quoits, nor any other kind of playing, sports, or pastimes, or diversions shall be done on the Christian Sabbath, or first day of the week, commonly called Sunday; and that every person, being of the age of fourteen years or upward, offending in the premises, shall, for every said offense, forfeit and pay to the law, for the use of the poor of the township in which such offense shall be committed, the sum of one dollar."

Judge Douglas refused to honor the defense and gave judgment in VanDoren's favor for $75. Dillworth appealed to the Common Pleas and Judge Lippincott set aside the judgment and gave a verdict for the defendant, thus establishing a novel precedent.

JERSEY'S NEW TAX LAW.

Everybody Must Make Oath of Their Property or go to Jail.

Barker Gummere, who is a member of the Commission to draft a new general tax law for the State, delivered an address on the subject before the State Board of Agriculture the other day.

The new law, according to Mr. Gummere's exposition, will be severe. Instead of three week in which to make their assessment, the assessors will have two months, which will enable them to make actual investigation into valuations. In order to get at the personal property, the law will contain certain questions to be answered by every man, and he can by no method escape giving the true valuation unless he perjures himself.

If he does not answer at all, then the assessor will assess him at a valuation fifty per cent. more than in his opinion the man is worth. He will also be reported and required to appear before the State Board, and if then he does not answer the questions he will be locked up.

The law will provide that the Governor shall nominate three men who, when confirmed by the Senate, shall constitute the State Board of Commissioners. It will be the duty of this Board to compel the assessors to execute the law. Mr. Gummere believes that this law will bring about a marked improvement in the first year. The Commission recommend that there shall be no deduction for debts, except debts of record, of at least six months' standing.

The law will give the Board power to substitute an assessor if the one in office fails to execute the law. There will be power of appeal and review to the State Board. If a man attempts to dodge his tax the assessor will report the case to the Prosecutor of the county and suit will be brought.

The defendant may appear to the State Board and it will have power to order a suspension of trial until they have looked into the case. All appeals must be made within two months after assessment is made.

The law will require that the taxes shall be collected by the assessor or he will be required to pay them himself, as is the law in Pennsylvania. The Commission will recommend no special rules for valuation, because the Constitution says that property must be assessed at its true value, and there is but one proper way to make such valuation.

Bernhardt is Here.

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—The overdue French steamship La Champagne, bringing Sarah Bernhardt, her company of actors, and her little family of pets, consisting of a huge English coach dog, a Yorkshire terrier, no bigger than a large-sized rat, snugly reposing in a handsome leather cage, and two black snakes, arrived at her pier at 2 p. m.

Amherst Presented With $100,000.

AMHERST, Mass., Feb. 3.—President Gates of Amherst College says that a friend of the college, who wished his name withheld, had just given $100,000 to the general fund of the college, the only condition attached being that $150,000 additional should be raised. The fund will be named in honor of ex-President Seelye.

Three Men Arrested for Murder.

LANCASTER, Pa., Feb. 3.—John Dougherty of Philadelphia, Felix McFields of Uniontown, Pa., and John Daly of Ohio, were arrested here charged with the murder of Henry C. Dorwart at Columbia, Pa., Saturday night. Blood stains have been found on Daly's coat.

HYPNOTIZED HIM.

How a Strong-Minded Woman Got a Seat in a Street Car.

The man was a six-footer and looked robust enough, but he was suffering from "that tired feeling;" so on the street car he decided to let the women stand, for he felt that he needed the rest just as much as they.

Three or four women were already standing in the car, hanging to the straps with ostentatious efforts, but they were neither young, nor pretty and he sat still in his corner and pretended to read.

The door was suddenly slammed open and a middle-aged woman entered the car. She had short iron-gray hair, a Roman nose, and steely blue eyes; her mouth wore a determined expression, and there were stiff gray hairs growing on her firm-looking chin. She looked strong-minded, so much so, in fact, that the man in the corner said to himself that if her legs were half as strong as her mind it wouldn't hurt, her to stand.

Under her arm she carried a tiny, woolly poodle; that seemed to him an anomaly, and he wondered why she had usurped one of the perquisites of her more frivolous sisters.

On she came toward his corner and planted herself directly in front of him. He buried his face deep in his paper, but he could feel her eyes upon him and he had the sensation of being under some strange influence. He began to feel a sort of numbness in his fingers, the paper dropped from before his face, and he saw those cold, blue eyes looking him through and through. Great heavens! The woman was hypnotizing him.

He tried to throw off the spell, to signal the conductor to stop the car—anything to escape those eyes, but he was powerless.

Suddenly impeled by some unknown force, he rose, bowed politely, and offered the woman his seat. As she took it, without a word of thanks, she handed him her dog to hold. He took it meekly. He, who detested all manner of canines—and poodles more than all the rest. He not only took it and held it tenderly as a mother holds her babe, but amid the snickers of the delighted passengers he held it to his face and kissed it fondly. He thought that he was married and that this was his baby.

On and on they rode, people came and people went, still the man stood caressing the abominable little beast.

Finally the woman signaled for the car to stop. With a grim smile she took the dog from his arms and left the car, and the man, limp and exhausted, fell back into his seat.

As his scattered wits returned he found that he had gone four miles beyond where he had intended getting off, and that he had missed an important engagement. He hailed a cab and retraced his way, a sadder and wiser man; and lest he sometime should meet some one who was his fellow-passenger on that trip he has moved to another part of the city, and notwithstanding his mortal fear of pneumonia, he is now riding in the front seat of the grip.—Chicago Mail.

Had No Use for a Cab.

A sad-faced young man, whose personal appearance indicated that he was accustomed to rubbing against the rough edges of the world, stopped in front of the City Hall one afternoon and entered into conversation with a man who was standing on one of the stone steps. A cab-driver, with an eye ever watchful for a chance to turn a wheel, observed that the man on the steps seemed to be crying to direct the sad-faced young man to some place in the eastern part of the city.

Waiting until the young man turned to leave, the cab-driver approached him and said:

"Have a cab; take you to any part of the city?"

"No," said the young man, feebly, but with a smile, "I'm looking for the office of the poor commissioner, but I guess I'll walk."—Detroit Free Press.

A Little Slow.

The English traveler stood on the slippery dock at New York, ready to board the steamer for home. His American friend shook him warmly by the hand and bade him farewell.

"Be careful in going up the gangway," said the latter. "It is icy. For that matter, however," he added, "it will be 'igh sea all around you for the next six or seven days."

The Englishman, with a sad, dreamy preoccupied look on his face, went aboard the ship.

Years passed. The American, now a gray-haired old man, was sitting down to breakfast one day when a cablegram, just received, was handed to him. It was from his English friend and contained these words:

"Ha! Ha!"

It had bored its way through his skull at last.—Chicago Tribune.

—Albertus Vogt, of Dunnellon, Fla., had a gun stolen from him by two negroes he had in his employ. After they had got some distance from the house they attempted to manipulate the lock, but not understanding its mysteries, the gun went off and shot one of the men in the ankle, filling it with buckshot. The report started Mr. Vogt's pack of hounds, who surrounded the wounded man and ran his companion up a tree, and they were captured.

—Wife to Her Husband.—"Now, hubby dear, you must go to the theater with me to-night. I have just bought two tickets—for you and me—to see 'All the Comforts of Home.'" Husband—"Yes, indeed, let us go; that is something I have never seen."

—Boswell told Johnson that such a thing as a beggar starving to death in the streets of a Scotch city was unheard of. Johnson replied: "This does not arise from the want of beggars, but the impossibility of starving a Scotchman."

—Goodness outweighs beauty with the dead if not the living. We never saw a tombstone that said that the one under it was the belle of her town when alive.—Atchison Globe.

INDIAN AND HEBREW.

A Comparison of Some Peculiar Customs of the Two Races.

Early travelers among the Indians claim to have found rites and ceremonies strikingly similar to those of the Jews, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. George Catlin, the artist, who spent a considerable portion of his life among the tribes, said he believed that they had Jewish blood in their veins, although he could not go so far as to identify them with the lost tribes of Israel. The Indians worshiped a great Spirit or a Jehovah. Idolaters were never found on the North American continent. The tribes had their council or medicine houses, which they held most sacred. They had their high priests and their prophets. They followed the Hebrew custom in not allowing the women to worship with the men. Fifty years ago the Sioux exploited the same belief that they are dancing themselves crazy about now. They maintained that the Indians were the chosen people of the Great Spirit, and that in time they were to triumph over the rest of the world through a Messiah.

In marriage the Indians had customs which savored of Palestine. They gave presents for their wives. In their bathing and in their family relations they followed with remarkable precision many of the requirements of the Mosaic law. They observed certain laws of purification which the Old Testament teaches. Fifty years ago travelers found no difficulty in discovering the practice of these rites and ceremonies by the Indians. But as the line of white settlement advanced the Indians gave up their old customs. Their forms, were laughed at, by white men and many of them were abandoned. The ghost dance, which the Sioux have been scaring the frontier with, is the old sun dance under a new name. It used to be practiced frequently as an atonement ceremony.

There was once an Indian feast which was very like the annual feast of the passover. Some of the tribes kept a feast with branches of willow and preliminary fasting, which bore striking resemblance to the Feast of Tabernacles. The practice of offering to the Great Spirit the first green corn, and the first fruits of all kinds, was almost universal among the Indians before they became contaminated with white men.

The Lazy Man's Pipe.

The most curious pipe of the year is the lazy man's pipe. As its name expresses, this is a pipe requiring the minimum of exertion to use it. Naturally, it is of a somewhat complicated design, consisting of a tube to hold the tobacco, and a stem running crosswise of this for the mouth. The pipe is held by passing the two first fingers of the hand through two rings, one on either side of the bowl stem, and the mouthpiece being placed in the mouth, the pressure of a small valve that lies just under the thumb sets the ingenious mechanism inside to work, and the smoke is forced automatically into the mouth.

SOMETHING NEW!

We have bought most of our Spring stock of SHOES for future delivery, and in buying as many as we did, will not have room for them, unless we close out some of the kinds we have in stock.

You know how we can get clear of them. So do we; and we have marked them down—some 50c., some $1, some $1.50 on a pair. We make this GREAT CUT to clear them. Of course it is a loss, but what is our loss is your gain.

Now, do not put it off, but come and get a pair of SHOES for a very SMALL PRICE.

THE JAPANESE RELIGION.

A Complication of Superstitions and Traditions Which is Incomprehensible.

The religion of the Japanese women must appear very complicated and confused to their little giddy brains, when even the most learned priests of their country lose themselves in their cosmogonies, their symbols, their metamorphoses of gods in that millenary chaos upon which the Buddhism of India has so strangely foisted itself without destroying any thing. Their most serious cult seems to be that of their defunct ancestors. These shades or familiar gods possess in each household a perfumed altar, before which the living pray long at morning and night, without, however, believing absolutely in the immortality of the soul, and in the persistence of the human ego as understood by our Occidental religions.

To the religious contradictions which baffle us must be added superstitions as old as the world, the strangest or the gloomiest, and fearful to listen to at night. Beings half gods and half ghosts haunt the black darkness; at crossways in the woods stand ancient idols gifted with singular powers; there are miraculous stones in the depths of forests. And to have an approximate idea of the faith of these women with small, oblique eyes, one must reduce to chaos all that I have just said, then try to transpose it into giddy brains that laughter prevents most of the time from thinking, and that seem at moments to have the heedlessness of the brains of birds.

Withal, they are assiduous in their attendance at all the pilgrimages, which are constant, at all the ceremonies and festivals in the temples. During the fair season they come in smiling troops, two or three times a month, from all corners of the country to pagodas deliciously situated in the country, covering the little roads, the little bridges, with the incessant passing of their marine-blue dresses, and with the wide shells of their black headdresses.

In the big cities, on almost every summer evening, there is a pilgrimage to some sanctury or other—sometimes in honor of a god so ancient that nobody remembers exactly his role in the world. After business of all kinds, with its bargains and barters, has been suspended, after the innumerable petty trades have stopped their monotonous noise, when the myriads of little houses and shops begin to put up their light shutters, the women dress themselves, ornament their hair with their most extravagant pins, and set out, holding at the end of flexible sticks their painted lanterns. The streets are filled to overflowing with their little persons, ladies or mousmis, walking slowly in sandals and exchanging charming courtesies. With an immense murmur of fluttering fans, of rustling silks and of laughing chatter, at dusk, by the light of the moon, or beneath the starry night, they ascend to the pagoda, where gigantic gods with horrible masks await them, half hidden behing bars of gold, in the incredible magnificence of the sanctuaries. They throw pieces of money to the priests, they pray prostrated and clapping their hands with sharp blows, clack, clack, as though their fingers were of wood. But most of the time they are chattering, turning around, thinking of something else, attempting to escape by laughter from the fear of the supernatural.—Pierre Loti, in Harper's Magazine.

A SCHOOL-MA'AM'S BEAUX.

The Strange Courtship of the Grigglehorn Brothers.

They Had An Interesting 'Possum Hunt, But the Old Man Won Her Affections —An Amusing Sketch of Country Life in East Tennessee.

[COPYRIGHT, 1891.]

Men who term themselves social philosophers tell us that the time is rapidly coming when we shall have no distinctive types of the genius homo in this country. They declare that we are all tending toward physical and mental uniformity and that in a few centuries from now we shall all be a sort of human field of peas. I think that this is kindly thrown out as a hint to writers who are endeavoring to portray character; a reminder that if they have characters whom they wish to delineate, they should do so at once or run the risk of losing the opportunity. Having mused over this hint and having accepted it in all its warning significance, I hasten to give the following true story:

A number of years had elapsed since there had been a school in that "thin settlement" of East Tennessee, which lies some ten or fifteen miles west of Tom Hughes' English colony. In the winter wild animals slept under the old log school-house, and in the autumn rich clusters of grapes hung from the eaves. The boys had grown up in so strong a contempt of education that once, when a dapper little vacation sophomore came up from Nashville and attempted to open a school, they seized him roughly and, carrying him down into the dense woods, bumped him ungently against the uneven bark of a red oak tree. The sophomore, upon gaining his liberty, caught up his Derby hat and vanished.

Recently some of the more liberal-minded men of the community decided that the youths and maidens of the land must be educated, and knowing that their laudable object could not be accomplished by the employment of male teachers, decided to engage a woman. Miss Flora Hightower, an old maid of frisky shyness and hemplike hair, was engaged. She was so frail in structure and so innocent of expression, that the anxious fathers and mothers knew that their boys, rough but manly, would not turn her out of the house, and moreover would rally in her defense should the girls, scarcely less rough than the boys, attempt to lead her off into the woods and carry her through that classic rural pastime of bumping. Among the "students" were two boys, John and Alf Grigglehorn, sons of old Pete Grigglehorn, the man who, some time ago, swore on a wager that he could butt a well-known goat off the county bridge. When the surgeons had trepanned his head with a piece of sheet-iron, he remarked that he had ever been open to conviction and that 's estimate of that goat had been revised.

Shortly after the school was opened the Grigglehorn boys fell in love with the teacher. They were so devoted and so jealous that one would not permit the other to see her alone, and at evening, when she set out for the house where she boarded, they marched along with her, each bent upon choking off what the other attempted to say. One evening, when they had been walking for some time in silence, Alf remarked:

"Miss Flora, I wanter say that I love you strong enough to move a saw-log. The truth is, I have seed a good deal of calico in my life but that you air about the stunniest lot of goods I ever seed. An' now I wanter say suthin' that I kaint git a chance to say in private, that I want you to fling up this here school an' marry me. I don't kere a snap about edycation so long as I kin git you. Hear me?"

"Don't pay no attention to him, Miss Flora," John spoke up before she had time to reply. "He's allus saying suthin' that he don't mean. It has been my aim ever sense I fust seed you to marry you, an' ef you know which side yo' bread is buttered on you will let him slide an' take me, for I am a honey from way up the creek while he is a slouch from the frog pond."

"Oh," Miss Flora giggled, "how happy could I be with either were tuther dear charmer away."

"You bet I'm a charmer," said Alf. "I'm charmer enough to make you a better husband than this knock-kneed thing that is walkin' along with us."

"That is all right," John rejoined, "but when it comes to charmin' I'm thar."

"Oh, boys, I really don't know which of you to take. I had thought that I should never be married, I had read so much of the unhappiness of the matrimonial state that I was determined to live on in single contentment; but ah! my dears, you have completely upset me."

"But which one of us has upset you the most?" Alf demanded.

"Really, my dear, I can not say."

"Don't you sorter think I have?" John asked.

"Oh, my dear, you must not ask me such a question. Both of you make my heart gush with joy, and yet each of you makes me sad—ah, sad, for I can not marry but one of you and I do not know which one to accept."

This recital, with but slight variation, was gone through with day after day. Old Pete, the boys' father, was deeply amused, and sometimes he would come over to the school-house at evening and, walking a short distance behind the lovers, would follow them home, laughing in first one sleeve and then the other. He divided his mirth between the two youngsters, and was careful, such being his strong sense of justice, not to laugh in one sleeve more than he did in the other.

One night while the boys, sitting by the log fire in the teacher's boarding-house, were painting in rude but strong colors pictures of their adoration, Old Pete came in and after a time remarked:

"I have been a thinking as to the best way to settle this here affair, boys, but, like the teacher, I don't know which one's claim to urge; but it ought to be settled soon, for the school will bust after awhile an' then the teacher will have to go away. Now let me see."

He mused for several moments and then continued:

"You boys ought to be willin' to agree to most any sort of settlement. I would suggest rasslin' or boxin' or somethin' else in that line, but we air gettin' most too civilized up here to resort to sich. Now, I tell you what you do as an improvement on the old an' worn-out methods. Divide the dogs an' go out in the woods in different directions, an' the one that can ketch the biggest possum may have the girl. Do you agree?"

The boys, having been driven to such extremes, were willing to resort to almost ang competition and the teacher declared it would be a rare joke, it was so awfully funny. The boys went home, called up the dogs, divided them into separate packs and started out. It was agreed that they should deliver the marsupial fruits of their hunt at their father's house. The old man had said that he would conduct the teacher thither in time to reach a decision. It must have been nearly twelve o'clock at night when the boys returned. Alf came first with an enormous possum, but John soon followed with one fully as large.

"Wall, this do beat any thing I ever did see," said the old man. The teacher tittered musically and said that she had never seen any thing half so funny. "And," she added, "how did they manage to get them the same size? It wouldn't occur again I don't suppose in a hundred years, and it shows that the possums are so just in this matter that they are not willing to render a decision in favor of either dear party. I never saw the like, I am sure."

"Hold on," said John; "I think you are all too fast. My possum is the biggest an' I will bet money on. Hisn mout be a little fatter, but mine's got the biggest frame. This here is a serious matter an' I want these possums weighed."

"Now you hit me!" Alf exclaimed. "I know mine is the biggest, an' I'll bet my ears on it. Come, fetch out the weighin' machine."

"I'll tell you what you do, boys," said old Pete, "dress the beauties an' then we can see how much they weigh. Hurry up."

The boys agreed, and when the possum had been dressed the old man remarked: "Now we kin git at the justice of the matter. I declar', boys, I never did see two animals so near of a size, an' do you know I thought suthin' of the sort would happen. I never did see sich a courtship. Yes, an' I was might'ly interested, so much so that I concluded not to depend on possums that mout turn out the same size, an' I spoke to the teacher here, an' while you fellers was a listenin' fur the dogs to tree, why her an' me went over to see a justice of the peace an' was married. Say, boys, fling them possums up on the roof of the house an' let the frost fall on 'em an' to-morrer we'll have a weddin' dinner that will make old Andy Jackson waller in his grave."

The teacher tittered musically.

THE MALE FLIRT.

Who Is the Most Detestable in a Woman's Estimation?

One can not pass through a flirtation—man or woman—without lowering the tone of one's mind, writes Felicia Holt in the Ladies' Home Journal. I know that I seem to thus put mind before the affections; but in the prosaic nineteenth century hearts seem out of fashion. Cupid has taken a holiday and left us to our own devices; he loves an age when pounds and pence play a less conspicuous part. For love laughs at calculation. So our mental development becomes our highest consideration, and it must suffer in a game where only the sly trickster holds the trump card.

Dignity and trifling put each other out of countenance, as does the bishop and the clown; and when a man and woman enter with deliberation into the unworthy joust of tilting one's attractions against the other with no other aim than the gratification of his or her vanity, then, I say, neither party can come out unscathed, either mentally or morally.

If one is more detestable than the other, it is the male flirt; for since custom has given him the power of making the advance, he can do the most harm, particularly should he practice his cruel arts upon an unsophisticated girl; she may fall a victim to his cruelty.

A man may recover from a bitter encounter of this sort a sadder and a wiser man; his trust in woman may be terribly shaken, but he does not succumb, as does the woman, whose heart, once wiled from her keeping, grows weary of the world.

And, incredible as it may seem, women are quite as much to blame as men for the sin of flirtation. For if they condemn the sin, they invariably smile upon the sinner, specially if he is handsome and attractive.

The Bagpipe in Asia.

The bagpipe is almost universal throughout Asia, though at present not so much in use as it seems to have been in former ages. It is used among the Chinese musicians, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and is met with in Persia, where it appears to have been more general in former ages than at present. There is also a Hindoo bagpipe, and in Egypt it was used to some extent, but is now rarely met with. In Italy it is common. It is said that the Italian peasant believes that it is the best beloved music of the Virgin Mary, also that it is the instrument upon which the shepherds expressed their joy when they visited the Saviour. When the Italian peasant visits Rome on the anniversary of the birth of our Saviour he always carries his bagpipes with him. The Romans are said to have been acquainted with this instrument, and most likely the Greeks also. In Scotland it is the national instrument, but even there its use is dying out. Bagpipes are known in Scotland, England, Ireland, Germany, Spain, Italy, North Africa (at least I find a name for them in a Tuarick vocabulary) and in Syria. Probably many other countries have them.

CANADA'S NEW MOVE

Sir John Wants a Parliament Fresh from the People.

BIG DEMAND FOR RECIPROCITY.

The People to Vote and Then a Commission Will Visit Washington.

The Revolt in Chili is Fast Disappearing—O'Brien Replies to Balfour's Charges—Cispi's Resignation Not Yet Accepted—Fifty Persons Were Killed at Oporto—An Army of Unemployed in Paris.

TORONTO, Feb. 4.—The Empire, the chief organ of the Dominion government, announces that, acting on the advice of his responsible Ministers, the Governor-General has been pleased to dissolve the House of Commons and issue writs for a new Parliament. The nominations will take place on Thursday, Feb. 26, and the polling on Thursday, March 5. As the reasons which have induced the government to appeal to the country, the Empire says:

It is understood that the Dominion government has, through her Majesty's government, made certain proposals to the United States for negotiations looking to the extension of commerce with that country. These proposals have been submitted to the President for his consideration, and the Canadian government is of the opinion that if these negotiations are to result in a treaty, which must be ratified by the Parliament of Canada, it is expedient that the government should be able to deal with a Parliament fresh from the people rather than with a moribund House.

It is understood that Canada will send a delegation to Washington after March 4, the date on which the life of the present Congress expires, for the purpose of discussing informally the questions of the extension and development of trade between the United States and Canada and the settlement of all questions of difference between the two countries. This delegation will visit the United States capital, it is said, as the result of friendly suggestions from Washington.

BALFOUR'S CHARGES.

O'Brien Denies the He is the Author of the Plan of Campaign.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Replying to charges made against him by Mr. Balfour, Mr. O'Brien denies that he is the author of the "Plan of Campaign." Concerning its points, he says the farmers remem ber the campaign as an instrument which, in a single winter, brought the Russells and the Salisburys to a right way of thinking about the reality of the crisis.

It was, he says, an instrument which had effected the enfranchisement of 100,000 leaseholders, and cut off £1,000,000 a year from rents. It had insured compulsory reduction of judicial rents for three years, and had saved tens of thousands of families from eviction. All this, said Mr. O'Brien, had been effected by it without the loss of a life or the eviction from a campaign estate of a single peasant.

CHILI IS QUIET.

The Insurgents Were Obliged to Abandon Several Towns.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—The Chilian Legation in this city has received a cable message from Chili stating that the insurgent fleet has not occupied any port of that country. The message adds that the country is quiet, the army loyal and that the coast is efficiently defended.

Advices received by the Gaulois from its correspondent in Buenos Ayres are that the Chilian insurgents have been obliged to abandon La Serena and Coquimbo, and that the harbor of Iquique has been reopened. The reports also say that the government will raise the blockade at Valparaiso in three days unless the insurgents make another attack in the meantime.

Lord Hartington's Views.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—At a banquet of the Liberal Union Club last evening, Lord Hartington said it was strange that the ambition for political success could make men, so honorable in all other relations of life, so indifferent to the moral character of their political allies as their British opponent appeared to be. Englishmen, he said, would never consent to have an Irish Parliament deal in connection with the land question. The situation now was an illustration of the saying that when rogues fell out honest men got their own.

Bradlaugh's Funeral.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—In accordance with Bradlaugh's well-known principles there was no display of mourning at his funeral. Instead, many of his old constituents turned out wearing the fighting colors under which he had been carried through to victory at the polls, time after time, until the House of Commons acknowledged itself vanquished by the Radicals of Northampton.

75,000 People Out of Work in Paris.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—The number now out of work in this city, not including habitual dependents on charity, is estimated at 75,000. Nearly all the applicants for relief are men; women apparently preferring to starve in secret.

Irish Leaders Meet To-morrow.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Both sections of the Irish party will meet to-morrow, when the result of the Boulogne conferences will be announced, and a modus vivendi proposed that will put an end to the present strife.

The House of Commons Will Inquire.

LONDON, Feb. 4.—The House of Commons agreed to the motion of Mr. Beach to appoint a select committee to inquire and report as to the necessity of legislation restricting the hours of labor of railway servants.

AN UNKNOWN SUICIDE.

He Cut His Throat With a Razor in a New York Hotel.

NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—A well-dressed young man, who signed his name "Fred Evans, England," on the register of the Astor House at 2 o'clock a. m., was found dead with his throat cut in his room at the hotel.

Evans, but this appears to be a false name, was stretched full length upon the floor, stark naked. The body was cold in death and the blood was congealed about the gaping wound in his throat. Two basins stood near in which the suicide had most methodically caught enough of his life's blood to fill one of the vessels to the brim. A razor lay near at hand with which the deed had evidently been committed.

It was apparently a most deliberate suicide, as there was not a scrap of paper about the man's clothes by which he could be identified, and, to make his identity still harder to solve, the suicide had cut from his clothing every portion thereof on which appeared a sign of his true name or initials.

A WRESTLER KILLED.

His Skull Fractured by a Fall While Engaged in a Mock Match.

MARLBORO, Mass., Feb. 4.—Michael Mahoney of Marlboro and Charles Hilferty of Hopkinton were entertaining the spectators at the prize fight at Hopkinton, before the arrival of the principals, with a mock wrestling match. Mahoney fell twice, the second time striking the floor with such force as to render him unconscious. He was revived shortly, and his condition was not considered dangerous, but later on his skull was found to be fractured and congestion of the brain set in, from which he died at 2:15 p. m. He was about 35 years of age, and leaves a wife and three children.

Names Sent by Express.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 4.—The largest batch of petitions that has probably ever been sent to the Pennsylvania Legislature at one time was put in at last night's session of the House by Mr. Fow, of Philadelphia. The petition contained over 42,000 names of Philadelphians who are in favor of a modification of the Sunday law of 1794. The names were largely secured in the barber shops of Philadelphia from the customers of the barbers. The petitions were shipped here by the Adams Express.

Knocked Out in the First Round.

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., Feb. 4.—James Dime, of this city, the champion lightweight pugilist of this section, knocked out James Robinson, of Ballston, a heavyweight, in the first round here last night. The round lasted but one minute and three-quarters, Robinson being knocked insensible by a heavy blow on the jaw. Dime weighs 135 pounds, and Robinson 170. Five-ounce gloves were used. A large crowd of sports attended the fight.

On a Tour of Inspection.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Feb. 4.—General Manager Toucey, Chief Engineer Katte, and Messrs. Hinchey and Place of the New York Central Railroad are on a tour of inspection of the proposed Mohawk and St. Lawrence Railroad and will spend several days in this vicinity inspecting the terminal facilities in this city, Carthage and Clayton and looking over the route.

Two Killed and Two Injured.

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 4.—During a severe snow storm two freight trains collided about three miles west of Corry on the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio Railroad. Engineer Lew Osgood of this city and his fireman, Ihmsen, were killed. Engineer Britton and two brakemen were injured.

Quarantine Station for Cattle.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Assistant Secretary Spaulding has designated Suspension Bridge, N. Y., as a quarantine station for cattle, etc. John T. Claris, of Buffalo, N. Y., has been appointed veterinary inspector for the district of Suspension Bridge, as well as for that of Buffalo Creek, N. Y.

Under Control of the Reading Railroad.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 4.—The Philadelphia and Eastern Railroad, which is projected to run from New Hope, Bucks county, to Easton, has passed under the control of the Reading Railroad. Arrangements have been made for the construction and will probably be begun in a few weeks.

Dropped Dead in the Street.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Feb. 4.—William Beardsley, aged 55, an oil merchant of this city, dropped dead in the street last evening. He was an ex-member of the Common Council and had recently been appointed a Police Commissioner. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

One More Will is Being Contested.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 4.—The will of the late Lydia Stewart, who died in October last, leaving an estate valued at about $200,000, is being contested by her nephew, William Cuman, who charges fraud and undue influence exerted by her niece, Sarah Shoemaker.

AN ODD PROCEEDING.

A Man's Queer Way of Getting Rid of a Child.

CHESTER, Pa., Feb. 4.—A proceeding that savors of the mysterious occurred in this city. About 2 a. m. a tall, dark complexioned, well-dressed man, accompanied by a two-year-old girl, approached the residence of Harry Sterling on Concord avenue, and to a young lady in the doorway remarked that he wanted to leave his child until noon, as he was going to work in Roach's shipyard. Without waiting for a reply, he placed the child in the doorway, threw a bundle over it, and hastily departed. The little one is a sweet child, and lisped that her name was Hazel Horn, that she came from New York, and that she wanted to see her papa, but not her mamma.

Mrs. Sterling, the lady of the house, was anxious, and she placed the matter before Chief of Police Newcome, who went to Roach's, and found the man who had left the child. He gave his name as G. S. Roberts, but would not account for the child giving her name as Horn. He alleged further that he intended boarding at Sterling's, but they do not take boarders.

MEETS A HIDEOUS DEATH.

A Farmer Loses His Way and Drives Over a Quarry Ledge.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Feb. 4.—Patrick Ryan, a Lafayette farmer, drove into this city yesterday, and started for home last evening. About 3 a. m. his team and wagon were found in a wreck on the rocks at the bottom of a quarry, where they had tumbled off a ledge. The horses were still alive and kicking furiously to disentangle themselves, while doubled up in the wreck was Ryan's dead body. The horses had almost battered his head into a shapeless mass, and were still kicking it in the morning. Ryan is supposed to have been too much intoxicated to control his team.

Fought Seventeen Rounds.

HOPKINTON, Mass., Feb. 4.—Echo Lake was the scene of a brutal prize fight early in the morning between "Foxy" McGloan of Natick, a well-known wrestler, and John Burns of Marlboro. A large number of sports from Boston, Lynn and Worcester witnessed the battle. In the seventeenth round when an offer of $150 to $50 on Burns found no takers, McGloan landed a heavy blow on the back of the neck, sending Burns almost senseless to the ground, and upon his rising knocked him out by a blow in the face. Those who were present declared it was the bloodiest fight they had ever witnessed.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Feb. 4.—The 18th annual meeting of the New York State Grange is in session here, with about 1,000 delegates on hand. Hon. W. C. Gifford, master of the State Grange, read his address. He paid a great deal of attention to the subject of taxation, which was declared to be unfair as affecting the farmer, and insisted on a readjustment. The scheme for State roads was treated in a deprecating manner. The speaker came out strongly in favor of the adoption of the prohibitory amendment.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 4.—A brief has been submitted to the Supreme Court by five members of the House of Representatives on the affirmative and Democratic side of the question as to the validity of the resolution by the Grand Committee ordering a new election in the Second Congressional district. The brief sets forth that the Grand Committee in its action was the General Assembly and that its action was administrative, not legislative, and that, therefore, it was a valid order for a new election.

Republican Senators to Caucus To-morrow Night—Mr. Bland's Views About the Silver Bill—Gen. Alger's Mission to the Capital—No Free Entry for Presents—Coinage of the Mints.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—An estimate sent to Congress by the Secretary of War to supply a deficiency in the Quartermaster's Department tells the story of the cost of the Indian campaign which has just closed.

The round sum of $1,300,000 is asked for, the principle items of which are $916,016 for transportation of troops and supplies, and $187,703 for extra clothing, camp and garrison equipage necessary to outfit for the winter campaign; $70,000 to replace horses broken down in the campaign and for the purchase of ponies, and $87,000 to cover the difference in the cost of supplies purchased for troops in the field and the contract price at the post from which the troops were drawn.

There were other expenses under the supply department that will probably bring the total cost of the campaign up to $2,000,000, a sum sufficient to have given the Sioux the $100,000 annual appropriation promised them for a period of 20 years.

THE TREASURY PORTFOLIO.

Secretary Proctor is the Choice according to the Slate-Makers.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Cabinet slate makers are very busy. The passage of the President's recommendation that the time for making a temporary Treasury appointment be extended from 10 to 30 days makes the impression general that Mr. Harrison will not finally decide to select Secretary Windom's successor for several weeks.

A report, said to emanate from the White House, is in circulation here that Secretary Proctor might be transferred from the War Department to the Treasury Department, and that either ex-Assistant Postmaster-General James S. Clarkson or ex-Governor Foster would be made Secretary of War.

Friends of Assistant Secretary Nettleton hope the President will emulate the example of Mr. Cleveland, and promote him, as did the Democratic President Mr. Fairchild upon the resignation of Daniel Manning. They claim to have assurances that this will be done.

Another name has been sprung in that of Congressman G. W. E. Dorsey, of Nebraska. Mr. Dorsey is chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency.

The Fortifications bill was discussed, and an amendment reducing the appropriation of $1,000,000 to $800,000 for the purchase of oil-tempered and annealed steel for high power coast defence guns was agreed to. Other amendments were offered, but no action taken.

Mr. Morgan gave notice that he would on Friday ask the Senate to take up the bill to amend the act incorporating the Nicaragua Maritime Canal Company.

No Free Entry for Presents.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—The Treasury Department has informed Mr. James Kitson, president of the Iron and Steel Institute, Giedhow Hall, Leeds, England, that the law will not permit the free entry into this country of a number of valuable presents, such as silver cups, candelbras, etc., which the Institute desired to present to certain gentlemen of this country as testimonials of the appreciation for courtesies received on the occasion of the visit of the institute to the United States in October, 1890.

Mr. Bland's Talk About the Silver Bill.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4.—Mr. Bland has expressed his belief that the silver men in the House are strong enough to pass the Free Coinage bill on a direct vote. It is not expected that there will be more than 15 negative votes on the Democratic side, while 20 or 25 affirmative votes are looked for on the Republican side. Mr. Bland hopes to get the bill out of the committee by to-day or to-morrow.

ADRIFT ON ICE FLOES

Over One Hundred Fishermen in Great Peril.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE FEARED.

They Were Spearing Fish on Saginaw Bay When the Ice Cracked.

The Waves Are Running High and Only Cakes of Ice Between Them and Death. One Party Rescued Nearly Dead With Cold and Hunger—No Boats to Send After the Unfortunates.

SAGINAW, Mich., Feb. 4.—More than 100 fishermen are floating out on the angry waters of Saginaw Bay, with only cakes of ice between them and death.

The waves are running high, and there are fears that the ice may break and all the men be drowned.

The men formed a colony, who every winter build shanties on the frozen surface of the bay and catch fish for the eastern market. Since the middle of December there have been located on the ice in the bay 125 shanties, 150 men and a number of horses.

Early Monday evening a heavy wind, accompanied by rain and sleet, set in from the south. The wind steadily increased in violence until about midnight, when it assumed the proportions of a gale. It was especially severe on Saginaw Bay, and the greatest apprehension was felt in the cities by friends of the fishermen. During the night the ice broke up near the entrance to the river and huge masses began to float away toward the Charity Islands, in Lake Huron. To make the matter more serious the thermometer began falling and soon dropped to zero. No sound except the crunching of the vast cakes of ice, the breaking up of the fishers' shanties and the roar of the wind were heard throughout the night, and the frightend fishermen slowly drifting away from safety and help into the inky darkness expected every minute to be their last.

It was with the greatest difficulty that they maintained their positions on the slippery, rocky floes.

A Night of Peril.

In this perilous position, half frozen, and by fear appalled, the colonists remained until daybreak, only to find that between themselves and land there lay a dreary waste of water and greedy waves, threatening to engulf them outside the river. There were no boats to send after the unfortunates, and Providence alone stood between them and death.

All day they floated, but late in the afternoon one large floe, with 15 men and a horse, drifted into the mouth of Quanacasse Creek, and the men thereon reached the shore.

The men were nearly dead with cold, fatigue and hunger, but they were soon made comfortable at farm houses and sent to their homes. Over 100 men are still out on the bay, but the party rescued believed they will reach a point of safety before morning unless the wind should change.

LEGISLATION AT ALBANY.

ALBANY, Feb. 4.—In the Senate Mr. Sheard offered a resolution asking for the recall from the Assembly of the Stadler bill allowing societies to sell liquor after 1 a. m. He said that he had voted upon the bill under a misunderstanding. After some discussion the resolution passed.

In the Assembly the Ways and Means Committee introduced the annual Appropriation bill. It appropriates in full $8,842,306.67. The bill was placed on the special order for next Tuesday. The following bills were passed: To amend Chapter 67 of the Code of Civil Procedure, making lawyers more amenable to the law. WOULD WE COULD DO AS GOOD.

Elizabeth's Male Choristers Acquit Themselves in a Way to Make Plainfield Tenors and Basses Envious.

Not only was the gathering at the Casino, last evening, eminent in numbers but it was also great in quality. The people of this city do not buy dollar-seats for a glee club concert by strangers, unless they are particularly fond of music and judges of the good and the bad. Consequently when such an audience as that of last night heartily endorse soloists and chorus, it is an unusual and most enviable commendation.

The Elizabeth Glee Club under the patronage of Plainfield's society women, were the givers of last night's successful concert. They arrived on a special car and the 10:12 P. M. train was held over to take them back.

The soloists of the evening were Mrs. Gerrit Smith, soprano, and Miss Lilian Parslow, violinist. Mrs. Smith was rather unfortunate in her first selection—"Die Blauen Fruehlings Augen," by Franz Ries. She sings in creditable style, and her voice is good but somewhat reedy in quality, which fault is exaggerated by a German song. Those who had heard her before, knew that she could do better and she received an encore, singing Hildach's "My Love is a Weaver." Her second selection, "Fairy's Slumber Song," and the encore, Sapio's "Shepherd Song," were well rendered. Mrs. Smith was not accompanied in the Slumber Song by the composer, Homer N. Bartlett, as was stated on the programme, but by the regular accompanist, George G. Daland, who probably succeeded as well as the composer would have done, as his playing in that selection and also the other was delicate, well shaded and tasteful altogether.

Miss Parslow was entirely charming. It is so seldom that one finds a woman who can handle a violin artistically, that the pleasure is enhanced by the novelty. Her selections were an "Adagio" by Bruch, "Rondo et Capriccioso" by Saint-Saens, and as encores, "Tarantella" by Godard and Reber's "Berceuse." All being of different styles showed the varied capabilities of the performer. The tone was rich, her bowing clean and her phrasing excellent. Through the slow quiet movement of the "Adagio," the lively "Tarantella" and the dreamy "Lullaby," the audience was held breathless, and after each selection burst into a round of applause which showed their appreciation.

As to the club itself, Elizabeth may well be proud of it. It having been brought under perfect control by its leader, Arthur D. Woodruff, consequently the attacks were good, the articulation distinct and clear and the modulation of tone, excellent. The parts of the chorus are well balanced, though they might be improved with a little more first tenor, as it was somewhat overpowered at times by the other parts. The intonation was almost perfect, as was particularly evident in the unison passages and the close harmony of Mosenthal's. "Sailor's Song," which by the way was especially pleasing. Marschner's "Freedom in Song" and the "Battle Hymn" of Wagner, which opened and closed the evening's programme, were sung with vigor and in excellent style, Nessler's "Ave Maria" received an encore, as did also Hawley's "She Was But Seven," sung as "b" to Kochat's "Parting." Kierulf's Lullaby and Abt's "Spirit of the Woods," were sung with soprano obligato by Mrs. Smith. The latter was especially pleasing and received a recall.

The concert last evening was so novel to Plainfield and altogether enjoyable, that everybody hoped they might have in the near future the pleasure of listening to the Club again. There is already some talk of the Club's repeating their second concert here after it is given in Elizabeth. If the Plainfield people guarantee the Club's expenses they will be glad to appear again at The Casino. The members last evening, all expressed their appreciation of the fine audience that favored them and the warmth of its applause.

EYRAUD DIED GAME.

The Strangler of Paris Pays the Penalty of His Crime.

PARIS, Feb. 4.—Michael Eyraud, the strangler, who in July, 1889, murdered the notary Gouffe in Paris, was executed by the guillotine during the early morning.

Eyraud was not told until four hours before the time set for the execution that his appeal for clemency had been denied and that he must die at day break.

When M. Beauquese announced this, he added:

"Courage, Eyraud," to which the latter replied, "J'en aural" (I shall have it.)

All efforts by the chaplain, Abbe Faure, to administer religous consolation were declined by the condemned man and at the last moment, when the grim frame of the guillotine was all that strood between Eyraud and death, the murderer's nerves of steel and iron purpose served him in his final angry refusal to submit to the religious rites.

Just before the movable plank was pushed under the knife the murderer shouted in a husky but loud voice:

"Constans is an assassin—far more of an assassin than I."

These were the last words of the famous criminal, whose death, like his life, was a protest against the power and authority of the law.

A moment later the great knife dashed downward, and the murderer's head fell away from the body and dropped into the sawdust-filled basket beneath the platform.

Death came simultaneously with the blow of the knife.

The body was handed over to his relatives in a few hours after the execution.

The Jersey Central Knows Nothing of It.

A beautiful scheme (on paper) was made public yesterday through the incorporation at Albany, Monday, of the New York and New Jersey Terminal Railroad Company (capital $100,000—to be increased later if necessary) the object or main motive of which is to convey the passengers of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, Pennsylvania Railroad Company, and the Central New Jersey Railroad Company between the business centres of New York city and a point near Kearny, N. J., by a tunnel from that point under the Jersey meadows, the Hackensack River, Jersey City, Hoboken, and the North River. Yet the scheme does not seem to have commended itself to the railroad men who would naturally be supposed to be most interested in it. At the office of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company, it was stated that nothing was known of the plan; that there was nothing in it for that company, and furthermore that it was not feasible anyway. Mr. Maxwell, President of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, had never heard of it. Austin Corbin, President of the Long Island Railroad Company, was also in ignorance of such a job.

OBITUARY.

Jasper G. Cadmus.

Jasper G. Cadmus died at Force's Hotel at twenty minutes before seven o'clock last evening, after an illness of several months.

Mr. Cadmus was a native of Bayonne, Hudson county. He was born Oct. 13, 1813. When but a year old he was taken by his parents to Staten Island, near Sailor's Snug Harbor, where his father bought a farm. At the age of twenty-two he took command of a freighting schooner which the elder Cadmus presented to him. Fifteen subsequent years were spent in a seafaring life, during which time he prospered financially. Ill-health, however, compelled him to abandon the sea, and he entered the real estate business, and built up a flourishing trade in both New York and Philadelphia. After his removal to Plainfield, in 1869, he conducted a livery stable at the corner of Park avenue and East Second street, where is now Packer's furniture establishment. He was a man of considerable property. Besides the accumulations resulting from his own exertions he acquired a half-interest in his father's estate by the death of the father in 1854, sharing with his brother the inheritance of $50,000 left behind. In 1868, when he sold his Staten Island property, its value had greatly advanced. He invested considerable of his wealth in land on LaGrande avenue and other desirable residence portions of the city. Politically Mr. Cadmus was a Democrat, but in 1874, on March 16, he was elected by a Republican Common Council to succeed Nathan Rogers, a Republican who resigned. He was spoken of for re-nomination, but declined. He was a resident of Plainfield twenty-three years, and was highly esteemed by all. For the last six years he occupied a suite of rooms in Force's Hotel, on North avenue. He was twice married; his second wife survives him. He leaves three daughters and one son, all married. He has, it is understood, left his estate in the care of Eugene Laing and H. Mulford Estil.

Mr. Cadmus was a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association.

Lelia Is Found.

Lelia Highsmith, the seventeen-year-old protege of Councilman and Mrs. Elmore D. Moffett, who disappeared from her home so mysteriously last Friday, has been found through the medium of the story told exclusively in yesterday's PRESS and copied into the New York papers of this morning.

Lelia was discovered today at work in a hotel at Cranford. When she left the Moffett residence Friday, she took nothing with her except the clothing she had on, so she was compelled to seek shelter from Saturday's storm somewhere. Why she went to Cranford is not yet explained. A telegram to THE PRESS announcing that she is found, is all the information that has been received up to the hour of going to press. She walked all the way from Plainfield.

A New Surprise Party.

On Monday evening next Rice's new surprise party will present a new skit entitled "Never Better." It is a burlesque novelty that has been out but a short time and it is drawing good houses throughout the New England States. This burlesque is controlled by Manager Rice of "Evangeline" fame and he never attaches his name to anything that is not the best in his line of burlesque. Many old time favorites have been engaged for this production and the company is receiving good notice from leading papers.

The Keys Contest to be Promptly Heard.

In the Keys election contest, the Senate of New Jersey yesterday morning appointed a special committee consisting of Senators Marsh, Cramner and McDonald to hear the case and report to the senate Senator Keys is represented by the Hon. Allan McDermott, Speaker Bergen, and other prominent Democratic lawyers; and the contestant, Chas. A. Reed of North Plainfield, is represented by Craig A. Marsh of this city. The first hearing will take place early next week at Trenton.

Books of the Borough Overseer.

Through the instrumentality of J. W. A. Bauersachs, Overseer of the Poor of North Plainfield, the books of the Poor Department of the Borough have been thrown open to public inspection for the first time in the Borough's history. Those desiring to give or receive information that will assist the overseer in his work of discriminating among applicants and distributing alms to the worthy, have for one week a chance to examine the books at Mr. Bauersach's office, 24 Harmony street.

Will Not Shut Out the Reading.

President J. R. Maxwell of the Jersey Central Railroad denied yesterday that there was bad feeling between his road and the Reading in consequence of the latter shipping coal over the Lehigh Valley Road to Perth Amboy. It had been rumored that the Jersey Central in retaliation was about to annul its lease with the Reading and shut that company out of New York. Mr. Maxwell said that there was nothing in the report.

I HAVE been a sufferer from catarrh for 30 years. I found immediate relief in the use of Ely's Cream Balm. since using it I have not suffered a moment from headache, sore throat or loss of sleep, from which I previously suffered, caused by catarrh. I consider your Balm a valuable remedy.—R. G. Vassar, 56 Warren street, New York.

Ely's Cream Balm is worth its weight in gold as a cure for catarrh. One bottle cured me.—S. A. Lovell, Franklin, Pa.

ANOTHER WILL BROKEN.

The Grandson of Mrs. Hines Wins Again on Appeal.

Charles Hines, grandson of Emeline Hines, late of Dunellen, contested in the Orphans' Court of Middlesex county the will left by his grandmother, which bequeathed everything to her daughter. The grandson succeeded, the Orphans' Court declaring the will to be void on the ground of undue influence. The daughter, Mrs. Emeline Ham, whose husband is a prominent lawyer, and who was formerly the partner of Chief Justice Fuller of the United States Supreme Court, appealed the case. Yesterday at the opening of the Prerogative Court the Chancellor announced the opinion of that Court affirming the decision of the Orphans' Court in favor of the grandson. The result is that the will in favor of the daughter is set aside, and the way is now open for the grandson to prove a prior will by which he claims that all the property was left to him.

The counsel in the case were Craig A. Marsh for the grandson, and Jackson & Codington for the daughter. The testimony was taken at Plainfield and was of a very sensational character.

A Keen Nose for Smoke Saves a House.

A little daughter of Louis J. Denton, the Hillside avenue florist, heated a comfortable before the stove this morning to wrap about her and keep her warm while she was was dressing. When she threw it off it must have brushed against the stove, for five minutes later, when she had gone down stairs, it was burning briskly. Mr. Denton had a keen nose for smoke, and though the other members of the family declared that they smelt nothing burning and tried to persuade him not to leave the breakfast table, he hurried from room to room and found that the comfortable had set fire to the bed, which made such a roaring bonfire that he had great difficulty in extinguishing the blaze. Had the fire gained much more headway the high wind that prevailed must have swept the flames through not only the house but also the barns and large greenhouses, causing a very heavy loss. As it was, the damage will not exceed $50.

Dr. Fritts' Patient Still Improving.

Charles Tunison, of North Plainfield, who is being treated for consumption with Koch lymph, by Dr. J. T. Fritts, continues to develop favorable symptoms of better health. The story of his case has already been told in these columns. His brother, Raynor Tunison, died of consumption not many months ago. His mother's six sisters all died of the same disease. The patient has a sister who has also shown signs of consumption. He is nineteen years old and was at one time a clerk in Edsall's store. It is needless to say his case is of intense interest to the medical profession of the whole city.

—Malliet Bros., the celebrated opticians of New York and Jersey City, have rented parlors at 87 Park avenue, where free consultations may be had every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon from one to half past three o'clock.

PIGEONS ON THE WING.

Instances of the Extraordinary Speed They Acquire.

The power of pigeons on the wing is proverbial. All trained birds of this species have two qualifications in a marked degree. The first is speed, the second long and sustained powers of flight. This proposition can be amply demonstrated, and the following are some of the most remarkable records: On October 6, 1850, Sir John Ross dispatched a pair of young pigeons from Assistance Bay, a little west of Wellington Sound, and on October 13 a pigeon made its appearance at the dovecote in Ayrshire, Scotland, whence Sir John had the pair taken out. The distance direct between the two places is 2,000 miles. An instance is on record of a pigeon flying twenty-three miles in eleven minutes, and another flew from Rouen to Ghent, 150 miles, in an hour and a half. An interesting incident of flight is the case of a pigeon which, in 1845, fell wounded and exhausted at Vauxhall station, then the terminus of the Southwestern railway. It bore a message to the effect that it was one of three dispatched to the Duke of Wellington from Ichaboe Island, 2,000 miles away. The message was immediately sent to His Grace, and by him acknowledged. In a pigeon competition some years ago the winning bird flew from Ventnor to Manchester, 308 miles, at the rate of fifty miles an hour. As an experiment a trained pigeon was recently dispatched from a northern newspaper office with a request that it might be liberated for its return journey at 9:45 a. m. It reached home at 1:10 p. m., having covered in the meantime 148 miles, flying at the rate of forty miles an hour. In the north pigeons have long been used to convey messages between country houses and market towns, and in Russia they are now being employed to convey negatives of photographs taken in balloons. The first experiment of the kind was made from the cupola of the Cathedral of Isaac, and the subject photographed was the Winter Palace. The plates were packed in envelopes, impenetrable to light, and then tied to the feet of the pigeons, which safely and quickly carried them to the station at Volkovo. Here is another interesting instance of speed and staying power. The pigeons in question flew from Bordeaux to Manchester, and not only beat all existing records, but flew more than seventy miles further than any thing previously attempted by English flyers. The winning bird flew at the rate of 1,879 yards a minute, or over 64 miles an hour, and that for a distance of 142½ miles. The same club has flown birds distances of 613 and 625 miles. These latter, however, were several days in returning, and in their case the only wonder is that they could accomplish the distance at all. The following is still more interesting, as it entailed a race between birds and insects. A pigeon fancier of Hamme, in Westphalia, made a wager that a dozen bees liberated three miles from their hive would reach it in better time than a dozen pigeons would reach their cot from the same distance. The competitors were given wing at Rhynhern, a village nearly a league from Hamme, and the first bee finished a quarter of a minute in advance of the first pigeon, three other bees reached the goal before the second pigeon, the main body of both detachments finishing almost simultaneously an instant or two later. The bees, too, may be said to have been handicapped in the race, having been rolled in flour before starting for purposes of identification.—Cornhill Magazine.

THE GIRL WE LIKE BEST.

Some of the Qualities That Endear Her to Mankind.

There is a type of girl that every body likes. Nobody can tell exactly why, but after you have met her you turn away to some other woman and say: "Don't you like Miss Grosvenor?" Now the reason you like her is a subtle one; without knowing all about her, you feel just the sort of girl she is.

She is the girl who is not "too bright and good" to be able to find joy and pleasure all over the world.

She is the girl who appreciates the fact that she can not always have the first choice of every thing in the world.

She is the girl who is not aggressive and does not find joy in inciting aggressive people.

She is the girl who has tact enough not to say the very thing that will cause the skeleton in her friend's closet to rattle its bones.

She is the girl who, whether it is warm or cold, clear or stormy, finds no fault with the weather.

She is the girl who, when you invite her any place, compliments you by looking her best.

She is the girl who is sweet and womanly to look at and listen to, and who doesn't strike you as a poor imitation of a demi-mondaine.

She is the girl who makes this world a pleasant place because she is so pleasant herself.

And, by the by, when you come to think of it, isn't she the girl who makes you feel she likes you and, therefore, you like her?—Chicago Journal.

The Power of Advertising.

—A noble of high standing in St. Petersburg made a bet that by advertising the merest nonsense he could get money sent him from all parts of the empire. He inserted an advertisement in the papers that for the sum of one ruble he would forward the sender a powder which, if put in luke warm water, would breed a dozen of chicks. Rubles were sent to him by the thousand. He won the bet, but he had to pay an equivalent in returning the ruble to the senders and giving them a piece of advice.

—A novelty in the washing-machine line has just been invented. It is connected with a child's swing, and after the soiled garments, with the proper quantity of soap shavings, have been put in the tub, a child is placed in the swing, which is set in motion, and moves automatically, and turns the washing-machine.

TALK WITH A LION-TAMER.

How He Acquires Complete Mastery Over His Savage Pets.

The lion-tamer was a highly intelligent young man, who, born in the United States, went to Germany in his youth. In Hamburg he associated with a leading firm, the Jamrach of Germany, and so, having animals in his charge, became familiar with handling them. Traveling for the business, he made frequent visits to Africa and Asia, collecting animals. In a commercial sense, considering lions and tigers as cattle to be bought and sold, he became thoroughly acquainted with their ways and instincts. Certainly it was the only school where such quiet mastery over savage animals could be acquired.

"It is a very long business," said Mr. Daring to a writer in Harper's Weekly; "all my animals have been two years in training. Why, it takes two months to make a lion sit in a chair and stay there. I can not vaunt general intelligence in lions; it is rather individual. I have had some five young lions, superb in body, that had no brains. Not wicked or cross, but simply stupid. It was a tendency to forget to-morrow all that had been acquired for months before. But I can't always tell. Leo is my best pupil. He never was ugly, but once I gave him up and sent him off, he was so dull; then took him to school again; and I know no lion second to him now in intelligence and docility. This is the point. A lion doesn't want to do things. He just doesn't want to. Now you must make him. Punish him and you make him your enemy; afraid of you, and he gets worse, no better. I coax him, and talk to him in English, for English is the best language for command. The see-saw and the velocipede are difficult tricks. Not one lion in a thousand can be taught to keep his balance. They mostly tumble off. Perhaps in that performance their highest intelligence is called into play. The velocipede requires a careful lion, and I have just the right one. It is nice work to get the exact pose and to keep it; but what gave me the most trouble is the chariot performance. A lion must have had an original contempt for that kind of business. You see I am busy harnessing up one lion while the others are perfectly free. The art has been to make the rest of them come up of their own accord. For months I had one lion tearing round alone and the rest scattered about. Now they all come up to time. They don't want to, but they must. It is patience, kindness, making them not afraid of me—for I am not afraid of them, that has done the business. I have rehearsals all the time, for the animals must be constantly at work, so as not to forget. The whelps are coming on fast; one, I think, shows great intelligence. I feed eight pounds of beef a day for the big ones and six for the smaller ones, and they take their supper after the performance."

"You can not reward your lions for good behavior like you would a horse, with a lump of sugar or a carrot?"

"No; they despise sugar, but love beef tea. But if they behave very well I give them during the performance a little tidbit of meat, and Nero would think I was not doing the right thing with him if he didn't get his morsel. My whips indicate the positions for the animals. You could not hurt a lion who has a tough hide, with a lash, but a whip acts as a protection. You might belabor a lion with a big stick and he would not feel it. But he does not fancy a stick, the point of which, like a spear, is held in his direction; so if one threatened me I could keep him off. An act I had to give up was where a lion rose and put his forepaws on my shoulders. The claws are very sharp, and any display of endearment would cut through my coat and wound my shoulders, and a new coat every night was too expensive. All the lions are fond of me and we respect one another."

An Unequal Struggle.

A QUIET GAME.

Women Are as Fond of It as Men, But They Want to Win.

The number of fashionable women who have resolved themselves into little clubs for the enjoyment and iniquities of poker playing is something calculated to rend with woe and distress the heart of the censorious reformer. I know personally of a round dozen of such little coteries and of nearly as many more where both men and women do congregate, writes a correspondent. Our National game, for undeniably poker is that, grows daily in popularity, and at some of these "ladies' poker clubs" startlingly large sums are lost and won.

These little gatherings always take place at the private residence of one of the members, and there are no by-laws nor constitutions attached. In all of the well-regulated ones, however, two stringent rules hold sway, and they are: "Thou shalt not borrow," and "Thou shalt pay up at the time." The settlements may be made in cash or by check, and anent the latter a funny little story was told last winter. Mrs. B. lost $106 to Mrs. H., and gave her a check for the amount. It occurred to Mrs. B.'s husband to look over his wife's returned checks one day, and there he saw this check, which had been duly cashed. When he amazedly asked Mrs. B. the why and wherefore, she, in an unprepared and unguarded moment, said she had loaned the money to Mrs. H., for she would not for the world have her indulgent husband know that she was guilty of the very fault for which she took him so severely to task.

Not long afterward Mr. H. and Mr. B., who were Wall street opponents, had a nasty little row, and Mr. B. taunted Mr. H. (who really is a miserly fellow) with keeping Mrs. H. so "short" on pin money that she was forced to borrow money from a woman friend, money she could never repay. As a consequence of this accusation the whole affair transpired, and even the torrid heats of last summer were not ardent enough to thaw out the general coldness which prevails among this worthy quartet. If I should write down here the names of the principal women who give to some feminine poker clubs, the distinctive cachet of beauty, swelldom and wealth, it would creat a breeze so sturdy and so devastating as to be worthy of the name of a social cyclone.—N. Y. Press.

HAMMOCK RIDERS.

Queer Ways of Traveling in the Madeira Islands.

Funchal, the capital of Madeira, stretches for nearly a mile along the shore, a number of the smaller streets and lanes extending up the steep slope and the hill behind. The streets were formerly very dirty, but since the open gutters have been nearly all carried under ground, they have been rendered very clean, and are also well paved.

The houses of the lower classes seldom exceed one story in height, but are well kept as regards the exterior, being neatly whitewashed, while the residences of the wealthy are large, handsome buildings.

The favorite mode of traveling in Maderia is in hammocks, although horses and small open carriages with their attendant arrieiros, can be hired in Funchal at any time. Sledges, or carrinhos are used on the steep Mount Road above Funchal. They are like a low armchair made of wicker-work, padded and cushioned, with a platform for the feet, and set on wooden runners. The car is impeled by one or two men, according to its size, and guided with strong throngs of hide. The sensation of rushing down the Incline from 2,000 feet above the sea in about three minutes is most enjoyable, and it is very rarely that any accident happens.

The costume of the peasantry is picturesque, and consists of an embroidered bodice, the white chemisette, collar and short sleeves, being fastened with gold link buttons, finely worked; of a striped petticoat, closely woven in bright colors, and a blue or scarlet baize cape, with scalloped falling collar, bound with a contrasting color—the number and shape of the scallops varying in the different parishes. The peculiar pointed cap is worn by both sexes.—N. Y. Journal.

Cold Weather in Nebraska.

OMAHA, Neb., Feb. 3.—Despatches report extreme cold weather throughout the State, trains being held on nearly all the State lines. A special from Brainerd, Neb., says: Last night was the coldest of the season, the thermometer registering 15 degrees below zero. The Sioux City train on the Union Pacific was stalled in a snow drift, two miles from this town and detained there eleven hours.

ORIGIN OF "LA MARSEILLAISE."

Dramatic Circumstances Attending the Production of the Famous French Air.

"La Marseillaise," the national air of France, is a song which inspires the hearts of Frenchmen as no other music can. It was composed by Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle, a French poet, player, soldier and singer, in 1792, and of this notable production Carlyle wrote in 1836:

"The thought which works voiceless in this black-browed mass (the "Marseillaise"), an inspired Tyrtæn Colonel, Rouget de Lisle, whom the earth still holds, has translated into grim melody and rhythm; into his hymn or march of the Marseillaise, luckiest musical composition ever promulgated, the sound of which will make the blood tingle in men's veins; and whole armies and assemblages will sing it, with eyes weeping and burning, with hearts defiant of Death, Despot and Devil."

The story of the origin of this song is dramatic, as it is told by Lamartine. "There was a young officer in garrison at Strasburg, named Rouget de Lisle," says the historian. "He was born at Lons-le-Saunier, in the Jura, that country of reverie and energy, as mountainous countries always are. This young man loved war like a soldier—the revolution like a thinker. He charmed with his verses and music the slow, dull garrison life. Much in request from his two-fold talent as musician and poet, he visited the house of Dietrich, an Alsatian patriot, on intimate terms. Dietrich's wife and young daughters shared in his patriotic feelings, for the revolution was advancing toward the frontiers, just as the affections of the body always commence at the extremities. They were very partial to the young officer, and inspired his heart, his poetry and his music. They executed the first of his ideas hardly developed; confidantes of the earliest flights of his genius.

"It was in the winter of 1792, and there was a scarcity in Strasburg. The house of Dietrich was poor and the table humble, but there was always a welcome for Rouget de Lisle. The young officer was there from morning till night, like a son or a brother of the family. One day when there were only some coarse bread and slices of ham on the table Dietrich, looking with calm sadness at De Lisle, said to him: 'Plenty is not seen at our feasts; but what matter, if enthusiasm is not wanting at our civic fetes and courage in our soldiers' hearts? I have still a bottle of wine left in my cellar. Bring it,' he added, addressing one of his daughters, 'and we will drink to liberty and our country. Strasburg is shortly to have a patriotic ceremony and De Lisle must be inspired by these last drops to produce one of those hymns which convey to the soul of the people the enthusiasm which suggested it.' The young girls applauded, fetched the wine, filled the glasses of their old father and the young officer until the wine was exhausted. It was midnight and very cold. De Lisle was a dreamer; his heart was moved, his head was heated. The cold seized on him, and he went staggering to his lonely chamber, endeavoring by degrees to find inspiration in the palpitations of his citizen heart; and on his small claviocrd, now composing the air before the words and now the words before the air, combined them so intimately in his mind that he could never tell which was first produced, the air or the words, so impossible did he find it to separate the poetry from the music, and the feeling from the impression. He sang every thing—wrote nothing.

"Overcome by this Divine inspiration, his head fell sleeping on his instrument, and he did not awake until daylight. The song of the overnight returned to his memory with difficulty, like the recollections of a dream. He wrote it down and then ran to Dietrich. He found him in his garden. His wife and daughter had not yet risen. Dietrich aroused them, called together some friend as fond as himself of music, and capable of executing De Lisle's composition; Dietrich's eldest daughter accompanied them. Rouget sang. At the first verse all countenances turned pale, at the second tears flowed, at the last enthusiasm burst forth. The hymn of the country was found. Alas! it was also destined to be the hymn of terror. The unfortunate Dietrich went a few months afterward to the scaffold to the sound of the notes produced at his own fireside, from the heart of a friend, and the voices of his daughters.

"The new song, executed some days afterward in Strasburg, flew from city to city in every public orchestra. Marseilles adopted it to be sung at the opening and the close of the sitting of its clubs. The Marseillaise spread it all over France by singing it everywhere on their way. Hence the name of Marseillaise. De Lisle's old mother, a royalist and religious, alarmed at the effect of her son's voice, wrote to him: 'What is this revolutionary hymn sung by bands of brigands who are traversing France, and with which our name is mingled?' De Lisle himself, proscribed as a royalist, heard it, and shuddered as it sounded on his ear, whilst escaping by some of the wild passes of the Alps. 'What do they call that hymn?' he inquired of his guide. 'The Marseillaise,' replied the peasant. It was thus he learned the name of his own work. The arm turned against the hand that forged it. The Revolution, insane, no longer recognized its own voice. * * * It was the fire-water of the Revolution which instilled into the senses and the soul of the people the intoxication of battle."

France has other songs of patriotism, but only one Marseillaise.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DROWNED LIKE RATS

Two More Horrible Disasters In Pennsylvania.

MINERS CAUGHT IN A FLOOD.

Seventeen Perish at Jeanesville and Three Near Nanticoke.

Somebody to Blame for Both Accidents—Narrow Escape of a Large Number of Men—More Heartrending Scenes by Wives and Children—Works Will Fast Before the Bodies are Recovered.

WHITE HAVEN, Pa., Feb. 5.—At 11 o'clock in the morning, while Charles Boyle and Patrick Coll of Leviston were engaged in drilling a hole in the chamber in No. 10 slope of J. C. Haydon & Co.'s mine at Jeanesville, they broke into the old No. 8 slope, which had been idle for five years and which had been flooded to the mouth with water.

William Brislin, a driver, was close by and he cried out: "Boys, for God's sake, run for your lives or you will be drowned!" In a moment later the water came and Brislin barely escaped with his life. Besides him, six others escaped. They are: Henry Gibbon, John Neline, John and Charles Boyle, William Coll and Patrick Coll. The water rose rapidly, and before any attempt could be made to rescue the other workmen the slope, which is 624 feet deep, was flooded to the mouth and they were caught and drowned.

The Death Roll.

The following is a list of those who lost their lives:

Edward Gallagher, Henry Ball, married; James Griffith, married; Joseph Matuscowitz, Lawrence Reed, Wasil Finko, Joseph Orsok, Bernard McClosky, John Tomasoki, Patrick Kelly, Thomas Jake, John Barnes, James Balack, Michael Smith, Joseph Ward, Samuel Porter, and Mike Polosk.

Mothers and Children Crying.

The news of the disaster caused great excitement, and the mouth of the slope was soon thronged with the families and relatives of the workmen and others. The scenes, when it was positively known who were lost, were heartrending.

Wives implored piteously of the miners standing by, who knew only too well the fatal result, to save their husbands from the terrors of a watery grave, little children crying for their papas, and relatives praying for the safety of their loved ones. The sorrowing wives, relatives and friends were finally convinced that there was no hope of rescuing any of the men, and were led away from the scene of this new mining horror by sympathetic hands to their homes.

Trying to Recover the Bodies.

A large force of men was immediately put to work pumping out the water. How long it will take is a question, since no definite idea of the volume of water can be ascertained. Some of the miners say it will take four weeks before the bodies can be recovered, but others incline to the opinion that it will take much longer.

A Race for Life.

Brislin, one of the men who escaped, said to a reporter: "I was waiting at the bottom of the slope for a trip to come out. Then a frightful blast of wind came and knocked me down the gangway. The wind blew my lamp out. I tried to run for the slope, but stumbled and fell. Then John Boyle and John Neems came running out. Neems' lamps was burning and by the aid of this we got to the slope. The water came pouring after us as we ran. When we got to the slope the light went out. We clambered up as fast as we could and the water came rushing after us, rising very quickly. In five minutes the water raised 208 yards to the mouth of the slope, the pitch of which is 83 degrees."

Probably Caused by Neglect.

Many reasons are advanced as to the cause of the great disaster. Some charge it to neglect to notify the workmen of the dangerous proximity of the water, as only a few of the old miners knew of the presence of the great body of water in the old slope. Even those that knew of it had no idea that the workings were driven as near to the water as they were.

The civil engineer in charge of the Jeanesville mines was a man from Pottsville named La Fevre Womelsdorf.

AND STILL ANOTHER.

Three Men Lose Their Lives in a Mine Near Nanticoke.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 5.—A cave-in occurred in No. 3 slope at Grand Tunnel, opposite Nanticoke, and three men are shut up in the mine.

In an abandoned part of the mine, which was closed, was a great body of water. In the adjoining chamber a number of miners were at work blasting. An unusually heavy charge was fired, and so thinned the wall that the heavy volume of water burst its way through.

Some of the miners were given warning, and they ran for their lives ahead of the rushing flood. Three miners, John Riner, Mike Shelauk and William Cragle did not hear the warning in time, and were closed in in their chambers. The men were all married and leave large families.

The subterranean workings, covering scores of acres, are rapidly filling with water.

The British Minister Surprised.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The attention of Sir Julian Pauncefote was called to the interview with him on the Supreme Court decision published in London papers. Sir Julian was greatly surprised and at once indignantly exclaimed that had was not interviewed by anybody on the subject.

HELD ON THREE CHARGES.

A Mother and Daughter the Victims of a Religious Fanatic.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 5.—David M. Daniels is in jail here, the two chief witnesses against him being the woman who was supposed to be his wife and her 17-year-old daughter. Joseph Evans, a well known Welsh citizen here, is the prosecutor, charging that Daniels has a wife and family in Wales.

At the hearing the woman testified that she was the wife of Charles Evans, of Pittsburg, Pa., and that Daniels, who boarded with them had induced her to elope and come to Uniontown. Some time ago she discovered that Daniels was having improper relations with her daughter, and the latter confessed to this at the hearing.

Daniels was remanded to jail to await trial on three charges. Since being in Uniontown he has been an exhorter at the church services. He got behind in his accounts with the Metropolitan Insurance Company and his brethren in the church indorsed a note for him for $50, which, when due, they had to pay.

WORLD'S FAIR TROUBLES.

Director-General Davis Threatens to Resign Unless Congress Pays His Salary.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Director-General Davis, of the World's Fair, has given it out plainly that if no appropriation for his salary is made by Congress he will resign, as he does not propose to be simply a salaried officer of the local directory. He says he is an officer of the National Commission, and not of the local directory, and, should Mr. Candler's attempt to denationalize his position be successful, he will retire.

About the reduction of the appropriation no one is worrying greatly. The commission already has money enough to hold the session it has contemplated in April.

George Pangolo, the native Egyptian, who planned and constructed the "Street in Cairo," for the Paris Exposition, called on Vice-President Bryan, and offered to reproduce it at the coming fair at his own expense.

ROMANTIC ELOPEMENT.

The Girl's Mother Tried in Vain to Break Up the Engagement.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 5.—A romantic elopement at Sewickly has just come to light. The principals are Walter Eaton, a young New York merchant, and Miss Maud Lillienthal, of Yonkers.

It appears that the girl's mother recently tried to break up the engagement between the twain, owing to the intervention of a millionaire suitor. Miss Lillienthal, on Monday evening, stole out of the house to meet her fiancee. Her mother followed her, but was detained by Eaton until her daughter got into a cab, when he also got into it, and the lovers got married near Pittsburg. They subsequently secured the forgiveness of the girl's mother. Both are said to be well known in New York society.

Stanley's Manager Injured.

GENEVA, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Major Pond, Stanley's manager, while on the way in a special car to this city to fill a lecture engagement, was thrown by a sudden lurch of the car against a glass door, cutting his face severely. The accident occurred near Syracuse. A surgeon was procured at Auburn, who dressed the wounds and came to Geneva with the party. Major Pond, with a disfigured face, took tea in the car with President Adams and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley. He will doubtless soon recover.

Ex-Gov. Beaver Given a Hearing.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 5.—General Beaver and Quartermaster-General Hill were given a hearing by the House Appropriations Committee on the bill to reimburse the general for the $300,000 borrowed by the State to relieve the distress at Johnstown. The two gentlemen explained the manner in which the money was expended, and there is no doubt of favorable action on the bill.

Judicial Nominations.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Gov. Russell, at a meeting of the Governor and Council, appointed the Hon. Henry K. Braley, of Fall River, to be Judge of the Superior Court, vice Lathrop, promoted to the Supreme bench, and Mr. John H. Burke, of Boston, Judge of the Municipal Court, vice Curtis, deceased. These nominations, under the rules, lie over for a week before being voted upon.

Pennsylvania Miners Appeal for Safety

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 5.—Gov. Pattison has received a memorial, dated Scottdale appealing to him and the members of the Legislature for better protection for the safety of the coal miners of the State. It is signed by J. R. McFae, Master Workman and President of the United Mine Workers of America; Robert Katchorn, Secretary-Treasurer; Peter P. Wise, District Master Workman, and C. M. Parker, Secretary.

First Break in a Miners' Strike.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 5.—The first break in the River miners' strike has occurred. Three hundred men in mine No. 4, Turtle Creek, have gone to work after nine months' idleness. The company has won.

WASHINGTON TOPICS

Senator Stewart's Plan to Bring Up the Silver Bill.

A DIRECT ISSUE WITH THE HOUSE

He Introduces a Free Coinage Amendment to the Pension Bill.

The Senate Passes the Fortifications Appropriation Bill—Mr. McAdoo Talks About Respectfully in the House—The Farmers' Alliance Presidents Holding a Conference.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The complicated state of affairs on the Senate Silver bill in the House Committee on Coinage, Weights and Measures has caused Senator Stewart to resort to a device sometimes practised in Congress to secure speedy action on a bill.

Mr. Stewart has come to the conclusion that the fate of the Silver bill is jeopardized in the House Committee, and in order to prevent unfavorable action on it he made a movement to take it out of that committee by submitting the Silver bill as an amendment intended to be proposed to the Pension Appropriation bill. The amendment was referred to the Appropriation Committee, and whether the committee agrees to report it favorably or not Mr. Stewart can call it up in the Senate while the Pension bill is under discussion.

If it should be passed by the Senate (and there is every reason to believe it will be), the amendment, as part of the Pension bill, will be sent to the House, and there it can be called up and voted on as a part of the Pension bill. Jurisdiction can in this way be taken from the Coinage Committee.

IN SENATE AND HOUSE.

The Fortifications and Military Academy Appropriations Bills Passed.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—In the Senate, the credentials of Jacob M. Gallinger as a Senator from New Hampshire were presented and filed.

There were several heated passages between Messrs. Dawes and Cockrell, owing to the latter's severe criticism of Mr. Edward Atkinson's views and actions on the silver and other economic questions. Mr. Dawes defended Mr. Atkinson as one of his constituents, although he was of the opposite political affiliation. The only effect of the discussion was to amuse the Senate.

The Fortifications Appropriation bill was then considered, and a number of committee amendments were agreed to and the bill was passed.

The Military Academy Appropriation bill was reported and passed, and the Pension Appropriation bill was taken up, but went over as unfinished business.

In the House, J. A. Owenby, the silver pool witness, was, by resolution, discharged from the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms.

In Committee of the Whole, on the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill, Mr. McAdoo said that he highly approved of the letter of the Secretary of State to Mr. Baker, of New York, on Canadian reciprocity, in which he stated that the contention of the Canadian statesman that the United States was anxious for partial reciprocity, was untrue. Continuing, he said that the United States should have unrestricted trade and commercial union, or that it should have no commercial dealings with Canada. The bill was then laid aside with favorable recommendations, and the committee proceeded to a consideration of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill.

After a long discussion the committee arose, and the Diplomatic Appropriation bill was passed.

Alliance Presidents in Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The presidents of the State organizations of the National Farmers' Alliance are holding a meeting here, the purpose being to formulate certain measures to be presented to Congress, and to map out some feasible plan for disseminating the literature of the council for educational purposes.

New Jersey Lawmakers.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 5.—The House has adjourned for a week. Bills were passed as follows: Establishing a uniform standard of weights and measures; regulating the investment of moneys of the Firemen's Relief Association; appropriating $4000 for the expenses of the State Labor Bureau; providing for the appointment of six Commissioners of Deeds for each township; making the wine standard of 231 cubic inches to the gallon the standard for milk.

Excursionists Off for California.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—A vestibule train of seven Pullman sleepers left here over the Hoosac Tunnel route, bearing about 160 persons upon the excursion of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange to California. About 25 of the party came from New York.

MARRIED ONCE A WEEK.

Baltimore Couple Practice a New Game on Charity Organizations.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 5.—The charity organizations report a remarkable case of roguery in which a couple were married once a week or oftener and their children baptized dozens of times to impose upon the charitable.

A middle-aged man appeared in the study of a South Baltimore clergyman last week and said he had been living with a woman not his wife for some years and that they had four children. He was now destitute and if assisted he would begin life anew and give the woman and children his name.

The clergyman acted at once, appealed to the generosity of his parishioners, and a sum of money was contributed to the bride and groom as soon as the ceremony was performed. Then the two reformed sinners said they would like to have their children baptized. This brought forth another array of presents.

A day or two later the case excited suspicion. Inquiry disclosed the fact that the couple had been married 22 times, and that their children had been baptized 27 times. They worked their dodge in different parts of the town and in neighboring cities. They have skipped.

A TIE-UP THREATENED.

Over 38,000 Men May Get Out on the Pennsylvania System.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 5.—The probability of a tie-up on the vast Pennsylvania system is increasing. The trouble between the company and its men has reached a crisis, and if the matter is not settled by next Monday the men will strike—if their threats mean anything.

The men declare they will tolerate no further delay, and that parleying of officials must cease. It was hoped that the meetings of the Superintendents of the Northwest and Southwest systems would result in something decisive, but when the Superintendents adjourned they refused to make known what had been done.

The workmen accept this as evidence that the company's policy is one of delay, and are exasperated thereby. The Committee on Grievances say that the disaffected men number 38,000, and are determined to secure considerate treatment. They are asking for an increase of wages, and engineers, firemen, brakemen, switchmen and conductors are all involved.

TO-NIGHT'S BATTLE.

Dixon and McCarthy in Fine Trim for the Featherweight Contest.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The 25-round glove contest for the featherweight championship between Cal McCarthy, of Jersey City, and George Dixon, the colored boxer, of Boston, will take place to-night in the hall of the Purit an Athletic Club, Long Island City, for a purse of $4,000 and a side bet between Joe Early and Tom O'Rourke, the respective backers, of $2,000, making a total prize of $8,000.

Both men are reported to be in the finest possible condition, and as they are known to be high-sinewed and thoroughly game, a great contest is expected.

Tickets cost $10, and the sale up to this afternoon indicates that about 4,000 persons will attend.

Potters Will Not Be Dictated To.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 5.—The manufacturing potters have given out the statement that their reason for the lockout is as follows: They say that within the past two years the reduction in the prices of their goods has amounted to 25 per cent. They say they had two objects in view. One was to equitably readjust the wages in proper conformity to the selling prices and the absolute necessities of their business, the second was to take the control of their business in their own hands, and out of the meddlesome and mischievous control of professional agitators.

Bills to be Reported at Albany.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The Senate General Laws Committee will report the drafted men's bill; the bill punishing town assessors who undervalue property; the bill providing for the increase or decrease of corporation directors, and the bill for the legal adjudication of claims of employes for improving personal property.

Connecticut's Tangle.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 5.—The olive branch of peace is waving over the warring factions in the Connecticut Legislature to-day. At last the Senate and House have agreed for the first time. They have appointed a conference committee to consider the trouble over the State officers.

A Young Woman Garroted.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Miss Jeannette Decker, a pretty girl of 18, who lives with her parents at No. 508 Eighth avenue, was garroted at 58th street and Sixth avenue by an unknown man last evening, and now lies in a precarious condition at St. Luke's Hospital.

His Arm Torn from His Body.

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 5.—Joseph Dougherty, of 217 New street, was the victim of a terrible accident while adjusting a belt in the saddlery and harness manufactory of the Sargent Manufacturing Company. His arm was caught in the machinery and was torn from his body.

Spinners Desert Their Mules.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Feb. 5.—Several of the striking spinners at the Acushnet Mills who returned to their work Monday, have since deserted their mules. They claim that it is impossible to work to advantage under the condition of things.

The Clerks Win Their Libel Suit.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The jury in the libel suit of Bass and McLaughlin, ex-postoffice clerks, against the Courier, returned a verdict of $500 for the plaintiffs.

THE TORIES TRIUMPH

Gladstone's Religious Disabilities Bill Defeated.

CROWDS THRONGED THE HOUSE.

The Liberal Statesman in Fine Form and Made an Eloquent Speech.

An Electric Lamp Bursts and Causes Havoc at a Banquet—King Humbert Makes Another Effort to Secure a Rumor—An Insane Priest Creates a Scene in Ireland—More Deaths at Oporto.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Mr. Gladstone's motion to proceed to a second reading of the bill to remove religious disabilities, was rejected in the House of Commons by a vote of 256 to 223.

Mr. Gladstone was in fine form, and throughout his speech advocating the second reading of his bill he showed no signs of weakness or wavering, and was apparently as fresh when he sat down as when he began. A full house listened with the closest attention, and "Hear, hear," and murmurs of satisfaction greeted his statement that he was actuated by no thought of disturbing the Act of Settlement or the religious position of the sovereign.

The Tories had evidently come prepared to open their heaviest battery on Mr. Gladstone's proposition and to take advantage of the feeling which it had aroused, both among the churchmen and non-conformists. Some surprise was felt that Home Secretary Matthews, the Roman Catholic member of the Cabinet, should be present, under the circumstances, and listen in silence to the fierce attacks upon his faith.

While the Tory speakers abstained from religion or dogmatic argument, they insisted that the security of the empire demanded that the established and fundamental institutions should not be tampered with. They referred to the recent Irish elections as a proof of the political power of the priests over the electorate in that island.

SENSATIONAL ACCIDENT.

An Electric Lamp Bursts During a Banquet Given by the Marquis of Bute.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—A sensational accident is reported from Cardiff, Wales. The Marquis of Bute, who is Mayor of Cardiff, and who is also one of the richest property owners in that city and vicinity, gave a grand banquet to celebrate the opening of the steel works just founded there.

An electric lamp burst during the banquet and ignited the costly decorations. Great consternation followed, as the fire could not be prevented from spreading.

The 400 guests succeeded in making their escape, the Marquis behaving with much coolness and bravery.

The fire was subdued after the hall had been partly destroyed, and the banquet, of course, was abandoned.

An Insane Priest.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—Belfast, Ireland, had a remarkable sensation during the day, in the spectacle of a Roman Catholic priest, entirely divested of clothing, dancing in the principal streets, while he uttered incoherent exclamations to the effect that he was King David, dancing before the Ark of God. A crowd gathered, and some of them, not appreciating the man's evidently unreasoning condition were about to do him serious violence, when he was rescued by friends, who took charge of him, and called in the medical assistance of which he was badly in need. He proved to be violently insane.

The Liberals Forced by Parnell.

DUBLIN, Feb. 5.—The Express says that McCarthy has been compelled by Parnell to adopt the attitude which the latter vainly urged him to assume in November. The paper also says that the signs multiply that Parnell has forced the Liberals hand, and that the Liberals intend to "stand or fall by a drastic sweeping home rule scheme." It is also stated that the McCarthyites are in favor of dropping Timothy Healy.

Sees No Reason for Keeping Quiet.

BERLIN, Feb. 5.—In replying to an address presented by a delegation from Aix-la-Chapelle, ex-Chancellor Bismarck is represented to have said that he saw no reason for his refraining from giving expression to his views on public affairs.

The Number of Slain Increases.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—The count of the slain in Saturday's insurrection at Oporto increases daily. The number of killed is now reported at 100. Five hundred of the insurgents are in prison awaiting their fate.

Soldiers Retaliate.

Senator Keys Will Keep His Seat.

(From The Newark Evening News.)

Fortunately for the dignity of the Senate, Mr. Keys, of Somerset county, does not share the fine sense of humor which prompted the President of the Senate to put him on the Elections Committee. Mr. Keys has refused to act on the contest for his own seat, and a special committee has been appointed to go through the formality of keeping out the ambitious Republican who wants the place. Of course Mr. Keys will keep his seat, but he will do so with more decorum than he would if he were capable of carrying on such a "joke" as Senator Adrian perpetrated in putting Keys and McDonald, of all men in the Senate, on the Elections Committee.

The Papers All Oppose the Evil.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Just now the whole cry is against Winter racing as if that was the great evil. It isn't. It is no greater evil than Summer racing, except that there is a little more cruelty about it, and not so much more either. The whole business is wrong. Judge VanSyckel was right when he said that the whole influence of the race tracks was "for evil and for evil only" and Judge Dixon was right in saying that they are "pest holes." Not one honest New Jersey newspaper is in favor of allowing this giant evil a foothold anywhere in this State.

HOW SHE WAS FOUND.

Lelia Highsmith Had Been Working as a Domestic in the Van Court Inn.

The whereabouts of Lelia Highsmith, the young girl who has been missing from Plainfield, was discovered at 1 o'clock yesterday, and published in THE PRESS of the same date.

Harry W. Pope, proprietor of the Van Court Inn in Roselle, came to the County Clerk's office in Elizabeth and informed Assistant County Clerk Moffett, with whose family the girl had lived, that Miss Highsmith was at his place working as a domestic.

She reached the hotel on last Friday soaking wet and said she had tramped all the way from Plainfield in the storm.

She was rather excited and said she could no longer live at home doing nothing, but wanted to earn her own living. She declined to say who her relatives were, but asked for employment in the hotel.

Mr. Pope put her to work on trial, and was highly satisfied at the way she performed her duties. When he heard yesterday through THE PRESS story about Miss Highsmith's disappearance he at once identified his servant as the missing girl. He questioned her and she admitted that she was Miss Highsmith.

When Mr. Moffett called at the hotel last evening to take Lelia home with him, the girl positively refused to see him, and told Mr. Pope very emphatically that she would rather go anywhere than back to Plainfield. After arguing for a long time, however, Mr. Pope managed to induce her to come down to the dining room to listen to what Mr. Moffett had to say. Mr. Pope left her in the dining room while he went to the parlor to call Mr. Moffett. When Mr. Moffett reached the dining room, however, the girl had disappeared. This somewhat disgusted him, and he left the hotel. Mr. Pope promised before he left, however, not to let the girl leave the house until somebody called for her. After telegraphing to Mr. Blazier, the girl's stepfather, of his daughter's safety, Mr. Moffett went home. Mr. Blazier called at the hotel to take her home last night, but after a talk with Mr. Pope he decided to leave her there for the present.

Just after the departure of Mr. Moffett, Mr. Pope went in search of the girl. He found her in her room, weeping. In her hand she had a letter from Mrs. Moffett, which a messenger had just given to her. The letter contained a great deal of motherly advice and ended with a rebuke to the girl for the anxiety she had caused her friends by her sudden departure. Mr. Pope talked with the girl for nearly an hour, trying to induce her to return home, but it was of no avail. She positively refused to go and begged to be allowed to stay and earn her living.

After Mr. Moffett left the hotel last evening the girl told Mr. Pope that her reason for leaving Plainfield was that she could no longer stand Mrs. Moffett's rebukes for mistakes made.

"I know she has been kind to me"—she said—"and I appreciate everything that has been done for me, but I would rather work in your kitchen than to return to Mrs. Moffett's house. I know that when she scolded me she did it in a motherly way and for my own good, but somehow or other her words would always sting me.

"I walked all the way from Plainfield to Roselle in the rain. At the different villages I tried to get work, but nobody would have anything to do with me. I was beginning to get discouraged, when a lady told me that I might get work with you, and accordingly I came here."

Mrs. Moffett was very glad when she heard of the girl's safety. "I was afraid she was dead or had been lost"—she said—"If she chooses to stay away she may, but if she decides to come back she will be welcomed. It was very foolish of her to go away without telling me, as she well knew that I would not have stopped her had she done so."

The girl's mother and stepfather live at Chatham, Morris county, as has already been stated in THE PRESS. The stepfather, Mr. Blazier, is a carpenter. Lelia is her mother's only child by her first husband: Mrs. Blazier has seven children by her second husband. Mr. Blazier is poor and hardly able to support such a large family. It was for this reason that Lelia left home to live with Mrs. Moffett.

Eager to Sing at Plainfield Again.

Speaking of the Elizabeth Glee Club concert at The Casino Wednesday night, the Elizabeth Journal says:

"The singing of the club was even better than at the concert at Elizabeth on Monday night, and was received by the large audience present with much warmth and applause. Already it is suggested that the club repeat its next concert at Plainfield also.

"It is rumored that the soloists at the next concert will be the Philharmonic Club of New York, who have not yet been heard in this city."

The Songs Were Low, and Her Delivery Was Admirable.

The same "critic," probably, who wrote of how beautifully a violinist at The Casino, recently, played Paginini's wierd and witching "Witch's Dance," when he did not play it at all, has now been writing of the Glee Club concert of Tuesday evening.

He, she or it, says: "The programme was followed without a 'creak.' How fortunate! Then again, "The songs were low enough to allow the hearers to distinguish the various parts blending." And Miss Parelow, the violinist's, "delivery," we are told, was admirable.

BLESSING THROATS AGAINST DISEASE.

Interesting Celebration of the Festival of St. Blase in Plainfield.

The festival of St. Blase, which was celebrated at St. Mary's Roman Catholic church in this city Tuesday, is one of the most interesting in the long list observed during the year. It was the occasion on which the throats of the faithful throughout the world are especially blessed. Many devout followers of the faith filled the church during the day.

Very interesting services were held. The Rev. P. E. Smyth celebrated the mass. The music was under the direction of the organist, Mrs. Ronan. After mass the officiating priest gave the benediction. Then nearly every person in the church approached the altar rails, where the pastor, wearing red stole and alb, blessed their throats. The priest carried a wax candle shaped like the letter Y, the upper ends of which were lighted. Placing the fork of the Y thus formed on the neck of the person, the priest made the sign of the cross, repeating the words of blessing at the same time. There were many children among the applicants for blessing, the ceremony being intended to protect them against diphtheria and kindred diseases.

This custom of blessing throats originated in Armenia many centuries ago. During the persecution of Christians under Emperor Licinius, Bishop Blase fled from his home and sought refuge in a neighboring cavern, where he was eventually discovered and brought before Agricola, the Judge, who sentenced him to be beheaded. While in prison a woman came to him with her child, who had swallowed a fish bone that stuck in his throat. She implored St. Blase to use his miraculous powers, and he blessed the child, giving him instant relief. Several days afterward the Bishop was martyred. His memory is always venerated on the third of February.

St. Blase was born at Sebaste, in Armenia. In his youth he studied philosophy and medicine. He lived a virtuous life, and finally became Bishop of Sebaste. At that time the Christians, especially the Bishops and priests, suffered many persecutions from the pagans. The Bishop, that his life might be saved for his flock, withdrew to a grotto in Mount Agaens. The animals of the forest were more humane than his persecutors; they became his friends and served him—brought him food. He, in return, caressed them and healed their wounds. A hunter one day met him in the midst of these animals and reported him to the Governor, who sent his officers to arrest him. The Saint went cordially to meet them, and when they reached his cave he said: "You are welcome, for now I see that God has not forgotten me." When they were returning with him, the animals followed, and the officers, becoming terrified, were about to run for their lives when they were reassured by the holy man, who said: "Be not afraid; they will do you no harm." He then ordered the animals to go back. They obeyed, but for a long time looked sadly after him. He performed many miracles on the way to the city. Upon his arrival he was taken before the Governor, who ordered him to worship the gods. Refusing to obey, he was struck with clubs, tied to a pillar and torn with iron claws. In the midst of these tortures he said to the Governor: "If you fancy that by torture you can make me forsake my Lord and my God, you are indeed wrong." He was afterward taken to prison, where, upon again refusing to offer sacrifice to idols, he was beheaded.

More Money for the Sheriff.

One of the latest bills introduced in the Legislature is that presented by Mr. Cole of Camden. It provides that sheriffs shall be paid a salary which shall amount to "$50 for each thousand in population" in the county, and shall not receive any other fees or emoluments "except the legal fees and costs accruing to the sheriff for the control of civil business connected with his office and for actual expenses for official services." As Union county has a population of 72,000 this would give the sheriff $3,600 a year, besides the fees and costs specified. And as the office of sheriff is a very busy and expensive one for the incumbent, this is considered not one whit too great an income.

No Clean Shirts in Plainfield.

Frank A. Munsey's bright new paper, The Daily Continent, draws a picture of Plainfield congregations attending worship in soiled linen, in the following condensation of a story of vanished celestials published in THE PRESS:

Search is being made in Chinatown for a pair of Celestials known as Soo Cha Lo and Wong Sing. One is little and pudgy; the other is tall and lank. Soo and Wong are wanted in Plainfield, N. J. They skipped from there owing $53 for rent, and taking away all the laundry intrusted to their care. They have a large job lot of collars and cuffs on hand, and many Plainfielders had to go to church without clean shirts last Sunday.

Elizabeth's Close Call.

The bowlers of the Elizabeth Athletic Club had a narrow escape from a second defeat at the hands of the Westfield Athletic Club Tuesday night. The game was hotly contested throughout. On no frame was there a difference of more than 23 pins. The total score was 1564 to 1562, in Elizabeth's favor.

PLAINFIELD'S GOOD AND BAD JEWS.

Some United in the Faith of Their Fathers, but Others Shun Their Religion for Sake of the Patronage of Gentiles.

In the current number of the Hebrew Standard, issued in New York, appears the following dated from this city:

"TO THE EDITOR OF THE HEBREW STANDARD:

"Many of your readers are unaware that we have a Jewish congregation under the name of 'Beth Tefilleth Isho Yendel,' in Plainfield. We have had our ups and downs, our strifes and contentions, oppositions and antagonisms; but now we are on a solid basis. You will doubtless be surprised to learn that most of the trouble that we have encountered is due to the peculiarities of those who call themselves 'high toned,' and who are not infatuated with Judaism. We engaged last week a Chazan and Shochet, adopted a resolution to join the United Hebrew Orthodox Congregations of New York, and have arranged for a Hebrew School to be held three times a week. Although, comparatively speaking, Plainfield is a small place, still there are thirty Jewish families residing here, and if all were unanimous and took the interest in Jewish affairs which they should, we would have easy sailing. Our aristocratic members have withdrawn from us, because, as in all other localities, there are a few who have lived beyond religious times, who deride our customs and do not wish to belong to a congregation for fear that the public might know that they are Jews, which would hurt them in their business.

"As an evidence of the style of Yehudim referred to, let me name one, who last Summer went to Europe to visit his father, who was a pious Israelite and very wealthy, and who was not expected to live. The son left Germany to escape military duty, and therefore did not dare to cross the line, but remained on the side until he received word of his father's death. When he had collected his share of the estate he returned to Plainfield, invested his money in property, and sent a letter of resignation to the congregation, not even saying Kaddish. On Yom Kippur he had his opening day, for he keeps a prominent store in Plainfield, and I cite him as an illustration of the text 'Jeshuran waxed fat and kicked,' for, after entering into the fortune of his father, who was known for his exemplary piety, he did not think it even worth while to say a single Kaddish for him.

"We are now twenty strong; we are not millionaires, but Yehudim, are proud of it, and are respected by all the clergy of various denominations in Plainfield, whose best wishes we have. Services are held every Friday night and Saturday, and on Jahrzahs, in the front parlor of our President, B. Goodman, Esq., and our attendance averages from 15 to 18 on Friday evening, and on Sabbath we have from 30 to 35. We are strictly orthodox, and intend to continue in the good old paths marked out by our forefathers.

"Among our most earnest laborers is the well-known 'Felix,' who devotes much time and energy to the affairs of the congregation, and who is among our most active workers.

"The following are our officers: B. Goodman, President; J. S. Levy, Vice President; S. Dreyer, Treasurer; E. Marx, Secretary. Trustees—B. Goodman, J. S. Levy, S. Dreyer, K. Rothberg and Felix Marx."

What the above correspondent says regarding those he calls the "aristocratic members" of the Jewish people of this city, is all true. THE PRESS could publish today a list of Plainfield Israelites who shun the paths marked out by their forefathers, merely to cater for the trade of the Gentiles. They willingly sell their religion for the mighty dollar.

Most all who read this will be surprised to hear that there are so many Jews in this city, and to learn that Judaism is really flourishing in Plainfield. Not only is there a school open three days of the week, but there is a Jew butcher established here who kills the meat for the Hebrew families, according to the ancient Mosaic law. Then, also, a pastor has been secured in Rabbi Goodstein, formerly of Somerville, said to be one of the best. Some of these days there may be a Plainfield synagogue erected.

DISGUSTED WITH BOROUGH METHODS.

Sharp Criticisms Made Against North Plainfield and Dunellen Government.

Mayor Place of North Plainfield and Dr. Brakeley of Dunellen have stirred up a sarcastic opponent by their praises of the borough system of government, as witness the following letter from a correspondent of The Somerset Messenger of Somerville:

"There seems to be a pressure brought to bear on this question that would indicate that there was something lurking under the surface and not yet ready for the light. The Chronicle, generally meaning well, seems to be carried away on this borough bubble. On Dec 28 it gave space to a lengthy article from the pen of the Hon. Charles Place, President of the North Plainfield Borough Commissioners, who comes out dressed in the costume of a real live mayor. Mayor Place has given us a vast amount of instruction, and told us that if things were so and so, then they would be so and so.

"We ought not to doubt Mr. Place, for in his opening he says: 'Your request, that I set forth some of the advantages of a borough corporation, was received and I cheerfully comply.' He is frank to own that he was requested to write that letter, but he has not given us a hint as to what his motive was. All wholesome laws are supposed to be the 'soul of reason,' and the code comprising the borough laws generally are just the reverse of that. They are crude, inapplicable and oppressive, arbitrary to the last degree, and totally devoid of clear legislative wisdom.

"A borough government is a strong government, as Mr. Place justly says, so far as it is arbitrary, unjust and oppressive on the poor man who owns a home that is not fully paid for. He can be compelled to do anything that may strike the insane hallucinations of a few men who want their own property improved at the expense of some one else.

"It is no wonder that Senator Winton is himself disgusted with the laws as they stand, and is doing his best to procure a set of laws modeled after the village acts in New York.

"Dr. Brakeley of Dunellen has also placed himself on record through an interview in The Chronicle. The doctor means well, if he would only throw some light where it was intended it should be thrown by the street lamps, and tell us how much they cost, and that only about four out of the forty are now to be found, he would give us a sound and plausable excuse for the need of that lock-up of which he speaks. This should have been done before the money for lamps was thrown away. Then the first one who smashed a lamp could have been properly punished and the remainder of them saved. As it is they present a sorry plight. Bare posts and here and there a lamp frame with no glass in, are all that can be seen. They do not shine like Bartholdi's Statue of Liberty lighting the world. But the posts remaining are a sad reminder of the spared monuments of the enduring mercy of the disgusted tax-payers of the place."

IN DARKEST PLAINFIELD.

Mrs. Kimball Finds New Evidence That Something Should be Done for the Suppression of Drunkards.

There is no doubt in anybody's mind that it is the drinking of rum to excess that causes so much misery; and nothing will remedy the evil except the suppression of the drunkards. If they can't buy the rum, they will steal it or make it. Mrs. N. E. Kimball, President of the Children's Home, finds new evidence every day of the misery wrought by these habitual drunkards. She told a PRESS representative that during the past year the number of destitute cases brought to the notice of the "Home" has been trebled by drunkenness. She said further:

"'How the other half lives' in Plainfield is an object lesson for all persons who think another liquor saloon or hotel with open bar is needed. A large audience were much interested and their hearts deeply stirred at the Casino, Saturday evening, by Mr. Riis' talk on the Dangerous Classes of New York city. Perhaps very few people in the audience realized that during the very hour of the lecture Plainfield might have given its full quota of General Booth's 'Submerged Tenth,' to a person visiting any one of several well-known localities in our city.

"Within ten days there have been reported to me as an executive officer of the 'Home' the cases of four families in most pitiable condition. The poverty and wretchedness of three out of four of these families is due solely to beer and whiskey drinking. In the first family there is a mother with four children by her first marriage, a baby a few months old, and a step-father. The man can earn from eight to ten dollars a week, but both he and the woman drink habitually. He often loses his place through his bad habits. Last week the woman was sick and sent for her neighbor to come and see her. The kind hearted woman found desolation itself. The woman was in bed. Not a stick of wood or a hod of coal in the house. The two little girls were shoeless and stockingless, and there was not one particle of food in the house. A week ago one of the two boys who had been out all day, came home at night. Afraid of his step-father, he dared not go into the house. He crept through the broken lattice under the stoop, and hid there until the man and woman were supposed to be asleep, and then crawled into the cellar and spent the night there! In a fit of drunken frenzy a few days before, the man had broken up and burned the bedstead on which the children slept, and now a heap of filthy rags on the floor serves these four children for a bed. In the second family there are four children, and a drunken father and mother, in circumstances almost equally distressing. In family number three, there are five children. When found there was neither fire nor food of any kind in the house. A fourth family consists of a young mother and a child two years old. The miserable husband and father has deserted them, and the poor woman, being little able to work, is trying to earn a scanty living. Here are thirteen little children for somebody to care for and comfort. The liquor shops of Plainfield now take nearly all the earnings of these and scores of other equally wretched families. Surely every one must see that we do not need another saloon added to the number that now infest so thickly that part of the town."

Getting Ready to Build the Hall.

The building on the Young Men's Christian Association lots at 55 and 57 East Front street, opposite Peace street, is for sale, the purchaser to remove it from the premises. Further information will be furnished at the Y. M. C. A. rooms.

A CHINESE NEWGATE.

Oriental Victims of the Axe Go to the Scene in Baskets All Labeled.

We are now on our way to the much-dreaded execution ground, which I approach most reluctantly, for visions of glittering swords and headless bodies dance before my eyes, says a visitor to Canton, China. Have I not read that "criminals of the worst kind are strangled and cut to pieces on the crosses, several of which may be seen leaning against the wall?" With a final pull and a gathering of my shattered nerves we follow Ah Cum through a little gate and see a long, narrow strip of ground—a kind of alley about 75x25 feet—filled with rows and rows of big earthenware pots, each one covered with an immense dried palm leaf.

C— and I gaze at each other puzzled, doubtful, yet infinitely relieved. Is it the execution ground or only a potters' yard? Almost immediately Ah Cum ends our suspense by breaking forth in his usual rattling way and introduces us to Executioner Number Three—a dried-up, wizened, little old man, dressed in tatters, with a grin so fiendish and diabolical that it turns me cold with fear and horror. Nothing but a head dripping with blood will satisfy C—. The wretched little man quickly interprets his questioning look, grins again, steps tragically off to a far corner, dips down and drags out—a skull! The traditional skull, kept always on hand for the blood-seeking tourist—a dry, bleached bone, to compensate him for the agonies of mind he has gone through.

Still appreciating our disappointment, Executioner Number One appears brandishing a sword; he goes through a sort of a pantomime—an imaginary execution—and expresses to our interpreter his regret that we are not more fortunate in our selection of time, for tomorrow seven men are to be put to death! The place is always open to foreigners, who sometimes witness the most bloodcurdling scenes. I believe the average number executed is 300 per annum.

The condemned are brought to the ground in baskets, with strips of paper fastened to their backs stating name, nature of crime and punishment deserved. The ling chee, or 1,000 cuts, is the most terrible of all punishments. The criminal is tied, hand and foot, to the cross, the stabs follow in rapid succession, but never striking a vital part till finally the presiding mandarin gives the sign to the executioner for the last fatal stroke. Ah Cum tells us that the execution-ground, when not used, is taken as a drying-yard by the neighboring potters.—N. Y. Journal.

Pugilist Lent's Blow May Prove Fatal.

DOBBS FERRY, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Charles McLaine is dying from injuries received in a fight with Bert Lent, the well known pugilist. The men fought four fierce rounds in a saloon here, when a blow in the face from McLaine so angered Lent that the latter seized a chair leg and felled him to the ground.

The Anti-Pinkerton Bill in Favor.

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The Assembly Committee on Cities gave a hearing on Mr. Sulzer's anti-Pinkerton bill. Nobody appeared in opposition, and Mr. Hicks, representing the State Knights of Labor, and Mr. Doyle, representing the State Workingmen's Assembly, favored it. The committee decided to report the bill favorably.

None of the Miners Killed.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 5.—A New Castle special says that no lives were lost in Monday night's explosion. The mine was sealed up yesterday, and the fire, it is thought, will be smothered within three or four weeks.

Found His Body in a Water Tank.

BATAVIA, N. Y., Feb. 5.—The body of Frank Geise, an unmarried German, 28 years of age, was found in the West Shore water tank at Oakfield. It is supposed that he committed suicide, but no reason for the act is known.

A Difference and a Strike.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 5.—The Coke workers in the Connellsville district have ordered a strike to begin next Monday. They demand an increase of 2½ per cent. in wages, while the operators want them to accept a 10 per cent. reduction.

New York-rs After the Mint.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The New York members are making an effort to have the United States Mint at Philadelphia removed to the metropolis. The Philadelphia members want the government to appropriate $5,000,000 for a new building in that city.

Boston Lymph Patients Doing Well.

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Twenty-three of the twenty-four beds for lymph patients at the Massachusetts General Hospital are still occupied, and all of those who were first received are still there. Most of them are up and dressed during the day, and all are better than when they first came for treatment, though in a few of the extreme cases the improvement is still slight. In no case have the injections proved dangerous, as has been true of some cases in other cities. The 24th bed was taken, but the occupant left of his own accord, without any definite reason.

Mrs. Holman Acquitted.

WORCESTER, Feb. 5.—The trial of Mrs. Hattie F. Holman, for manslaughter in causing the death of James Healy, 11 years old, by suffocation with illuminating gas, resulted in a verdict of not guilty.

Result of Thawing Dynamite.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Feb. 5.—While thawing a large quantity of dynamite on Trenton Cutoff Branch, John Devanny, aged 16 years, and a Hungarian, were fatally injured by the explosion that followed.

Largest in the World.

GREENVILLE, Pa., Feb. 5.—Elder John Peat is just completing the largest telescope glass in the world. The disc was procured in Paris, and weighs 300 pounds.

Rich Find of Gold in Texas.

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex., Feb. 5.—A rich find of gold is reported from the Northern part of Dewell county. A North Texas syndicate purchased the land before the secret was known. A car load of ore has been shipped to New Jersey.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—The reconstruction of the neglected fortifications of Crete appears to have been decided upon. Two large outer works are to be built to the east and west of Canea, and smaller works are being planned for Retimo and Candia.

—The London Metropolitan Gardens Association has offered £100 apiece to the twenty metropolitan vestries and distinct boards to be expended in planting plane trees in suitable thoroughfares in each district, on condition that the local authorities agree to maintain the trees when planted, replacing such as may die.

—The order of the French Minister of War that no French soldier should frequent saloons, restaurants, or hotels kept by foreigners has been so generally violated by officers and privates alike, that he has felt obliged to repeat it, with the added threat that all offenders against it will from now on be punished with the extreme penalty of the law.

—Vivandieres may occasionally be seen marching at the head of some French regiments of the line on review days, attired as of yore in their gay costumes, and carrying a small parcel painted in the national colors slung over their shoulders. The race, however, is fast dying out, although women still assist as cantinieres in regimental refreshment departments.

—The French corps of infantry officers for 1891 will number 12,278 men. There are 190 Colonels, 199 Lieutenant-Colonels, 1,047 Majors, 4,160 Captains, 3,661 Lieutenants, and 3,021 Second Lieutenants. There are five foreigners among the Captains, 14 among the Lieutenants, and 27 among the Second Lieutenants. The 27 Second Lieutenants are men who have distinguished themselves in regiments abroad, and have been rewarded, after having enjoyed their rank two years, by being promoted to a corresponding rank in the reserves. The French army has the largest corps of infantry officers of all the armies in the world.

—A quaint custom, dating back to Anglo-Saxon times, known as payment of "wrath silver," was recently observed at Knightlow Hill, a tumulus between Rugby and Coventry, England. It consists of tribute payable by certain parishes in Warwickshire to the Duke of Buccleuch. The silver has to be deposited at daybreak in a hollow stone by representatives of the parishes, the penalty for default being forfeiture of a white bull with a red nose and ears. The representatives afterwards dined together at the Duke's expense.—Science.

PARIS FLOWER VENDERS

The Different Types of Woman Engaged in the Business.

They are an interesting set, these flower venders of Paris. There are as many kinds of them as there are different kinds of people in the gay metropolis of the jolly world.

Let us begin with the most serious type—the flower fancier.

She deals exclusively in the triumphs of horticulture, and carries on her business more for the love of it than because she needs to. Still she knows the value of money and gives nothing away.

Here is the type of another class: Her home is the boulevard, her customers the gilded youth of every age; her stock in sight consists of buttonhole bouquets. She is neither young nor old, neither pretty nor ugly, but she is "chic" and clever.

She knows her customers' little secrets and executes orders for cut-flowers or bouquets to be sent to the ladies of the world, with the most minute attention to the receiver's expectations, without ever asking a question of the customer. She never grows gray in the business, but hardly ever dies poor.

The home of the queen of florists is in the grand boulevard bazaars. She is the artist who directs the execution of the wonderful floral pieces and her taste is trusted implicitly by her customers.

There is nothing cheap, nothing plebeian about her. She lives in a world consisting entirely of filled or moneyed aristocracy, and her manners no less than her conversation would grace the finest salon. She may not own a husband, but she can outshine many a prima donna with her diamonds and other treasures, and is frequently seen as a rich heiress at the watering places.

Her counterpart in the other half of the world is more picturesque than attractive. She deals in flowers in spring and sells fish at other seasons. She is robust, hale and hearty, not always very clean, but always good-natured when selling flowers from her handcart.

She does not shine as a conversationalist, but has a knack of letting her wares speak for themselves in their tasteful arrangement.

Sweet flower herself, the flower girl of the tenement courts! Young and lively, simple-minded and light-hearted, she trots from court to court, up-stairs and down-stairs, listening to tales of woe and of scandal, retailing gossip she has heard or invented.

Does she make a living? Yes, for a time. But she does not get rich as a florist, and her fate is generally recorded upon the saddest leaves of the book of life. You see that ragged old hag picking over the garbage? Ten to one she was once just such a sweet flower as the gay girl you thought more fragrant than the flowers she sells.

Always haggard and careworn, clad poorly and without taste, surrounded by a lot of dirty, ragged children, all her own, she sits in her little booth near the entrance to the cemetery.

The flowers she sells are not likely to fade very soon, nor does she seem, in other respects, to have any thing in common with the rest of the Paris sisterhood of flower sellers. But she, like all the others, plays an important part in the life of gay Paris, and behind her apparently harmless trade lurks but too often the worst of all occupations—the traffic in human lives.

How many poisonous saps are not hidden beneath the flowers which are daily sold and bought in gay Paris!—Chicago News.

A Mad Mail Revenge.

WATERLOO, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Michael Toomey went to the postoffice here and destroyed a large portion of the glass fronts of the delivery boxes. He claimed that the government owed him $1,300, and he wanted to have his revenge. Toomey has been thought insane for some time and has threatened lawsuits against the government for tampering with his mails. He was arrested.

Don't care not to know who wrote "Beautiful snow."
Nor what may have caused him to do it;
With his ear in a sling, he desires but one thing—
The name of the rascal who threw it.
—Washington Post.

—From the latest times of paganism to the early ages of Christianity we can but rarely quote instances of fire lighted up for other purposes in public form than for the ceremonies of religion.

MAKING DIAMONDS GROW.

It's Not Very Difficult If You Turn Them Over Often Enough.

"Look at this stone," said a young journeyman jeweler in a street car the other day, removing a tissue paper wrapping from a piece of white wax, in the center of which a beautiful diamond blazed. "That is worth at the least $150."

"How is it that you can afford to buy such a valuable stone as that?" asked one of his friends who knew his circumstances.

"I will put you onto the snap," said the jeweler. "That stone has been growing for a year, and I think it has got its growth."

"What do you mean by a diamond growing?" asked the friend.

"I will tell you. You remember the little spark I had in my scarfpin last Christmas. Well, this is what it has grown to in less than a year. The little stone cost me a dollar and the pin cost me $2.80. I sold the pin for $8, and bought an eight-carat stone, a little off shape, for a trifle over $5. I bought a stud setting. You know you can get those things quite low now. They are made up by the thousands by firms which do not make finished goods. Well, I put the stone in the setting on a spiral and sold it the same week for $18. Then I went to the office and bought the best stone I could get for $15 and mounted that in the same manner. I wore it a month and then sold it for $30 to a bartender, and I put $25 into another stone. It was a little beauty, and I traded it for another one of about the same size, and got $5 to boot. That put the stone down to $20, and I put it into a setting which cost me $3, and sold it a few days later for $35. I got another stone for $30, and had it two months before I made a turn with it; then I cleared $12, and put the money into a beautiful stone, which brought me up to $60, when I sold it in a handsome stud setting.

"Then I got a chance to sell a ring for $75, and I made it to order, putting in a stone which cost me $42.50. I put the whole $75 into another stone, which I carried around for awhile, and had fully made up my mind to keep, but a butcher offered me $100 for it and I sold it to him. It was in a crown setting, which cost me $6.25. For the hundred I got a dandy stone, and I was sure I could keep that one, but I have had four better ones since, and have got up to $180. I can't go much higher than that, I guess, for there are few men among my acquaintances who can afford to tempt me with a profitable offer for it. I wouldn't sell it to-night for $300, because I know that I have got a bargain. I'm a pretty good judge of diamonds, and when I put that stone into a nice ring I will make it look like $250 worth; and I don't think that any body can persuade me to sell it for any thing less. In all the changes I don't think that I have put in more than $16 or $18 of my pocket money. The rest has all been profit on the stones and settings."—N. Y. Sun.

ARIZONA RUINS.

The Casa-Grandes or "Big Houses" of the Montezumas.

The casa is entered at a projecting angle, through a window of sub-Gothic form, measuring three feet and three inches in height by two feet and four inches in width at the bottom. This small apartment is smoothly plastered within, and blackened by fire. The plastering bears finger-marks and impressions of the thumb and hand, showing that it was laid on and smoothed by the hands. The roof is formed by willows laid horizontally across eleven rafters of ash and black alder, upon this a thick layer of reeds is placed traversely, and the whole plastered on top with mortar, forming a floor to the chamber above it. The rafters are peeled, except one or two that were evidently taken dry. They average about fifteen inches in circumference, and were set into the walls at the time the latter were built. They were burned off flush with the wall outside. Some of them show hatchet marks, where branches were lopped off. From this room the only means of exit, except the window by which it was entered, is a small hole in the ceiling, just within the entrance, measuring thirteen by eighteen inches, and bordered by flat stones laid upon the reed layer of the roof. These stones are smoothly polished by the hands of the dwellers in passing back and forth, as this was apparently the only means of entering the seventeen apartments above it. The traveler in this section is quite certain of being entertained by exaggerated stories about gigantic human skeletons having been discovered in the ruined casa-grandes; but if he be a good-sized man, and possessed of the usual amount of adipose tissue appertaining to the age of threescore years, he will become skeptical thereof when he comes to squeeze himself through the narrow portals of the ancient halls of Montezuma's castle.—Edgar A. Mearns, in Popular Science Monthly.

Writes with His Teeth.

Captain L. B. Cousins recently received a letter from his old army comrade, E. P. Latham, of Barton, O. The letter itself would not seem remarkable to any one not conversant with the facts, as it appeared to be simply a chatty, friendly letter, written in a bold, plain, business-like hand. The remarkable feature of the letter is that Mr. Latham carries on his correspondence with his teeth. During the war he had both arms shot off and his right eye shot out. Although a man with habits matured, he has, since losing his arms, learned to write by holding his pen in his teeth. He is a good penmen, and does the office work for the firm of which he is the senior partner, and which does a very extensive business. He keeps the accounts, and no one would suspect by a glance at his books that his mouth, instead of his hand, is his penholder.—Omaha Bee.

CAMPAIGN THUNDER.

How a Candidate was Crushed by a Penny-a-Liner.

As about eight out of ten men one meets nowadays are up for the Legislature, county sheriff or some thing, it is not surprising that a large proportion of these politicians are of the self-made variety that could not deliver an intelligible speech if they were to be hanged. The result is that the hard-up penny-a-liners are turning an honest penny by supplying these tongue-tied statesmen with ready-made campaign thunder.

The other night there was a most enthusiastic primary meeting at Petaluma, during which an aspirant for county clerk was introduced.

The gentleman laid a voluminously-written speech on the desk and started in. He had only got as far as "Fellow citizens," when a hungry-looking party in a week-before-last shirt, and whose whole appearance denoted destitution, stood up in the front row and whispered:

"How about that little amount?"

The orator coughed, colored, looked fixedly at the gallery, and strove to continue.

"I say," continued the interrupter, more loudly, "you know what I told you—cash down or no sale."

"I'll—I'll see you in the morning," gasped the mortified politician.

"Morning don't go," replied the creditor, doggedly. "You can't play the morning dodge on me; I'm dead on to you fellows, I am. You've got to put up or shut up. Pungle out that $12 right here, or nary an orate."

"I haven't got that amount with me," murmured the distinguished speaker, fumbling in his clothes. "Just—just sit down, and I'll see you later."

"Later be blowed," growled the pencil parer, and reaching up he transferred the manuscript to his coat-tail pocket and walked out. The crushed nominee took a back seat on the platform and wept like a child, while the band filled in its time by "Listen to the Mocking Bird," with variations.—San Francisco News-Letter.

Mahogany Packing-Cases.

There are few instruments or pieces of apparatus more delicate and fragile than many of the costly and intricate productions of mechanical skill in general use to-day by electrical companies for the purposes of refined electrical measurement, and it can easily be understood that the difficulty of shipping these expensive and easily deranged instruments from place to place without risk of damage from careless handling in transit is a perplexing question both to manufacturers and users. A famous English electrician says that he early adopted a plan which proved so successful that he has adhered to it ever since. Finding that careful packing and conspicuous labels stating the contents to be "glass, with great care," were not always sufficient to prevent breakage and damage to delicate parts, he hit on the idea of sending out all his instruments in beautifully polished mahogany cases, with brass handles and mountings. The exquisite appearance of the cases appealed successfully even to the callous natures of porters and dockhands; they positively had not the heart to scratch the immaculate polish by rough handling, and the freedom of the instruments from damage amply repaid the extra cost of the luxurious cases.—Chicago Daily News.

HOW ELKS GROW HORNS.

In Ten Weeks a New Pair of Antlers Are Grown.

With the loss of the antlers the stag changes his disposition entirely and becomes as docile and tractable as a lamb. He remains in this condition of temper until the beginning of March, when he shows a disposition to lurk in sequested spots of the glen and timidly avoid the presence even of his kind.

During this period, on the spot where the antlers were, a pair of protuberances will make their appearance, covered with a soft, dark, velvety skin. These will attain a considerable growth in a few days. The carotid arteries of these protuberances will enlarge with them in order to supply a sufficiency of nourishment. When the new antlers have attained their full growth, which will be in ten weeks after the old ones have been shed, the bony rings at the base through which the antlers pass will begin to thicken, and gradually filling up will compress the blood vessels and ultimately obliterate them. The velvety skin that surrounds the bone, being thus deprived of nourishment will lose its vitality and will be rubbed off in shreds by the stag on the edges of rocks or other hard substances.

As soon as the full size of the antlers is attained the docile disposition of the elk will disappear and he will become once more for the year the fierce and unfriendly king of the glen.

The age of the elk, according to writers on natural history, is computed by the number of points on the antlers.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Luxury on Wheels.

—Parlor-car travel on the lines running into New York is constantly on the increase, and this luxury has long since ceased to be the peculiar property of the rich. With the popularization of the parlor-car has come a change in the attitude of the expectant porter. He is still expectant, but he no longer despises a small tip, and in the case of travelers taking only short journeys he sometimes omits the accustomed exactions, and permits his natural victims to find their way off the car without the suggestive officiousness that once characterized his manner.

Not Fair.

Mrs. Potts—Just to think of you talking to me in such a style!—you who used to swear I was an angel!

Mr. Potts—Look here, my dear, that isn't fair; you know it isn't. What is the use of twitting a man about the lies he told fifteen years ago?—Jury.

Still At It.

Mrs. Pancake (to Tramp)—What do you do when you are working?

Tramp—I'm a canvasser.

Mrs. Pancake—What do you canvass for?

Tramp (eloping with the luncheon)—My livin', mum.—Texas Siftings.

—The young lady who made seven hundred words out of "conservatory," last autumn, has run away from home. Her mother wanted her to make three loaves of bread out of flour.

A GLASS OF CIDER.

Suggestive Pointers Concerning Saccharine Apple Juice.

The sight of a keg of sweet cider on the counter is more frequent in city restaurants nowadays than it was a dozen years ago. A piece of pumpkin pie and a glass of saccharine apple juice doubtless appeal to the country-bred tastes of many a grizzled merchant and busy clerk, and call up recollections of rude old country cider-mills and the great vats of amber liquor into which they once inserted the potent rye straw. Or possibly the pretty girl washing glasses at the counter reminds them of some country Pomona such as John Keats drew in his poem of "Autumn," who loved to sit beside a cider-press "and watch the last slow oozings, hour by hour."

The cider business has got to be an extensive one, and grows larger every year, providing there is a good crop of apples. This year, however, there is only about one-third of a yield from the cider-mills, owing to the light apple-crop. The price of cider does not seem to fluctuate with the supply. It is always served out by the retailer at five cents a glass, and may be bought by the keg at from thirty cents to forty cents a gallon.

As a rule, the flush year of the apple orchards furnishes a vinegar supply for two years. Good cider is worth more than vinegar this year, so that the crop will mostly be used in its fresh state. Not a few cider manufacturers own more than one mill; some half a dozen, and they make a handsome profit. Supposing that they pay a farmer fifty cents a barrel for apples. A barrel of apples will make nine gallons of cider, which will bring them twenty cents a gallon or $1.80 for the yield of fifty cents worth of apples. There is, of course, some outlay for machinery, labor, barrels, etc. Second-hand whisky barrels are generally used, and they cost about $1.25 apiece.

The cost of making cider is from two to three cents a gallon, and the farmers often prefer to pay this and market their own cider. But here they are at a disadvantage from not being known to the trade. A Connecticut cider firm made a bid the other day to supply 300 barrels of cider at eighteen cents a gallon. Such large orders would daze the average farmer, of course.

The romantic old-time cider-mill is being rapidly supplanted by the more thorough and trustworthy modern sorts. In the old one the apples were often ground by horse-power. But most frequently the cider-mill was pitched beside a small stream, the power of which, half wasted on a great "overshot" wheel, was made to do the grinding. Often the supply of water would fail, or the dam or other contrivances give way, and then there was a great temptation to water the cider to make up for lost time while waiting for the dam to fill up. The pressing was done generally by an upright screw into which iron bars were thrust and pushed around by brawny arms. The writer has seen a broad-backed Dutch woman helping her husband at this arduous work.

The modern cider-mill, however, shows by the puffs of steam that it does not depend on dams. To be sure, there may be a dam a foot high in the neighboring ravine, a fall of water enough to work a hydraulic ram and feed the boiler. The grinder revolves at a rate which makes the building hum. The ground apple, or pulp, falls down through the floor into canvas sacks, which are hastily closed and laid in a tier of a dozen on the platform of the hydraulic press. Then down comes the cover with irresistible power, and the essence of the apple gurgles into the vat. From here a pump, also propeled by steam, forces the liquid up into a large vat, from which it can be drawn into barrels by turning a spigot. In old times the loading of a barrel of cider, weighing over four hundred pounds, occupied the close attention of several brawny men as they rolled it up a pair of "skids" with a concert of "heave-obs." But now a pair of barrel tongs, a rope thrown over a windlass having a large wheel for the hand rope, and the muscle of one man lifts the barrel and swings it into the wagon.

It is a strong argument for the sweet-cider drinker that the pomace left after pressing is absolutely worthless as a food for any thing or as a fertilizer. The virtue of the apple must therefore go with the juice.

The best cider is that made late in the season from the best matured fruit. Cold weather also conduces to its keeping well. Russet apples make about the finest cider in market, and it will bring an extra price. Some other varieties, Newtown pippins or crab apples, make very fine thick cider. If properly worked, cleared of pomace and kept air-tight in new, clean barrels it will keep all winter as rich and pleasant as a sherry wine, while, of course, less alcoholic, and so less harmless.

The pleasure of "sucking cider through a straw" is not always attainable, as straws are not everywhere convenient at hand. An excellent substitute for the straw is a stick of macaroni.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

An Exhibition of Jewelry.

—A plan has been broached of opening an exhibition of jewelry in St. Petersburg. Syn Otetchestva energetically opposes the idea. Thus it declares: "All married men, all fathers who are blessed with grown-up daughters, and finally, all men who have any pleasant connections with ladies, must in a body oppose this crazy undertaking. If our ladies can not at present pass by an ordinary jewelry store without conceiving a desire to own the elegant trifles exhibited in the show windows, how much greater will that morbid desire be when they see the exquisite works of art in that line gathered from all the corners of the globe! It is simply appalling to think of the ruin of fortunes and the loss of virtue which such an exhibition might cause."

—Caller (to servant)—"Is your mistress in?" Servant—"Sir, this is the kitchen. I am mistress here."—Yankee Blade.

THE TRICER CAUGHT

THE PRISONER LANDED IN JAIL.

Discovered by a Constable on a Farm Near Acto, N. J.

He Makes a Partial Confession—Considerable Excitment When the Constable Arrived at the Station With the Criminal—Story of the Crime Recalled—Tied Up by the Thumbs for 51 Hours.

BERLIN, N. J., Feb. 5.—There was considerable excitement in this place last night when Constable Bowman Bates of Waterford drove up to the Camden and Atlantic station and announced that he had arrested the man who is wanted at New Brunswick for hanging an old farmer up in a bedroom by the thumbs and robbing him of a pocketbook containing $57. The outrage was perpetrated on Saturday, Jan. 17.

When Constable Bates found his man he was working for a man named Ottinger, at Hay's mill, near Atco. When he was told he was under arrest he said:

"Just as I expected. I suppose it is for that job over at New Brunswick, isn't it?"

"Yes," replied the constable.

He quietly allowed the constable to slip the bracelets on. They drove to Berlin, where they took the train for Camden Jail.

The Outrage on the Farmer.

The man who was the victim of the "job," as the prisoner contemptuously termed one of the most appalling outrages ever perpetrated in New Jersey, is old John Toms. He was tied up in a dark closet by his thumbs, and remained alone in an isolated farm house near New Brunswick for 51 hours before he was discovered. He said that the perpetrators of the crime were John Walker and Frank Cook, who lived in the neighborhood, but who escaped before Toms was discovered.

THE MINING DISASTER.

Great Efforts Being Made to Secure the Bodies of the Victims.

HAZLETON, Pa., Feb. 6.—The excitement of the latest mining disaster has given way to peaceful calm and everything is now directed toward securing the bodies of the unfortunate victims.

By constant pumping the water has lowered about 55 inches, which, with the fact that the water in the old No. 8 slope did not fall at all, indicates that a great deal of water from the old workings is finding its way into No. 1 and this water may prolong the finding of the bodies for months to come.

As yet it is idle to attempt fasten the responsibility directly where it belongs, but enough is known to make it certain that some one has blundered. Miners conversant with the works say that the company's chart of the workings show that there was 80 feet between the men at work in slope No. 1 and the volume of water in No. 8. This, if true, shows at once an error of calculation, a grievous one, which has resulted in a great loss of life and property.

Lef. Wohelsdorf, the mining engineer from Pottsville, who did the surveying for the firm, arrived at Janisville during the day. He made an investigation for the firm, but refused to give any information for the public. Sentiment in the region is somewhat divided. Conservative miners are willing to await a full investigation before passing censure on the firm of J. C. Haydon. Others see nothing in it but criminal negligence, and are outspoken in their assertions that the mining engineer has not visited the mines as frequently as the occasion demanded.

As soon as any of the bodies are recovered, the coroner will empanel a jury and a rigid inquiry will be made by him into the cause of the accident.

Railroad Employes Confess to Theft.

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 6.—Edward Hinck, way clerk, Patrick McHenry, receiving clerk and Wm. McIndoe, receiving clerk, all employes of the Pennsylvania railroad, were arrested on a charge of systematically stealing miscellaneous goods from the freight cars of the company. The trio confessed their guilt and gave the names of 12 others who were implicated with them in the thefts. The company claim that they have been losing fully $1,000 a month by these stealings.

The Yale Freshmen Challenge Harvard.

BOSTON, Feb. 6.—The freshman class of Yale has challenged the Harvard freshmen to an eight-oared shell race, two miles straightaway during the last two weeks in June. The Harvard freshmen will answer the challenge in a few days. The crew has already challenged Columbia, and if Harvard accepts Yale's offer there will probably be a three-cornered race.

The Saturday Half Holiday.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—There is every indication that the Saturday Half Holiday bill will become a law. The pressure in its favor from the cities is great The clerks from the financial institutions of Philadelphia are writing to members requesting them to vote in its favor, and the missionary work in behalf of the bill, it can be plainly seen, is having a telling effect.

President Gompers' Long Trip.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, left to-day on a long lecturing tour. He will visit all the large cities between Cleveland and Seattle. He will speak on the eight-hour question and in the interest of his organization. He will not return until the end of March.

THE FIGHT POSTPONED.

Dixon and McCarthy Not Allowed to Battle for the Championship.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The glove contest between Cal McCarthy and George Dixon, the colored boxer of Boston, did not take place at the Puritan Athletic Club last night, as warrants for the principals, who were charged with an intention to engage in a prize fight, were sworn out by the members of the Jefferson Club, an organization opposed to Mayor Gleason's administration.

When the managers of the Puritan Club learned that the warrants had been issued they arranged to have bail on hand, but could induce no judge to hold court and bail the prize fighters, so rather than have McCarthy and Dixon arrested and locked up over night they sent the boxers back to New York, and notified the 3,000 people who had been allowed to enter the club house at 9 p. m. that the affair was postponed "on account of legal difficulties," and the money paid for tickets would be refunded in case it was decided to call the match off altogether. The crowd took the postponement good-naturedly, although they knew that the men had weighed in during the afternoon and were fully prepared to do battle.

Secretary Hackett says that each of the boxers would probably receive a sum sufficient to cover his training expenses and include a substantial bonus for his trouble, and that after having paid that money over Messrs. Roche and Wakely would give up the management of the club.

MAY SAVE FOUR LIVES.

A Hope that the Imprisoned Men in the Nanticoke Mine Will be Rescued.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 6.—There is a strong possibility that the men imprisoned by the flood of water in the West Nanticoke colliery may still be alive. In addition to the three men, Rives, Cragle and Schelling, it is learned that David Hunter, a driver, is also in the mine.

Old miners who have worked in this colliery and are familiar with the working say if the men only maintained presence of mind they might have reached a place of safe. Cragle was well acquainted with the mine and must have known of an unfinished cross-heading leading towards an old tunnel many yards above the level of the water. They would have had some distance to travel, but if they started at once they could have reached the cross-heading before the flood reached them.

The officials of the mine also believe this is possible, and expect to get the water out by to-morrow morning, and if the men did succeed in reaching the cross-heading they may be reached in time to save their lives.

PERISHING FROM HUNGER.

Six Persons Found Nearly Dead from Cold and Starvation.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Feb. 6.—The family of George Crandall, consisting of six persons, living in an old brick house on the Hon. Thos. B. Carroll property, near Saratoga Lake, have just been found nearly dead of cold and starvation.

The youngest child had died for want of nourishment, and the father and mother and a 10-year-old boy were sick and famishing for want of food, of which there was not a morsel in the house. The other members of the family were a 14-year-old daughter, whose scant clothing hardly covered her nakedness, and an 80-year-old woman, Mrs. Crandall's mother, who was helpless from age and want of food.

They had evidently been in this destitute condition for some time, and had they not been discovered they must have soon perished.

He was dragged a distance of 150 feet out on the trestle over the Yantic River, where he lost his hold and fell through the trestle into the water, 30 feet below. He was rescued and found uninjured, but suffered somewhat from the shock.

THE BRAZIL TREATY

President Harrison's Formal Proclamation Issued.

FIRST FRUITS OF RECIPROCITY.

State Department Estimates About the Benefits to be Derived.

Republican Senators Caucus and Arrange an Order of Business—The Elections Bill May be Called Up Again—Sioux Chiefs Will be Heard To-morrow. The Pension Bill Passed the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—President Harrison formally announced last night the reciprocity treaty with Brazil.

Though the agreement received the signatures of Secretary Blaine and Senator Mendonca, the Brazilian Minister, last Saturday, and though the President approved it two days later, little intimation was given of it until last evening. Those who were in the secret, however, awaited anxiously the proclamation from the President.

It had not reached the Capitol when Congress adjourned. An hour later, however, it came from the White House with the signatures of the President and Secretary Blaine attached. Ex-Minister John W. Forster has been very active in cooperating with the President and Secretary Blaine in arranging the details of the treaty, and he is jubilant over the result. He declares that not only will Americans be delighted with the treaty but with the tremendous impetus which it will surely obtain for our trade with the new republic.

It is understood that negotiations of similar treaties are now in progress between the United States and Spain for Cuba, and with Venezuela.

The United States to-day pays to Brazil annually about $65,000,000, while it receives but $9,000,000 in return. State Department estimates say that under the new treaty Brazil will pay the United States annually, within three years, in return for our manufactures and products, at least $25,000,000, and within ten years perhaps, over twice, if not three times that amount. It is stated that by the terms of the agreement the Brazilian government reduces, by concession to the country, its annual revenues $5,000,000. Coffee, tea, sugar and molasses are contained in the free list.

THE ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Republican Senators Make Out a Programme for the Session.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—About 40 Republican Senators, assembled at the Metropolitan Club last night, ostensibly to dine as the guests of Senator Plumb, but really to arrange an order of business for the Senate.

It was decided to take up the Eight-Hour bill to-morrow and have it followed, in the order named, by the Copyright, Nicaragua Canal, Paddock Pure Food and Conger Lard bills, the bill to establish a private land claims court, the bill to allow limited pooling by railroad companies, the bankruptcy bill and the Pacific Railroad Funding bill.

It was also determined that appropriation bills and conference reports should have preference over other business, with the understanding that the order should be reverted to when no privileged matters are before the Senate

An agreement to skip any bill on the programme that promised to excite too much opposition was also reached.

THE ELECTIONS BILL.

An Effort Will Probably be Made to Bring It Up Again.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Quite a flurry was caused in the Senate when Senator Ingalls made the announcement that he could not vote for the Elections bill in its present shape, but would vote for it after certain amendments were made. It is quite likely that an effort will be made to bring up the Elections bill again.

The silver men are determined to get the Free Coinage bill through, and are expected to enter into a deal of any kind to bring about such a result. Senators Teller and Hoar had a long conference, and it is believed that they came to some agreement by which the Elections bill will be brought up again, with the understanding that it be used as a club to drive the Conference Committee in charge of the Silver bill into making its report.

Will Not Contest Burrows' Seat.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The seat of Julius Cæsar Burrows, of Michigan, Congressman-elect from the Fourth District, will not be contested. George L. Yaple has served formal notice on the Democratic Congressional Committee to discontinue all proceedings, claiming that the allegations of fraud made by over-zealous friends were, upon investigation, found to be without foundation.

Denial by Mr. Blaine.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Secretary Blaine said with reference to the dispatch from Ottawa, which gives from a Canadian source what purports to be the manner in which the proposal for reciprocity negotiations came to be made to the United States, that the statements concerning himself and his action in the matter were utterly without foundation.

Minister Lincoln a Possibility.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—A dispatch from Chicago says that Hon. Robert T. Lincoln's law partner, speaking with reference to the reports that Mr. Lincoln is seriously considered for Secretary of the Treasury, says that he knows Mr. Lincoln would like a position nearer home, but has heard nothing from him on the subject since Mr. Windom's death.

The Conference With the Sioux Chiefs.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The conference of Sioux chiefs with Secretary Noble did not take place to-day, as erroneously reported it would. TERRIFIC EXPLOSION.

One Man Instantly Killed, and Three Make Remarkable Escapes.

WILMINGTON, Pa., Feb. 6.—The boiler of an oil well being drilled on the Hamilton farm exploded at 11:30 a. m., killing Fred Johnston instantly, and scattering his brains and skull several yards around. The engine was torn down and portions of the boiler were thrown 500 feet.

Johnston had been to the boiler, and turned around, when the explosion occurred, cutting off the entire back part of his head. Three men near the hole had remarkable escapes, not receiving any injuries, though only about 15 feet from Johnston. One piece of the boiler weighing two tons was carried 800 feet up over a hill, tearing great, steep furrows in the ground.

The Coke Workers Ready to Make Their Demands for an Advance.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—President Rae, Secretary Watchorn and Organizer McBride, of the United Mine Workers, were in Pittsburg during the day, returning to Columbus from the Scottdale conference.

Mr. Rae said if the coke operators had accepted the proposition to continue work until March 1, under the old scale, the new one would have been arrived at without difficulty.

The men now, Mr. Rae said, had definitely decided to strike for an advance and were well prepared for a lock-out. The men will quit work to-morrow.

Arrested for Killing His Employe.

SOUTHOLD, L. I., Feb. 6.—A sensation has been caused here by the shooting and killing of Carl Collsen by his employer, John D. Young, a wealthy resident. Collsen drove Mrs. Young to the train, but got drunk going home and smashed the buggy in a runaway. According to Young's story he scolded Collsen, and the latter got mad and took up Young's pistol, saying, "—— you, I'll shoot your head off." Young says he seized Carl's hand and in the scuffle the pistol exploded, shooting Carl in the mouth. The coroner's jury found a verdict of murder against Young.

Puffer & Sons' Manufacturing Company, Boston, and Charles Lippincott & Co., of Philadelphia, all of whom are engaged in the manufacture and sale of soda water fountain supplies and apparatus. The capital will be $3,250,000.

Preparing for an Eight-Hour Demand.

LYNN, Mass., Feb. 6.—A conference of all organizations in the building trades will be held soon. The carpenters desire the adjustment of past differences and unity in carrying out the proposed eight-hour movement the coming spring. The leaders say that if a strike is ordered the date of it will be kept secret, so that the employers cannot prepare for it, and the men will go out without giving the bosses a moment's notice.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—The fast mail train West, on the Pennsylvania railroad, ran into a freight train near New Florence, Pa., wrecking the engine, two postal cars and several freight cars. RIOTING IN SPAIN

Mounted Gendarmes Charge on a Crowd in Barcelona.

SEVERAL PERSONS WOUNDED

Serious Trouble in Other Cities Caused by Revolutionary Meetings.

The Ministerial Crisis in Italy—Orders to Insurgents to be Court Martialed on a Man-of-War—An Opinion that it Will Require Force to Annex Canada to the United States.

BARCELONA, Feb. 6.—The revolutionary spirit smouldering throughout Spain nearly burst into flame in this city during the day. There was a peaceful demonstration in which a parade and speeches were the main features, going on in favor of the republican leader, Don Nicholas Salmeron y Alfonso, Zorilla's co-worker in the propagation of republican ideas, and naturally the crowds, which were attracted by the procession, became somewhat excited.

This attitude of the populace seems to have alarmed the officer in charge of a troop of mounted gendarmes, who had been detailed to maintain order, and in case of such an emergency arising to suppress any revolutionary proceedings. In any case, the officer seems to have lost his head and to have ordered the gendarmes to charge the crowd. They did so at a gallop, firing their pistols and carbines right and left.

The result was that several persons were more or less dangerously wounded, and a number of bullets from the gendarmes' weapons were flattened around the balcony and window of the hotel from which Salmeron was speaking. The action of the gendarmes deeply angered the people, but the crowd seems to have dispersed without any act of retaliation.

ANNEXING THE DOMINION.

An Opinion that it Cannot be Done Except by War.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 6.—The Hon. William McDougall, in an interview, opposes unrestricted reciprocity and direct taxation, and indorses Sir John McDonald's trade offer to the United States. He says:

"I regard annexation as unattainable in our day by force, which means war between England and Canada on one side and the United States on the other. I do not expect to witness the catastrophe, nor will you. If annexation, therefore, is out of the question in our time, why should we permit it to obscure the true issue? Why abandon a reasonable, beneficial, and probably the only feasible scheme, to wit, a free interchange of enumerated home productions on both sides?

"In my humble opinion, a reciprocity treaty on the basis of that of 1854, but including a greater range of articles, is the only practicable method of dealing with our neighbors, while Canada remains a British colony."

Aveling Aided Bradlaugh's Seat.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The candidature of Socialist Aveling for Bradlaugh's seat from Northampton arouses much aversion among the Liberal leaders, who wish to preserve the party as much as possible from any appearance of sympathy with Aveling's views. Aveling does not command the respect even of Socialists, who look upon him as inclined to use his ostensible principles for personal gain. However, it is feared that his being in the race at all will detract from, although it may not endanger, the chances of Liberal success.

Court Martial for the Insurgents.

LISBON, Feb. 6.—The government has ordered a court martial, to convene on a warship now lying in the harbor of Oporto, on Monday next, to try the insurgents arrested for participation in the recent revolutionary movement in that city. The civilian Veigh, the insurrectionary chief, has escaped from Oporto, and is thought to have made his way to England.

Canadian Politics from London.

LONDON, Feb. 6.—The Tory papers claim that an election in Canada will compel Secretary Blaine and his Government to show their cards face upward, and will then serve a useful purpose. On nothing is clear, they say, "America will never help Canada to get rid of her commercial embarrassments, unless Canada consents at the same time to surrender her political independence."

STILL DEADLOCKED.

Connecticut's Legislators Fail to Agree and Adjourn Till Tuesday.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 6.—The House of Representatives, after routine business, took up for consideration the amended resolution of the Senate Committee concerning the Committee of Conference.

The resolution reads that a Committee of Conference, consisting of five Senators and five Representatives, be appointed to take in consideration the separate action of the Senate and House of Representatives on the subject of the late election of State officers, and report thereon to their respective Houses.

Mr. Green, of Norwich, chairman of the Committee on Canvass, and a member of the Joint Conference Committee, objected to the word late in the resolution on the Republican position.

Messrs. Root of Waterbury and Healy of Windsor Locks (Dems.) objected to the striking out of the word as it would lead to further delay, but on Mr. Green's assurance that the amendment was understood by the Democratic members of the committee from the Senate their objections were withdrawn. The amended resolution was transmitted to the Senate and the House took a recess until next Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

The amendment, raised a hot debate in the Senate. Several Democrats refused to concur and insisted that the amendment implied a back down on the part of the Senate. At the end of a lively debate the Senate, by a vote of 9 to 5, refused to concur with the House in its amendment and adjourned to Tuesday. This saves off any action by the Conference Committee till that date.

LETTERS NOT FIT TO READ.

They Tell Unsavory Things About Nick Kelly, and Are Sent to His Mother and Sweetheart.

The mother and sweetheart of ex-Policeman Nicholas Kelly have for some time been receiving anonymous letters calling attention, in language unfit for publication, to "Nick's" alleged short comings; and neither the post-office officials nor the police have thus far been able to discover the identity of the offender. Kelly alone is satisfied that he knows who it is, and he is doing some detective work on his own hook which may soon be productive of interesting results.

Annie Leasing, the young woman to whom most of the letters have been sent, is employed as a cook at an East Sixth street residence. She says she has been receiving the unwelcome missives ever since last July, infrequently at times, and then at intervals they would reach her "in a heap," three or four in the course of a week. She had given all but two to a policeman in the hope that he might aid in finding the writer and ending the persecution. They were all vile as vile could be, except the one which she had brought down from her room, and the vileness of some of them flowed over on the outside and was scrawled on the envelope where her name and address were written for the guidance of the letter-carrier. Even these inscriptions on the outside were too indecent to be talked about, she said. She had told "Nick" about them; indeed "Nick" had received some just like them himself. And her employer also knew of their coming, and both "Nick" and her employer had complained both to the police and to Postmaster Pope about them.

But that did not stop them. As late as yesterday, even, the letter-carrier had brought one to the house. She allowed a reporter to see the one she had brought downstairs at his request. It was addressed to "Miss Annil Leasing, East 6th st, plantill N. J.," and read as follows:

ANNIE LEASING:

I see yow a Sonday night at Kelly fore tea and a Monday night i see nicke with a garl at the Salva Army at the reforme hall, and he seat with hear and he went home with hear on Madison Av. i often see him and hear on Mondy nights ore friday nights She has short hare i think she is from new brongswict bot i ame not shore but he aske a garl a few days ago to marry him he is hard up to get married to get a wife to beat again and trit badly i know him fro 12 yearse he went with my Sistor before he was married a tall but she was lactly not to get him for if he had the best woman in the world he wood go with othears i hav bin to bolls and he all ways has a garl with him yow dont know him as well as you think you dow he will lie yow or eny won ele. FROM A FREND.

Annie was asked if she had no suspicion as to where the letters came from. "Well,"—she said warily—"Nick boarded with a widow once, and I guess she thought he intended to marry her."

Annie's mistress had another theory about the letters. "I had no idea that such papers were being delivered at my house,"—she said—"till one of my children took one from the letter-carrier. I was horror-stricken at the vile stuff written on the outside of the envelope. My husband spoke to Postmaster Pope and told him he must stop delivering such things to my house. Afterwards one came addressed to me. It pretended to be from a friend of Kelly's wife."

"He has a wife, then?" the astonished reporter asked.

"Oh, yes, a wife and a child," the lady answered. "Annie has gone into this thing with her eyes open. When Kelly first came here she asked my husband what kind of a man he was and he told her all about him and cautioned her, but it seems to have done no good. I am satisfied who is responsible for those letters."

"You think they may have been prompted by his wife?"

"That's my idea about it. But even a deserted wife has no right to write villainous stuff on the outside of an envelope and send it broadcast through the mails.

"But"—she added—"there was nothing offensive on the outside of the letter addressed to me. But when the one addressed to Annie accidentally fell into my hands my husband spoke to Mr. Pope, and I understood the obnoxiously superscribed ones were to be burned and not delivered here."

Kelly's aged mother was seen at her home on West Fourth street. She said that she, too, had been bombarded with letters, accusing her, an old woman, of being guilty of various vices.

"My son has complained to Postmaster Pope about the letters,"—she said—"and he and Police Captain Grant have tried to find out who was sending them, but so far without avail."

"Is your son a married man?"

"Yes, he's been married twice. One of his wives is in town somewhere. I believe he's been married to her."

"And where's his first wife?"

"Oh, I don't know. She was a cook at the hospital, and she ran away with a man from there eight years ago, and we don't know what's become of her. She may be dead and she may be in Ireland."

"Has your son been divorced from her?"

"No! There are no divorces in the Catholic church. Only death can break the marriage. But she's been gone these many years and without any cause, and he's not bound to her any more, sir."

Postmaster Pope says that he has done all within his power in the matter. He of course has no right to withhold letters from those to whom they are addressed unless the envelopes themselves contain writing that makes them objectionable. All letters, however, bearing filthy or obscene language on the outside are suppressed, as far as is possible. Mr. Pope has called the attention of the Chief Post-Office Inspector to the matter, and that official, aided by the police, is making an investigation and is trying to secure proof to establish beyond a doubt who the reckless offender is. The police feel something of a personal interest in the matter, because till a year past "Nick" Kelley himself wore the brass-buttoned blue uniform. One of the policemen is quoted by a New York reporter who visited Plainfield yesterday to look into the matter at Kelly's request, as saying that Kelly had been rather reckless till Mayor Maxson thought he saw evidence of smartness in him and took him in hand. He put him on the force; but he was off his beat one night. There was a scandal, and Kelly was laid off for two months. A week after he had been restored to duty he disappeared and was gone ten days. When he came back his resignation was demanded. He is now at his work every day—the officer concluded—"and is taking care of himself."

Kelly is at present employed as a mason on the new Coward building. He told a PRESS reporter this morning that he was quite certain as to the identity of the culprit. He knew in just what letter-box the objectionable letters were deposited, and had plans all laid to catch the person in the act. He thought that the letters were written by a child's hand at the dictation of an elder person.

The Coachman Was Not Burned.

Fire last night destroyed the barn of J. C. Paul, Superintendent of Construction and Equipment of the Pullman Palace Car Company, at 259 East Front street. The fire started in a hay mow; the cause is not known. The flames were discovered in time to save the horse, cow, carriages and harness. Wm. Clum ran all the way from Leland avenue a mile into town to get out the engines, and meanwhile Chief Doane saw the reflection of the blaze, and sent in an alarm by telephone. All the apparatus of both city and borough turned out, but the barn was burned to the ground, and the firemen had nothing but ruins to play on. Elwin R. Leland's barn was saved by a bucket brigade formed by the neighbors. During the progress of the fire Mr. Paul's coachman was missing, and the story was started that he was burned to death. He turned up all right later.

Evangelist Mills at Westfield.

The Rev. B. Fay Mills, assisted by Mr. Greenwood, the singer, will begin his evangelistic services in Westfield, Saturday, March, 14, probably holding the first service in the Presbyterian church.

The revival meeting will be preceded by preparatory meetings conducted by Mrs. J. T. Ellis, for about two weeks, and followed by the Rev. A. C. Ottman of Newark, both most excellent workers in the evangelistic field. Every preparation is being made to render the services as efficient as possible. A strong choir has been organized under the direction of John W. Beebe, and will contribute in no small measure to the interest of the meetings. The various committees appointed are all hard at work; and both from a secular point of view and in the more sacred work of preparing the minds of the people for the special efforts of the evangelist, nothing is being left undone that will help on the cause.

Physician, Pastor and Editor, Three of a Kind.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

May doctors advertise? This is the question that is to be tested by law in New York State, an old statute forfeiting their diplomas if they do. It has been pretty well settled that in this country people may do nearly as they choose, provided they do no crime. But it has also been settled, by custom and the medical code, that doctors cannot properly advertise. Here the matter rests, and here it ought to rest. The medical, the ministerial and the editorial professions rest solely on their merits and not on the skill of the doctor, the minister or the editor in advertising himself in any other way than by his good work. So let it rest, for this condition of affairs is what gives so much dignity to these three great professions.

The Plainfield Case a Gratifying Test.

Plainfielders are highly gratified to know that the Koch lymph treatment on a consumptive patient, in this city is progressing admirably, and feel that it is about as just to charge the recent death of some other pulmonary patients to Dr. Koch's lymph as it is to charge all deaths to mistakes of the attending physicians. The Koch lymph is yet an experiment, and nobody knows what its entire effects are. Certain it is that patients have died under the Koch treatment, but they were patients who were so far advanced that there was little or or no hope for them. To judge from the Plainfield case, which is considered an excellent test case, the lymph is an excellent thing to ward off the dread disease in its incipiency.

Funeral of J. G. Cadmus.

Funeral services over the remains of the late Jasper G. Cadmus were held at Force's Hotel this morning. The Rev. C. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Plainfield Methodist Episcopal church, officiated, reading a beautiful service, and offering a most touching prayer. Numerous friends of the deceased attended. The pall-bearers were T. Q. Doane, T. J. Gillies, Jos. A. Hubbard, G. Thorn, L. E. Barkalew, and D. W. Littell, all Exempt Firemen. The remains were interred at Port Richmond, Staten Island.

The McCutcheon Musicale.

As presaged in these columns, the musicale tendered a large circle of friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCutchen, at "Dalnashea," their lovely home on Rockview avenue, last evening, surpassed all like affairs that have been given before in city or borough. No expense was spared in the providing of programme or supper, and the guests were received by the esteemed host and hostess, most cordially.

The star of the evening was Miss Marion Weed, a great favorite of Plainfield's. She sang twice with the Vocal Society last year, and it is rumored that she will sing with the Choral Society in "The Crusaders," on March 5. She is already among the leading contraltos and improving every day. Her singing last evening was exquisite.

Other features of the programme were by the New York Philharmonic Club and its soloists. Two compositions by E. Gillet—"Sounds of the Ball Room," and "The Mill"—were the most enjoyed of the selections by the instrumental sextette. There were solos by Richard Arnold, on the violin; Charles Hemmann, on the cello; and Eugene Werner, on the flute.

Dainty souvenir programmes in white and gold, opened and closed with the following quotations from Shakespeare:

Here will we sit and let the sounds of music
creep in our ears—Merchant of Venice.

Nay—prepare not to be gone; we have a trifling, foolish banquet towards—Romeo and Juliet.

Dr. Ripley's State Road Scheme.

(From The Westfield Leader.)

The same amount of money that is expended annually for repairing and keeping in order (?) the ordinary township road, if paid as interest on the first cost of such roads as those suggested by Dr. Ripley, would give each township in this State a system of roads which would place New Jersey in the fore front of modern civilization, and give her people such facilities for business and for pleasure as would be unequalled anywhere. The effect on the property of the State, and therefore on the prosperity of the people, would be simply incalculable.

Plainfield Crescent League's New Club-House.

OPENING OF THE FAIR.

Friends of the Crescent League Crowd the New Club-House and Patronize its Booths —Everything a Success From Grab Bag to Programme.

There is no doubt that the fair of the Plainfield Crescent League is a success from the start. The large number present, in the new club-house last evening, proved that the efforts of Chairman Charles P. Leggett, assisted by the other members of the fair committee and the ladies in charge of the booths, will be well rewarded for the benefit of the club's furnishing fund.

As usual, though the League has a membership of 135 the whole work was thrown on the shoulders of a few and they certainly deserve unlimited credit and praise for all they have accomplished in spite of the greatest drawbacks. It was not until a day or so ago that the building was far enough completed to be occupied, yet the committee with their friends, the ladies, took hold with energy and in spite of green walls and other disadvantages overcame every discomfort and developed a beautiful fair.

Besides Chairman Leggett, the other members of the committee who have worked so hard and accomplished so much for the League, are: Secretary-Treasurer Clarence E. Teel, Fred S. Green, Aaron V. Kline, J. Barton Kline, G. O. Stevens, H. L. Emerson, E. E. Runyon and C. P. Rogers. But even they could not have succeeded half so well without the faithful assistance and good taste of the Ladies Auxiliary committee consisting of Mrs. F. S. Green, Mrs. F. M. Slater, Mrs. C. P. Leggett and the Misses Emerson, Lewis, Van Winkle, Fritts and Kline.

Those who attended the opening last evening were of course unable to judge how beautiful the League's new home is going to be after it is fully furnished, but they saw that the building was one that is probably unexcelled in many particulars by any in the State. The whole of the lower floor without a post and with a ceiling higher than any other in Plainfield, is to be devoted entirely to the bowling alleys which are to be built, as already told in

A STRANGER AND SHE TOOK HIM IN.

THE PRESS, by Grote, of New York, at a cost of $950 including all appurtenances.

This spacious room has now a temporary floor and is filled with booths. Up stairs in the billiard room is to be found the shooting gallery, parlor billiards and other novel features, while the reading room, smoking room and committee rooms are devoted to the purposes of a cafe. Those who preside over all these departments are:

Fancy Booth—Mrs. Charles P. Leggett, Mrs. Fred. M. Slater, Mrs William See, Mrs. Charles R. Theirs and Miss Woodruff.

Japanese Booth — Miss Kline, Miss King, Mrs Strong, Mrs. George Williams and Miss Minnie Williams.

The "House that Jack built"—Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry.

Candy Booth—Miss Emerson.

Lemonade Well—Miss Grace Lewis.

Flower Booth—Miss Van Winkle.

Dairy—Miss Fritts, Miss Mamie Fritts, Miss Maltby, Miss Crane and Miss Green.

Hot Chocolate and Bouillon — Miss Stevens.

Cafe—Mrs. Fred. Green, Mrs. Seymour Smith and Mrs. J. H. Jackson.

In the shooting gallery Volney Green is kept busy taking in the nickels, while on the floor down stairs there are solicitors for chances in everything from a Tom-Thumb camera to a gold watch. At the Japanese booth tea is served in imported cups that are presented to each patron as a souvenir. In the refreshment room the cuisine is excellent and the menu extensive and varied. The Crescent pharmacy's apparatus dispenses hot soda of all flavors.

Last evening's entertainment was by Elmer Ransom, a most clever prestidigitator. To-night and to-morrow evening there will be an entire change of programme, and there will be Punch and Judy for the children during both afternoons. This evening the Crescent League Quartette, consisting of Geo. O. Stevens, first tenor; M. C. VanArsdale, second tenor; Robert Gorton, first bass; B. T. Barnes, second bass, will sing a number of selections, and possibly Comancho may be out. To-morrow night the New York banjo club will play, and Capt. Joe Lufbery will be presented with the prize bat he won.

A word should be said right here, even though in advance of the completion of the club-house, concerning the labors of the building committee. The scores who will attend the fair are curious, no doubt, concerning who are to be commended for the completeness and spaciousness of the League's new home. The committee are James K. Arnold, Fred. M. Slater and Fred. S. Green. They have been indefatigable in watching and working for the interests of the Club, and the results of their care and efforts are everywhere apparent. B. Fosgate is the architect of the building. W. C. Smith did the mason work, Pearson & Gayle the carpentry, D. W. Littell the plumbing, and George Polhemus, Jr., did the wiring and put in the electric light fixtures in fine shape. The officers of the League are:

President—Charles A. Reed; Vice President—C. C. Burnet; Treasurer—J. K. Arnold; Secretary—Chas. Lyman; Trustees—J. T. Fritts, W. R. Codington, C. C. Burnet, F. M. Slater, C. P. Leggett, J. K. Arnold, F. S. Green, C. VanVliet, H. L. Emerson; House Committee — Messrs. Slater, Arnold and Green, who are also the managers of the base-ball team.

A BIT OF HISTORY.

In March, 1888, ten men met at the home of one of their number, and organized the Plainfield Bowling Club. The original intention was to form a club for the purpose of bowling only. The Crescent League is the outgrowth of this meeting. The Plainfield Bowling Club was merged into the present organization in October, 1889, and the Crescent League was shortly after incorporated. From the original number, ten, the membership has increased to 135.

The Crescent League is now practically a general athletic organization, but special attention is given to bowling and base ball. The Bowling Club met at the Olympia Alleys two nights a week during the Winter months. After the incorporation of the Crescent League a building was rented on Second street, and the same furnished at a considerable expense with bowling alleys and billiard tables. In this building the club received its first set-back.

July 29, 1890, the building and contents were destroyed by fire. The loss was a very severe one to the club. Members had contributed very liberally to furnish the club-house, and this had been accomplished without incurring any debts. The same spirit that had prevailed since the inception of the club was still to be found among the members. And although there was some disagreement as to the best plan to be pursued each one was determined that this loss should not mark a backward step in the history of the Crescent League. After many meetings and much friendly discussion, it was decided to return to the old site. The offer of Mrs. Elizabeth Ulrich was accepted, and the present club-house was erected after plans accepted by the Board of Trustees.

When the building is completed the Crescent League will occupy one of the finest club-houses in the State. There are many that may be larger, and that may have cost much more money, but none that are better suited for the use of an athletic organization, limited in numbers as the Crescent League necessarily must be.

The Board of Trustees have always been conservative, and have tried to have the club conducted in such a manner that no one could object to being a member, who possessed the necessary qualifications. The purpose early decided upon, not to allow gambling or drinking in the club house, or on any premises controlled by it, has been strictly adhered to.

There has always been a harmonious feeling among the club members, and a desire on the part of all to advance the best interests of the organization.

The Crescent League fills a long-felt want in the city of Plainfield, and presents to anyone interested in athletic sports an opportunity of associating himself with a club whose aim it is to advance such sports in this city.

BOWLING.

As bowlers the Crescent League's team have always stood at the top. Last season they finished second in the State Tournament, defeating every team except Elizabeth's. This year they have not lost a match game at home or abroad.

BASE-BALL.

Last year's ball team won 24 games, lost 6, and tied 1. They defeated at one time or another every team they played, including the Metropolitans, Cuba's Giants, Brooklyn L's, Acmes, Hackett's Carharts, etc.

An Overflowed Tank Wrecks Wires Again.

The telegraphic service between this city and New York is now in working order again, and all dispatches are handled rapidly. Towards Philadelphia, however, there was still trouble Wednesday and Thursday. The Western Union Telegraph Company had repaired its pole line along the Bound Brook route after the storm, and it was working well, but at Bound Brook a railroad tank high up in the air, near the top of a telegraph pole, overflowed Tuesday night, ice formed on a pole and the cross-arms, and it went down, throwing all of the wires into the Raritan river. Another pole line along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad was lost the same night, through the falling of one big pole. Workmen were sent promptly to repair the wires, and they are now working again.

It is likely that some towns will still suffer from a defective telegraph service for some time to come, more particularly those which depend upon the pole lines which run along the turnpikes. The difficulty in getting supplies to the ground is the cause of the delay there.

Roller Skating Revived.

[From The Newark Advertiser.]

Roller skating is again becoming popular, and the old lovers of the sport are hunting up their skates. Within the past month rinks have been opened in this city, Morristown, Plainfield and elsewhere. The old professional favorites have started training for racing and fancy skating, and the old managers are beginning to lay out routes. Merchants who were left with a large stock of skates when the craze died out, have dusted off the wheels which, but a short time ago, seemed not to be worth the space occupied. Many of the former enthusiasts have outgrown any desire to shine as roller skaters, but in their places younger brothers and sisters are simply delighted over the prospect of more rinks and more races and more exhibitions by professionals.

Although we have heard persons remark —"It is worth its weight in gold"—still Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is to be had at all drug stores for 25 cents.

FISHING FOR LOONS.

They Dive to Great Depths to Secure the Bait.

A loon's favorite diet is fish, and the great depth to which one of these creatures will dive to capture a fish has been many times proved by set-line fishermen on Lake Keuka. Hundreds of set lines are put out in the lake in the spring and fall. If there are many loons on the lake at such times the fishermen expect to be bothered more or less by them as they are inveterate purloiners of set-line bait—live and dead minnows and shiners—by diving to the bottom and clearing off the bait by the score. It frequently happens that in doing this a loon will swallow hook and all, and unless he can break the anchorage or fastening of the set line on the bottom, that loon will have to drown. When the fisherman takes in his lines he will haul up the dead loon.

A fisherman of Keuka hauled up a set line the other morning from a depth of seventy feet, and fast to one of his hooks was a dead loon. That is the deepest a loon was ever known to dive in Lake Keuka, although they have often been taken on set lines at a depth of forty and fifty feet. A Hammondsport fisherman had a set line planted in the inlet of the lake at this place. He went over it early one morning last week, just after, as it had happened two loons had gone down to the bottom, and attacked the bait fish on the line. Both birds had hooked themselves. When they were drawn to the surface they were still in good wind. As he hauled them in the loons angrily resented their capture, and made a combined attack on the fishermen. He tried to overpower the fierce divers but they were too much for him, and routed him completely. In the melee they broke the snoods or short lines that held them to the set line, and flew away with them dangling from their mouths —N. Y. Sun.

HOW HE DRUMS.

A New Theory Concerning the Noise Made by the Grouse.

Mr. W. H. Gibson says: In the so called "drumming" of the ruffed grouse, that soft murmurous tatoo by which his ardent lordship musters his little company of willing captives, we have another familiar sound as yet as much wrapped in mystery as the "boom" of the night-hawk.

What is the origin and nature of that "drum" which has so long puzzled the world?

Many naturalists have definitely located this mysterious drum; the hollow "drumming log" having long been considered a necessary adjunct to this muffled roll. Such has been the most commonly-accepted theory, seemingly abetted by the bird itself, from its singular preference for a fallen log as the seat of the musical performance. Brewer claims that the bird "beats its sides and the log" simultaneously; a belief which is shared by Samuels and many others. Against this I would oppose the witness of an unprofessional but close observer—the writer, in truth —who deposes and says that the bird does nothing of the kind; that in the one instance, though brief, when its movements were observed by him, the clearly-defined limit of the visible whirr of the wings seen from behind demonstrated that no feather of the bird's wing touched the body, or the log upon which the bird stood; while, upon the other hand, the feathery halo almost merged over the back, suggesting a new possibility in the resonant source.—Harper's Monthly.

ANNOYED BY A NICKNAME.

The Late Senator Cox's Dislike for His Sobriquet.

"On one occasion," said Senator Voorhees the other day, "Mr. Cox was paying a flying visit to the scenes of his boyhood in Ohio, and attended church on Sunday. The pastor took for his text, 'As a servant desireth the shadow.' The preacher began by saying he had seen a picture illustrating the text, which represented a slave looking toward the West, waiting for the end of the day's work. I was entitled, 'Longing for Sunset.' The preacher dwelt upon the worthies of both Testaments. He pictured Jacob longing for Joseph and old Simeon's desire to go as soon as his eyes were made glad. He hinged his discourse entirely upon the word 'sunset.' Mr. Cox became nervous and annoyed; he toyed and fidgeted with his prayer-book, and shifted about in his seat until the minister in a burst of eloquence said: 'When the river is passed, the dark swollen floods surmounted and Heaven attained, there will be unshadowed joy, for there will be no 'sunset' in Heaven.' Then he closed his book, and Mr. Cox, with a stately and dignified tread, went out into the clear morning air.—Chicago Evening Journal.

The Johannesburg Cemetery.

Mr. Walter Besant once wrote a pathetic description of the churchyard at Bournemouth, where so many young folks are buried, but the following note from Johannesburg tells a still more pathetic tale: "One of the saddest sights in the world is the cemetery at Johannesburg. It is a heart-breaking place. A piece of raw veldt on the slope of a hill above the town has been inclosed, and this is the last resting-place of between twelve and fourteen hundred people, the larger portion of whom are young fellows between nineteen and thirty, who rushed up here convinced that a few months would see them rich for life. Most of the graves are nameless, but all are numbered. Just beyond the cemetery is a glittering mountain. When the sun shines on it it sparkles with a thousand prismatic colors and looks like the entrance to the palace of diamonds, where the fairy Florizella lives; but in reality it is merely the place to which all the rubbish of Johannesburg is carted, and, as apparently half the food of the town comes out of tins, the result is a meretricious splendor quite in keeping with the other attractions of 'Goldopolis.'"—London Daily News.

Excellent Showing of the Jersey Central.

The annual report of the Central New Jersey Railroad Company makes an excellent showing, in spite of the fact that coal traffic yielded a decreased revenue to the company. The surplus of $1,390,000, after payment of full 6 per cent dividends, is, however, increased by the inclusion in the income account of $322,000 premiums on securities sold. At the same time the company has wisely expended considerable money in increasing its equipment and facilities for handling other classes of business than anthracite coal.

LOVERS FIGHT A DUEL.

Savage Conflict With Whips and the Belligerents Badly Damaged.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Feb. 6.—A fight with long whips, each fighter standing in his own buggy, is furnishing some spicy gossip for the society of Sharpsburg. The parties to the fight were George Fairman and Samuel Maxwell, who are rivals in love and who belong to the upper crust.

On Wednesday night Fairman started to Sharpsburg in a buggy to see his sweetheart. On the same evening Maxwell was driving into the country to see a friend.

They met on the way. Maxwell grabbed his whip from the socket, stood erect in his buggy, and with all his force brought the lash down on Fairman's head. Fairman returned the blow with a similar one.

The cracker on the whip reached around Maxwell's head, wrapped itself over his face and cut the skin from his eye to the ear. Again the whips were raised and brought down, with as much force and more telling effect. At this stage of the battle, one of the horses became frightened and gave a jump.

The wheels of the buggies locked and a moment later the two rivals were lying about a yard apart in the middle of the roadway. The horses were out of sight. The buggies were wrecked, but honor had been satisfied, and the men walked to Sharpsburg together.

THE STRANGER ON THE SILL.

Between broad fields of wheat and corn
Is the lowly home where I was born—
The peach-tree leans against the wall,
And the woodbine wanders over all;
There is the shaded door-way still,
But a stranger's foot has crossed the sill!

There is the barn—and, as of yore,
I can smell the hay from the open door,
And see the busy swallows throng,
And hear the pewee's mournful song;
But the stranger comes—O, painful proof!
His sheaves are piled to the heated roof.

There is the orchard—the very trees
Where my childhood knew long hours of ease,
And watched the shadowy moments run
Till my life imbibed more shade than sun;
The swing from the bough still sweeps the air,
But the stranger's children are swinging there!

There bubbles the shady spring below,
With its bulrush brook where the hazels grow;
'Twas there I found the calamus root,
Watched the minnows poise and shoot,
And heard the robin lave its wing,
But the stranger's sbucket is at the spring.

O ye who daily cross the sill,
Step lightly, for I love it still;
And when you crowd the old barn eaves,
Then think what countless harvest sheaves
Have passed within that scented door
To gladden eyes that are no more.

Deal kindly with these orchard trees,
And when your children crowd their knees,
Their sweetest fruit they shall impart,
As if old memories stirred their heart.
To youthful sport still leave the swing,
And in sweet reverence hold the spring!

The barn, the trees, the brook, the birds,
The meadows with their lowing herds,
The woodbine on the cottage wall—
My heart still lingers with them all.
Ye strangers on my native sill,
Step lightly, for I love it still!

JOE DUBUQUE'S ESCAPE.

Aided by a Woman He Easily Eluded the Officers.

Once upon a time Joe Dubuque was held in jail. Dubuque was a daring robber whose line was picking pockets. He ranked high in his profession and was looked up to and had high reverence from other members of the "family." His incarceration brought shoals of his dark and devious friends around. He was charged with a robbery of considerable moment—$11,000—and this and his standing as a thief were such as to insure him a long term if convicted. Money was wasted like water in his defense. The best legal talent was brought to his succor. A great trial took place, some great lies were told, and the affair was conducted with all the accessories of a high-priced legal tableau.

"If," said Prosecutor DeWolf, "the honest men of a community would come to each other's assistance when beset with half the heart these outlaws betray business disaster would become obsolete as a phrase, finding no basis." But Dubuque was convicted and sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. Those industrious and sanguine vandals, however, who had stood by him through all still held their hopes high. It was a long road yet to the penitentiary. Many things might happen. The case was on error to the Supreme Court. This would give them three months yet, as Dubuque was to be detained in jail until final decision. Why did they not go the prisoner's bond? Because it was fixed at $25,000, and no man with real estate could be procured unless he was barricaded from harm with a deposit of the full amount and a thousand or two extra for the trouble. Thieves are very good business men. It was resolved to have Dubuque out even if it took the $27,000, but other methods would be tried first.

"It would be a sight cheaper," said the renowned Mollie Matches, "if we could break Joe out."

There was a woman who passed for Dubuque's wife. She was very pretty and very brave and went to see Dubuque every day.

"I will cling to you, Joe, until the penitentiary doors pinch my fingers," she said, and all who have ever seen this sort of woman with this sort of man know she told the truth. They have the dog's heart and are faithful through all.

Dubuque was a good prisoner and behaved well. The officers liked him, and he was granted many liberties. They watched him narrowly, however, and when he took his exercises each day his cell was searched. The sheriff felt that some effort would be made to liberate his captive. He knew that dozens of daring and ingenious men were on the outside with no present purpose but to set Dubuque free. He knew that money was no object because he had been slyly offered several thousand to turn Dubuque into the street. He laughed at the offer, which came to him through an ex-detective, but it helped him to realize the outlaws' anxiety for Dubuque.

"We'll try every other plan," said Matches, "and if they fail we'll put up the ball money and take him out that way."

Meanwhile dark and hidden preparations were afloat to release Dubuque by the rather extraordinary method of breaking into the jail. There was no effort to supply Dubuque with tools or weapons, as he knew his cell was daily ransacked and so informed them. So the outside scheme was evolved and set in execution.

The sheriff, however, became vaguely impressed with a sense of danger. One day he secretly resolved to take Dubuque to the penitentiary to await the high court's finding. He did not even tell his deputies or turnkeys. He would start the next afternoon at two o'clock. When Dubuque's pretty wife came that day to see him—the day before the proposed start for the State's prison—the sheriff, who was kindly and felt some degree of sympathy for the faithful creature, asked her whether she meant to visit Dubuque the next day.

"Certainly," she said.

The officer reflected a moment, while the girl watched him, keen as a cat. The sheriff should never have spoken to her at all. She knew in an instant some move was afoot. At last he said:

"Come as early as 11:45 and take dinner with Joe. I'm going to give him a good dinner to-morrow."

"Very well, I'll come," said the girl, and went in to Dubuque and straightway told the whole conversation.

"Wants you to be here to dinner," said Dubuque, reflectively. "You generally come at three in the afternoon."

Then the rascal knitted his brows and thought hard while the girl waited.

"This sheriff is onto something," said Dubuque at last, "and is going to make me safe somewhere. Let me look at this paper a minute," and he picked up one of the several with which his cell was furnished.

"That's it," he said, after a moment's reading. "He's planning to take me to the pen. The train starts at two p. m."

"I think so, too," said the girl. "Now what will we do? Shall I notify Matches and the men?"

"No," said Dubuque. "I'll tell you how we'll fix this. I have never attempted any thing, so far, and just let the boys work, but I've been thinking all the time and I've got a plan that I believe will work. I know a way out of this jail and a place to hide within fifty yards of it. That is, I think I do; it won't cost much to test it anyhow."

Here the cateran went on and told the girl his plans. They were very simple and were to be acted upon at once. That afternoon she made a second visit to Dubuque and gave him a thin cloth cap without being detected, and also a round bar of india-rubber about a foot long and an inch and a half in diameter.

"I could knock a cow down with that," said Dubuque, "and never leave a mark. It's better than a sand-bag."

The girl also proffered him a pistol.

"Kill them, Joe, if they try to stop you!" And her eyes lighted with anticipated slaughter, like a cat's.

"No," said Dubuque, drawing back. "I don't mind a tap or two with a billy or a sand-bag, but I won't murder. I never killed a man, and I never will. I'll keep that sin off my hands."

The girl went away. At 4:30 that afternoon the turnkey came with supper. Ordinarily he did not open the cell door, but passed the food through a little window. When he came to Dubuque's door the prisoner was seated at his little table, apparently drawing on a paper.

"What's that, Dubuque—a plan of the jail?" he asked.

"No, sir."

"Pass it out and let me see it."

But Dubuque sat down on the edge of his bunk with a sullen air, and folding his arms, said never a word.

"Well, then," said the turnkey, "I'll come and get it," and he began to unlock the door.

Dubuque never moved. The turnkey entered and started for the table. Just as he passed the captive a swift blow fell on his head and he sank to the floor. It was the rubber billy. A prisoner in the next cell heard the noise and at once divined the trouble going on. Like a good fellow, he at once began to howl "Rock of Ages" at the top of his voice to cover Dubuque's work.

"That song will be worth money and friends to him when I am out," thought Dubuque, as he bound and gagged the smitten turnkey. Then he put on the man's hat and coat, and taking his keys stepped out and locked the door. The senseless turnkey was locked in. Dubuque went at once to the cage at the door, and, unlocking it, let himself in and locked the door behind. Then he rapped three times with his key on the outer wicket, which was the turnkey's sign to the doorkeeper to unlock and let him out. Dubuque expected to pass undetected. The turnkey's hat was a big slouch, which, as he kept his face half turned from the guard at the door, protected his features from view. There were several offices to go through after this, but Dubuque was hopeful he might manage it. It was growing dark at the close of a winter afternoon. This would help.

But just as Dubuque rapped at the outer door to get out an unforeseen thing happened. The vocalist was still bawling "Rock of Ages" and waiting for his supper, when "Bang!" came the report of a pistol inside the jail. It was the turnkey, who, though tightly bound and gagged, on recovering his wits had managed to fire his pistol without taking it from his belt.

"I should have taken away his revolver," reflected Dubuque hastily as he heard the noise. But he was equal to the occasion. In an instant he turned back and began unlocking the inner door again which led to the cells. The outside guard was tearing open the outer door, while half a dozen deputies, already arrived, were waiting to get in. Dubuque got his door open at the same time the outer door swung wide. In an instant the mob of deputies rushed inside to the cells without regarding Dubuque. This alert yet thoughtful individual waited until all were in, closed and locked the door, and then started through the just deserted office to the world beyond. In the last door he met the sheriff, who was to banquet him the next day. He did not recognize Dubuque, and asked hastily what was the trouble in the jail. For reply Dubuque smote his would-be entertainer to the floor with his rubber billy. Then he ran into the open air.

He knew pursuit would be hot on his heels in less than five minutes. Ten rods from the jail he turned up a stairway to a lawyer's office. In the stairway he changed to the cloth cap, hiding the big slouch of the turnkey in a coal-box which stood in the hall.

"Is Mr. Jameson in?" he asked, as he came into the office.

"No," said the clerk, a very young man; "Mr. Jameson went out on Woodland avenue with a lady to see a man who was sick and who wanted to employ him in the Joe Dubuque case."

"I'll wait awhile," said Dubuque, and, taking a chair, he sat looking out the window at the darkening street. He had sent his girl to take this lawyer away from his office so that he might use it to hide in. The lawyer knew him by sight, so it would not do to have him there.

"That's what I call one way to employ a lawyer," said Matches, when he heard of it.

While Dubuque waited in the lawyer's office pursuit ran up and down the sidewalk beneath its windows. The pursued took a thoughtful pleasure in watching it. At last a detective who was called in got one of the customary clews and led the entire chase to a distant part of the city. Dubuque was safe.

"I never feel absolutely removed from danger," said Dubuque, "until a detective is chasing me. Then I know I'm safe."

While Dubuque sat by the window a carriage drove up and stopped across the street. Dubuque lighted a cigar the clerk gave him to comfort him while waiting and watched the carriage narrowly. He must make no mistake. Presently a little hand holding a white handkerchief was placed in the opening in the door. It was Dubuque's carriage. But he smoked on and was in no hurry. Let it get a little darker. The carriage waited and Dubuque waited. At last it was quite dark.

"I will see Mr. Jameson later," said Dubuque to the clerk. "Or tell him I'll write to him."

Then he went across to the carriage. The door was opened and he stepped in. The pretty girl was waiting.

"Through thick and thin," he said, as he took her in his arms and kissed her. As they passed the jail, a few feet further on, Dubuque waved an adieu as he looked out from the dark carriage. "I must look after that 'Rock of Ages' man," he thought. Then he kissed the pretty girl again. Joe Dubuque had escaped.—Kansas City Star.

Got Pay for the Ham.

The proprietor of a large provision store made a credit sale of a fine ham to one of his customers, but much to his surprise he found out a little later that he had forgotten to whom he sold it and had failed to make any note of it. This bothered him somewhat until a happy thought struck him. He cudgeled the gray matter in his brain and recalled the names of thirteen men who had happened to be in the store at the time the transaction took place, though for the life of him he could not think who had gone off with that piece of swine. But nothing daunted he went back and told his book-keeper to charge up one ham to each of those thirteen different accounts, telling him at the same time that when twelve of the men objected to paying for it to explain to them that it was a mistake that would not occur again. What happened? Why, twelve of that party paid their bills without a question and only one raised any objection on account of the pork item. So at least eleven, and very likely all twelve, had paid for something they had not bought and that some one else had disposed of. Steer clear of bills.—Washington Star.

He Temporizes.

Mrs. Gayboy (severely)—What time did you get home last night?

Gayboy (cautiously)—Oh, a little after dark.

Mrs. Gayboy—After dark! Why it was daylight when you came in!

Gayboy—Well, isn't that after dark?—West Shore.

Banks—Eve, I fancy. But still she didn't do it till after the fall.—N. Y. Herald.

SUBTERRANEAN FIRES.

The Terrors of a Volcanic Eruption Graphically Described.

Some idea of the terror of volcanoes may be gathered from an account of an eruption in one of the Hawaiian islands, when the crater was filled from five hundred to six hundred feet deep with molten lava, the immense weight of which broke through a subterranean passage of twenty-seven miles and reached the sea, forty miles distant, in two days, flowing for three weeks and heating the water twenty miles distant.

Rocks melted like wax in its path; forests crackled and blazed before its fervent heat; the works of man were to it but as a scroll in the flames.

Imagine Niagara's stream, above the brink of the falls, with its dashing, whirling, madly raging waters, hurrying on to their plunge, instantaneously converted into fire—a gory-hued river of fused minerals; volumes of hissing steam arising; smoke curling upward from ten thousand vents, which give utterance to many deep-toned mutterings and sullen, confined clamorings; gases detonating and shrieking as they burst from their hot prison-house; the heavens lurid with flames; the atmosphere dark and oppressive; the horizon murky with vapors and gleaming with the reflected contest.

Such was the scene as the fiery cataract, leaping a precipice of fifty feet, poured its flood upon the ocean. The old line of coast, a mass of compact, indurated lava, whitened, cracked and fell. The waters recoiled and sent forth a tempest of spray; they foamed and lashed around and over the melted rock, they boiled with white heat, and the roar of the conflicting agencies grew fiercer and louder. The reports of the exploding gases were distinctly heard twenty-five miles distant, and were likened to a whole broadside of heavy artillery. Streaks of the intensest light glanced like lightning in all directions; the outskirts of the burning lava as it fell, cooled by the shock, were shivered into millions of fragments and scattered by the strong wind in sparkling showers far into the country. Six weeks later at the base of the hills the water continued scalding hot and sent forth clouds of steam at every wash of the waves.—London Budget.

THE AFFABLE WOMAN.

She Is Not Afraid of Losing Her Dignity by Trying to Brighten the World.

If women could ever learn that it is quite possible to combine affability with dignity in commonplace daily intercourse with their fellow-creatures, this would be a far brighter and more agreeable world. Nine-tenths of the gentlewomen one knows would no more address an uninstructed female than bite off a bit of their own tongues. Not once in a blue moon do they dare converse with their servants, the clerk behind the counter, the chance companion of a railway journey, or even the lady who has dropped in to call on a mutual friend. Awkwardness and timidity, with a sense of alleged well-bred reserve seal their lips to every form of communication. In their shyness and stupid fear of furnishing an opportunity for undue familiarity, they go through life like oysters, as far as those outside their narrow circle are concerned. But thank Heaven! there is a woman, and her tribe is increasing, who realizes all of the beautiful opportunities and rights the gift of speech gives her. She can afford to talk to her domestics about any and every thing, and cement their affectionate respect with every word uttered. Her kindly recognition of the shop girl and fragment of pleasant gossip across the yard stick is a wholesome break in the clerk's dull day. To sit beside a respectable female for an hour's train travel, and not exchange greeting as two human beings touching in their journey of life, would confound her kindly nature. She is sure of her dignity and, strong in its integrity, affords to do what possibly a less fine-grained nature shrinks to essay. Her friendly, well chosen words are as far removed from volubility as her cordial manners are from gush. Recognizing the power of speech as the most potent of spells for removing dull, unlovely discontent, embarrassment, and loneliness, she is free with worthy thoughts graciously expressed. It is noticeable that such women never leave drawing-room, kitchen, shop or coach that every other creature of her kind present does not acknowledge to herself the supreme excellence of courtesy above all other feminine charms.—Illustrated American.

—Hicks—"How do you like your new neighbors, the Woolseys?" Mrs. Hicks—"She seems a kindly soul; but she has no taste about her dress." Hicks—"What did you find to criticise?" Mrs. Hicks—"The idea of a woman appearing in a coffee-colored tea gown!"—Harper's Bazar.

An Unequal Struggle.

Grocer—Come on, now. I expect you to pay this bill without further comment. The bill is all right and if you don't pay it I'll bring suit.

Spongecake—Go ahead and sue then, I'll get the best of you.

Grocer—Well, if you get the best of me, you'll be the first who ever did.

Spongecake (remembering the quality of certain goods sent to him)—I guess you're right there.—America.

—"You say a dealer in amateur photographers' goods has failed. I don't believe it. The profits are immense. How did it happen?" "He was an amateur photographer himself."—Chicago Tribune.

The Exclusion Was Limited.

Mrs. Larkin (horrified)—Why, my dear, you mustn't read that book. Don't you know it has been excluded from the mails?

Miss Larkin—That's all right, ma. A female has got it now.—Jury.

Strong Attachments.

"It's strange," remarked the tramp, examining the rents in his garments, "I never felt any liking for dogs whatever, yet they nearly all become strongly attached to me as soon as they see me."—Boston Herald.

FOOD FOR SHARKS

Yellow Fever Victims Inhumanly Treated.

SHUT UP IN THE HOLD OF A SHIP.

No Medical Attendance Allowed—A Body Floating About the Harbor for Three Days—Nine Men Recover Sufficiently to Sail Away and Tell the Story—Cruel Treatment of Sailors.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Three men sick with yellow fever, shut up in the hold of a vessel and left to die, their bodies afterwards being thrown overboard. Another unfortunate sick with the same malady, and left out of doors for two days, when he dies, and his body is thrown into the harbor of Barbadoes to become food for sharks.

These are the sickening details brought from Barbadoes by the passengers on the steamer Advance, which has just arrived from Rio Janeiro and intermediate points.

It is the custom of the authorities of Barbadoes to declare a quarantine against her neighbors on the slightest pretext, and to afford no medical treatment to any person who is stricken down with yellow fever at that place.

The German bark Mozart arrived at Carlise Bay about Jan 1 from Rio. She had yellow fever on board, all hands and the officers being sick. The bark was at once quarantined, and no persons, not even physicians, were allowed to go near her.

Three of the men died. The captain of the bark wished to take them ashore for burial, but the Barbadoes authorities refused this, and the bodies had to be thrown overboard.

After weeks of suffering the remaining nine men recovered sufficiently to handle the vessel, and they sailed away without having once set foot on ashore, or having intercourse, save by signals, with the authorities.

The second case occurred early in January. A seaman named Chrishausen, who had been sick in the hospital at St. Thomas, became well enough to travel, and was sent to Barbadoes on the Royal Mail steamer Esk by the British Consul.

During the voyage he fell ill of yellow fever. On his arrival there he was transferred, along with three other sick men, to a lighter anchored in the harbor. The four unfortunates were left alone on the deck of the lighter to take care of themselves. At the end of two days Christiausen died. The health officers visited the vessel when they saw the signal that the survivors hoisted, showing that some one had died.
